OHIO NURSERYMEN

Will Hold Their Eighth Annual Convention at Columbus

The eighth annual convention of the Ohio Nurserymen's Association will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, January 12 and 13 at Columbus. On January 12 the nurserymen will hold a joint session with the Ohio State Horticultural Society in Grange Hall on the state fair grounds. Following is the program of the meetings:

Tuesday, Jan. 12, 9:30 a. m.

"Ohio Nurseries, Illustrated," N. E. Shaw; "Fall and Spring Planting," W. N. Scariff, Columbus; "Replacing Nursery Stock," A. R. Picket, Clyde; "The Best Way to Purchase Nursery Stock," T. B. Wire, Perry; "Good Will Between Nurserymen and Fruit Growers," H. S. Day, Fremont.

January 13, 9:30 a. m.

President's Address, W. N. Scarff; Report of Secretary, W. B. Cole, Painesville; Report of Treasurer, A. R. Pickett; Report on Nursery and Orchard Inspection, N. E. Shaw; "The Effect of the European War on Nursery Stock Importations," A. R. Dinsmore; "Are the Present Parcel Post Rates and Rules on Nursery Stock Satisfactory?" H. S. Day; "Is the Planting of Cherry Trees about to be Overdone?" A. R. Pickett; "Is it Best to Cellar Some Kinds of Nursery Stock Heeled in Sand, rather than Stacked?" Fletcher Bohlender; "Up-to-date Construction of Storage Cellars," T. B. West, Perry; "Spraying for Defoliation," Robert George, Painesville.

W. B. Cole of Painesville is secretary of the association and Robert George of Painesville and T. B. West of Perry are members of the executive committee.

Was it Accidental?

That the killing of Walter Smith by the Canadian militia at Fort Erie was hardly an "accidental shooting" is the opinion of Wm. J. Dale, superintendent of the Richmond Elevator.

Supt. Dale has just returned from an eastern trip and visited the spot where the shooting took place. While it is true that the Americans were violators of the game laws there was nothing about their offense which called for shooting on the part of the soldiers. The current was swift at the point where the Americans were and they could not land, and when they tried to get out of range they were shot, one fatally and the other possibly so. The bullets may have been fired low and glanced up from the ice but after visiting the place and conversing with those who knew of the affair Mr. Dale does not agree with the coroner's verdict of "accidental shooting."

Teachers Favor New Code.

The Ohio State Teachers' Association, which met at Columbus last week adopted resolutions favoring the new Ohio school code, retention of agricultural instruction in public schools, a statewide pension system for teachers. More revenues for schools and education was favored.

Superintendent John Davidson of the Lima schools, was one of those who spoke in favor of greater revenues for school purposes. He recited the financial stringencies that have been felt by boards of education over the state and advocated the restoration of the one mill levy for public school purposes. He declared this would give the school districts the advantage of increased tax duplicates and would supply sufficient funds to operate the schools as they had been maintained.

Think This Over.

When a newspaper gives you a lot of free advertising in order to boom some concert or entertainment in which you are interested, keep track of the lines that are printed week by week and multiply that number by the regular advertising rates of the paper. Compare the results with the actual money value of any favor that you get from any other business concern. Then take into consideration the fact that advertising and circulation are the only two things that a newspaper has to sell. Now, in these days of higher prices, how much do you think it ought to give away?

Retained in Gas Case.

Harry E. Hammar of Painesville has been retained by the city of Ashtabula to assist the city solicitor in the gas light which Ashtabula is waging against the Ashtabula Gas Co. Attorney Hammar was in Columbus last week arranging for the hearing which will be before the public utilities commission.

Painesville needs a few official fathers and mothers to look after the needs of children whose parents are without visible means of support. Every day we see children on the streets who should be in school. A certain number of these are truants, but many are there because their parents do not care whether they go to school or not. Painesville needs a few men and women who will look after these children.

Fund Doubles in 20 Years.

Twenty years ago Mary A. Warner of Painesville left to the city of Cleveland the sum of $5,000 for an art gallery. The fund now amounts to $11,500.

City officials have now decided to use the interest each year in purchasing pictures for the new city hall, and an annual art exhibit at the city hall is also being planned. It was held that it would be unwise to spend the entire sum and the council committee voted against using any of the money for the art museum at Wade Park.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Austin of Willoughby have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel M. Austin, to Rev. Herbert R. Whiting, formerly of Cincinnati, now pastor of Shaffer Memorial church in Cleveland.

BOY BURNS RESIDENCE.

Then Goes to Sleep in Jail—Officer Nabs Him.

According to his own confession, Joseph Morrison set fire to the summer home of Mrs. F. M. Osborn at Mentor Plains last Wednesday night and after the $10,000 home and its $5,000 worth of contents had been reduced to ashes he made his way to the Willoughby lock-up where Deputy Sheriff James Maloney found him sleeping peacefully among the tramps.

Young Morrison, who is only 18, is said to have made a full confession to county officials and the state fire marshal, and he entered a plea of guilty when arranged before Justice Willis who bound him over to the common pleas court in the sum of $2,000.

Morrison had been employed on the Osborn farm on two different occasions and was discharged both times. He swore to be revenged and confessed that he purchased a revolver and fifty cartridges with the intention of killing Michael Osborne who had remonstrated with him for using profane language in the presence of Osborne's mother. Failing to get a chance at Osborn, Morrison went to the summer home, broke a window, lighted an inflammable ball made of his handkerchief and a piece of paper and, reaching through the window set fire to a mattress. Morrison says he waited around until the blaze got a good start and when he was sure that the building would be destroyed he made his way to the Willoughby jail where he had been given lodging on several occasions.

The New Calendars.

We like the new year calendars, their pages are so clean; with figures placed in tidy rows beneath a pictured scene. We look ahead twelve golden months; so long a time it seems to make good all our promises and realize our dreams. We gain fresh courage from the sight of all those days long score; and, as we make our future plans, our spirits gaily soar. Twelve manthal Three-hundred-sixty-five alluring shining days! We're glad for such a chance to mend the error of our ways. And oh we're glad to be alive, and glad the time is here when calendars are right in style and brand new ones appear. Full twy score hang about our desk, with pages neat and clean, but pen and pencil still refuse to write the date "fifteen".

Bound to Look Up.

There's a man in Painesville who is a conductor by occupation and who answers to the nickname of "Dad," and he certainly is some little pessimist. When someone remarked in his course of a conversation that "business is looking up," "Dad" shifted his chew over onto the port side and replied, "Now you're talking sense. Of course business is looking up—it's flat on its back and can't look any other way!"

Can't Marry in Geauga.

Just because Harlan Sperry, Geauga county's new probate judge, has failed to receive his commission, he declines to issue marriage licenses. As a consequence several weddings have been postponed and a whole lot of perfectly good food prepared for the wedding feasts has been placed in cold storage.

New Firm at Madison.

D. H. Behm has purchased the hardware and implement business at Madison which has been conducted by W. W. Waters for a number of years. Mr. Behm has been employed in the store for the past four years and plans to add several new lines to the already large stock. Mr. Waters will devote his time to the insurance business.

Cat Bite Causess Illnes s.

Mrs. Matilda Malone of Liberty St. has been confined to her bed for several days as the result of being bitten by a cat. One arm is badly swollen and she is out of her head temporarily. Mrs. Malone's husband died two years ago.

About People and Places

Perry will vote on road bonds Jan. 20th.

Claud Pitkin, 23, Chardon, marries Pearl Chaffee, 20, Cleveland.

Log Cabin Association will meet Saturday at the Court House.

Annual sale of lands for delinquent taxes occurs Tuesday, Feb. 9th.

Ten inch ice of good quality has been harvested by local dealers.

Mayor William Corlett of Madison had business at the court house Tuesday.

Elmer G. Janes, '85, former resident of Madison, died in Cleveland last week.

William J. Story, well known lake captain, retires to go into business at Ashtabula.

Mrs. Clarissa Paine, whose girlhood was spent in Painesville, is dead at Milwaukee.

City Board of Examiners will hold examinations Saturday at the high school building.

Dr. A. P. Brady is still confined to the house, his condition remaining about the same.

Commissioners paid many bills at their meeting Monday but transacted little other business.

Ray McGwinn, Richmond, had his face badly lacerated in a runaway accident last week.

Chief Collins of the New York Central detective force was in the city recently on official business.

According to Fred Pyle's reasoning improvements in the abstract are preferable to those in the concrete.

The county commissioners are in Columbus this week attending the state meeting of their organization.

Fred Beebe and Miss Mabel Pier were united in marriage on January 1, by Rev. Jackson of the Church of Christ.

All together now! Everybody with a New Year's resolution still alive stand up. (Gee, what a skinny crowd.)

William L. Miller, 32, died in Cleveland Dec. 29 and funeral services were held in Painesville, Friday.

City council will meet again next Monday evening at which time the matter of increasing the water rates will be discussed.

Albert Thompson, Marion avenue resident, suffered a fainting spell Monday while driving and was taken to the hospital.

If proposition to pave Perry carries, Painesville township officials will try and arrange with commissioners for improved road east.

That long, sad procession you see, headed by the Hearse of Hope, is the defunct New Year's resolutions on their way to peaceful oblivion.

Most of the Painesville boys have shaved "em" off, but there are still a few of those cute little crepe de chens mustaches on exhibition.

James L. Ames and Mrs. Jean Downing, both of Madison, were united in marriage by Justice E. G. Huntington Monday afternoon.

John W. Tyler, Lake county prosecutor in 1876, was struck by a taxicab in Cleveland on New Year's eve and died in a hospital a few hours later.

Russell Champion, young son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Champion of Perry is seriously ill with tetanus, the result of an injury received last summer.

John Francis Donahne and Carrie A. VanDyke, both of Madison, were married at the Baptist parsonage Monday afternoon by Rev. M. W. Foshey.

Dr. Z. O. Sherwood, who has many relatives in Painesville and Madison, has just resigned as coroner of Ashtabula county, a position to which he was elected last November.

Miss Mary Mills of the Andrews Institute, spent the holiday vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Mills. Miss Edith Tod of the Institute was her guest over New Years.

Sam Murphy announces that red lights for police signalling have been placed near the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate depots. The police cars do not yet have the new lights but they will be equipped with red lights in those districts early in the new year.

THE TATTLER SAYS:

A western Food Sharp claims that a Minister, to preach the best Sermons, should eat raw Onions. I have never listened to the preaching of a Minister who has been trained on Onions, but something tells me to have a Cold the morning he officiates. The old fashioned Chicken Fed preacher is good enough for Me.

Twenty thousand dollar fox trot pavilion to be constructed at Geneva-on-the-Lake by Cleveland dancing master.

Bootlegging is getting to be an unprofitable business. During the past week Tom Donahue, Tom Lynch and John Elliott have been found guilty of selling liquor without a license and fined $200 and costs each.

The Perry township farmer who has five barrels of sweet cider in his cellar, 20 hams and shoulders in his smokehouse, 60 bushels of potatoes in his bins and a big store of Baldwin apples by way of dessert, believes all the optimistic predictions he hears for 1915.

The services of an interpretor was required when Justice Lloyd Wyman united in marriage Susie Danes and Martin Marton Tuesday morning. Both are Hungarians and the bride has been a resident of the country only a few months. Although unable to speak or understand English she had easily acquired a working knowledge of the language of love.

Annual Meeting of Trustees

The annual meeting of the township trustees was held Monday afternoon in the office of C. T. Mehaffey, clerk. Organization was effected by the election of H. C. King president and road dragging superintendent. Other members of the board are E. E. Lawrence and H. H. Shepard.

C. D. Stevenson and J. T. Brick were made road superintendents for the township; Brick to look after work in the eastern portion and Stevenson in the western. It was voted to hold the regular meetings on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month at 2 p. m. Central.

Despite the cold weather of the present winter the calls for outdoor relief have been about the same as in other years. Under the present law the trustees can only give temporary assistance, other cases coming under the jurisdiction of the infirmary officials.

One of the improvements contemplated by the trustees is the repair of Richmond road, which has been in bad shape for the past year. The matter of paving some of the main roads in the township will also be taken up with the county commissioners.

Trail of Lonesome Pine at the Utopia Theater Jan. 12th

"A comedian." How many, many pseudo comedians lay claim to that phrase! The word comedian is as much abused as are the words "sure cure," "best on earth," "guaranteed," etc., without end. What is a comedian? Did you ever stop to think? Is a comedian a man that blackens his face and asks, "How old is Ann?" No. Is a comedian a man that puts on a bald wig and a chin-piece and then pulls something about "Mein little dog Schneider?" Not at all. Does a comedian—a real comedian—depend upon smutty sayings and a barrel stave to provoke laughter? Again the answer is "No!" A genuine comedian, worthy of the name, is not listed above. A true comedian is funny at any time in the 24 hours of the day, with the aid of grease, paint and calcium lights, or with nothing to aid him but his personality. And therein you have the answer—"Personality." That makes the comedian. If an actor doesn't have personality, then all the paint, powder and funny clothes in the world won't give him the right to call himself a comedian. Personality can hardly be explained, but is detected on sight. It consists of that infinitesimal something that radiates from gifted people, just as light is thrown from the sun, making their every action harmonious and pleasing to all observers. The part of "Uncle Billy" in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which comes to the Utopia Jan. 12th, was ever a humorous part, but since Mr. Charles D. Marlowe has assumed the role he has literally made it stand out as a feature of the show. Every move he makes, from his shuffling entrance in the first act to his final exit in the fourth act, provokes the right to utter the title "Comedian" to his name. "Uncle Billy" Ayers in the character alone is worth the price of admission. Every one who has witnessed his comedies Mr. Marlowe to be a true comedian, worthy of the title.

JUSTICE LLOYD WYMAN

Starts the New Year by Performing His 128th Marriage

Justice Lloyd Wyman, known as the "marrying squire of Lake county" tied his one hundred and twenty-eighth knot last Saturday morning when he united in marriage James A. Graham, 65, of Mentor, and Emma L. Cathan, 44, of Perry.

"Most of my knots have been hard ones—the kind that remain tied," remarked the justice in a reminiscent vein, "but occasionally one of them will come undone, or else become so uncomfortable that it has to be cut. As I look back over the past I can see them taking the solemn vows—some mere boys and girls who required their parents' consent before taking their first step in married life; others, old and gray haired, launching their boat for the third or fourth time on the troubled sea of matrimony."

Justice Wyman has held his office in this county for nearly thirteen years. He was sixty years of age when he finally yielded to the advise of his friends and took up the work of "judge of the common people's court," and today at seventy-three he is hale and hearty, with faculties unimpared, and bids fair to continue for many years as a dispenser of justice tempered with mercy.

Someone has said that "it is not so much in knowing the law as in knowing where to find it." Justice Wyman's early training fitted him for the position he now holds. He is a graduate of Michigan University, and practiced law for some time in the west, being admitted to the bar in Michigan and Nebraska. Educational work then claimed his attention and he was superintendent of schools for many years. Mr. Wyman is also known as a writer of poetry and his friends highly treasure a little volume, "After Sundown and Other Poems," which his sons had published a short time ago.

One of Justice Wyman's weddings that "failed to stick," was that of Jack Montpelier, young Cleveland millionaire and Claire Maud Resinger an actress who was performing in the city. Another young lady from the stage, Jean H. Ryan, was married at the same time to Arney F. Hendricks. Of the latter marriage little is known but Montpelier and his bride soon separated and the papers were filled with their matrimonial troubles. The double wedding occured away back in 1906, and is listed as number sixty on Justice Wyman's book.

Lon Again in Trouble

Alonzo Babcock, old offender, was arrested in Concord Sunday on a charge of intoxication, brought to Painesville by Roy Harrison and E. Hodges, and spent the night in jail.

When he appeared before Justice Wyman Monday morning, in charge of Depnty Sheriff E. E. Graves, Lon was very repentant and acknowledged that his old enemy John Barleycorn had floored him again. The justice assessed a fine of $5 and costs, but remitted the fine on a promise of good behavior.

"Guess I'd better move back to Painesville," mused Lon when he heard that the costs amounted to $8.50, "wouldn't cost near so much for the officers to cart me around then."

Boys in Trouble Again.

A friendship which started some three years ago at the Lancaster reform school was renewed last Thursday when James McCarty and Delos Fredericks were arraigned in Justice Wyman's court on a charge of stealing hides from the slaughter house of Frank Presley at Mentor.

Both boys had been inmates of the Lancaster institution, having been sent there by Judge Nye, McCarty for delinquency and Fredericks for stealing a pair of boots from the Ginsburg store. The acquaintance formed there led to their becoming companions after being released and being out of work and in need of money the hide stealing took place.

According to the boys' story the room at the slaughter house was not locked and they had no difficulty in getting the hides and bringing them to Painesville on the Accommodation. Here they found a ready buyer in the person of a local harness man, who, so the boys claimed, asked no embarrassing questions, but paid them much less than the market value of the stolen property.

Young Fredericks claimed Painesville as his home and said he had worked on the lakes until navigation closed. McCarty's home was at Mentor and he had been out of employment since the knitting mills shut down.

Questions by Justice Wyman and Attorney Nolan failed to bring to light much information, the boys being careful not to commit themselves except in the one instance. The justice bound them over to the probate court, in the sum of $200 each remarking that their old friend Judge Nye would undoubtedly be glad to hear from again.

Township Board Organizes.

Township Board of Education met Monday evening in the office of C. T. Mehaffey and organized for the year by electing C. W. Hadden president and W. W. Trowbridge vice president. The board is composed of W. B. Cole, J. M. Crofoot, C. W. Hadden, H. J. Smith and W. W. Trowbridge. Meetings will be held during 1915 on the fourth Thursday evening of each school month.

Engineer F. N. Downer was present at the meeting and plans for the new school at the Nursery were tabled over but no official action taken. It was originally planned to add two rooms to the present school building but there has been such a rapid increase in the number of children of school age in that neighborhood that the construction of a four-room addition is deemed wise—two rooms for present needs and two which can be finished off and used later.

Schools of the township are running smoothly with increased attendance in almost every instance.

ELECTION AT PERRY

To Decide Question of Issuing Bonds to Pay for Paving

On Wednesday, January 20 the citizens of Perry township and village will vote on the question of issuing bonds for paving the main roads with concrete, said pavement to be sixteen feet in width except in the business portion of the village where it is planned to lay it the full width of the street.

The resolutions passed by the trustees of the township and council of the village recite that it is deemed necessary to pave the South Ridge from the eastern line of the township to the western line, the Narrows-Center road and the Call road. It is estimated that the total amount of paving will be about nine and one-half miles.

The cost of the paving to the abutting property owners will be very small, as they are only required to pay 15 per cent.—7½ per cent. being assessed against each side. Of the remainder the county will pay 45 per cent. and the township and village 40 per cent. While the frontages are large, especially in the township, the cost of paving, being spread over a number of years, will be so low that it will not work a hardship on anyone and the increased value of the property after the paving is in will, it is claimed, pay for the paving many times over.

The total amount of bonds required for work in the township is $64,000, and in the village $20,000. The South Ridge pavement, when completed, will connect with that laid through Madison township last year and will give a straight strip of improved road from the east line of Painesville township to the center of Unionville.

B. & O. to Spend Millions.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is to put into immediate execution long delayed plans for betterments and extensions involving a total outlay of not less than $30,000,000.

Positive confirmation of this highly important information had been received in a letter from President Willard of the B. & O. to one of the highest officials of the government. The going into the market of the B. & O. and some of the other big trunk line railways of the country will undoubtedly bring a boom among the steel, cement, railway supply and allied construction industries.

What part, if any, of the $30,000,000 will be used on the lake branch of the B. & O. remains to be seen, but prosperity can not strike one part of the road without the effects being felt all along the line. Ore will be needed for the manufacture of rails and it will undoubtedly be but a short time until heavily laden trains will be running from Fairport to Youngstown, Pittsburg and other mill centers.

Funeral of Old Resident.

Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon for Mrs. Melinda Tanswell who died at her home on Madison avenue Friday noon after a long illness. Mrs. Tanswell was 72 years of age and leaves three nieces, Mrs. Glenn Salkeld, Mrs. Frank Langshaw and Miss Jennie Skinner of Perry, also one nephew, Walter Skinner.

Death Takes LeRoy Woman.

The coming of the new year brought death to Mrs. Hannah Bates, 79, who passed away Friday at the home of her daughter in Leroy.

Mrs. Bates was the widow of the late Ira Bates and is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Crellie, at whose home the funeral was held Sunday afternoon.

Simplified Spelling, Perhaps.

The Madison correspondent of a local disseminator of information said, among other things, says:

"Mrs. Sippy from Sagerstown, Ia. has been the guest of relatives in town."

PETITIONS IN BOOTS

Council Chamber Invaded by Good Sized Army.

A crowd that filled the council chamber, the hall, and reached half way down the stairs gathered at city hall Monday evening. The proposed Liberty street improvement and threatened cut in the music appropriation were the reasons.

Liberty street paving has been written about, talked about and even sworn about until the general public is heartily sick of the whole matter. The council voted to proceed with the improvement and issue bonds for the city's share. All members except George K. McLeod voted in the affirmative.

F. T. Pyle acted as spokesman for those who wanted the paving delayed and enumerated all the reasons for delay except the one that putting the work off for another year would take it out of the hands of the present council and give a chance to make the rate fight all over again. P. J. Mighton spoke in behalf of the business men of the south end who want the paving work completed at the earliest possible moment and City Engineer Downer read communications from the engineers of various cities and the highway department stating that in their opinion it would be safe to proceed with the work the coming summer. Councilmen Eaton and Kohankie also got in a few pertinent remarks.

When the appropriation ordinance was under discussion and after the music appropriation had been left at the original figure, Ben Baldurf asked permission to speak and went into some details of the band business that could well have been omitted, charging among other things, that the reason Councilman McLeod opposed the music appropriation was because the members had failed to buy their uniforms of him and that McLeod had threatened to "get Parsons goat." Councilman McLeod denied the truth of the statements and declared them insults.

Marriage Not a Failure.

"Is marriage a failure?"

When this question was put to C. T. Morley he shook his head and replied: "Speaking from my limited experience I should say that it is anything but a failure. Of course the wife and I have only been married fifty-eight years last Christmas eve, and, as you might say, we are entirely too young to give an official opinion on this important question."

Mr. Morley smiled as he gave the answer, then looked thoughtful as his mind went back over the early days of his married life and he recalled the young wife and infant daughter left alone when he answered his country's call to arms and of the son born in the trying days of war-time.

"We have had much happiness and a great deal to be thankful for," said Mr. Morley. "Of the three children born to us all are living and they have presented us with seven grandchildren, all well and healthy. No, marriage is not a failure with us."

In Trouble Over a Five Spot

Fred Powers, former Painesville resident, is now an inmate of the county jail, awaiting the action of the grand jury.

Powers worked as a painter in Madison last summer and while there obtained five dollars from Mrs. Jennie Griswold, claiming that he had a contract to paint a large residence and needed the money to buy brushes. It is claimed that his story was false and so a charge of obtaining money under false pretense was filed.

Powers was arrested in Thompson at the home of relatives and after a hearing before Justice William Corlett of Madison was bound over to the grand jury, bail being fixed at $1200.

Retiring Official Remembered

Court house officials and members of the bar sprang a surprise on Harry T. Nolan Monday, when he retired from the office of county prosecutor.

Attorney Nolan was summoned to appear in a hurry and then Attorney B. C. Shepherd on behalf of the officials presented Mr. Nolan with a beautiful gold chain of elaborate design and a gold handled pen knife. The retiring official was too surprised to more than murmur his thanks.

New Ohio Apple Era.

Apple orchards are coming back in Ohio, according to the annual report of the agricultural commission. The report says that for twenty years there has been an annual loss of 10,000 acres of apple orchards in the state, and it points out that the old orchards are being made over, new ones are being planted and the output of apples is being increased.

Textile Company Busy

The Ohio Textile Company has been paying attention to business right along through the rush of those and subscribers are doubling the output of the 1914 stock on account of the phenomenal rush.

URGES PRUDENCE IN APPROPRIATIONS

Auditor Donahey, in Report, Recommends Genuine Economy in State Affairs.

ALSO THE SIMPLIFICATION OF BUSINESS

Believes Duty of Making Budget Should Be Vested in Auditor Instead of in an Appointee of Governor.

Columbus, O.—Prudence in appropriations and radical changes in present budget system are recommended by Auditor A. V. Donahey in his annual report to Gov. J. M. Cox. Simplification of governmental business and genuine economy in state affairs are asked by the auditor. The auditor commends the steps taken under the Cox administration toward bringing about a really modern fiscal system, but says the work is far from complete. He insists that still further changes are necessary to bring state affairs to true business methods and presents suggestions to the new governor and the incoming general assembly.

Would Change Budget System.

One of his leading recommendations is changes in the budget system. He believes the duty of making the budget should be vested in the auditor instead of in an appointee of the governor, asserting that as the auditor is called upon to administer the budget, he naturally should have a hand in its preparation. The wisdom of continuing the present plan of allowing the governor to make up the state budget is questioned and it is urged that the governor should have an efficiency expert to keep him advised of the operations of the state departments.

Auditor Donahey warns the incoming administration that corporate and other taxes are fast mounting to near the danger line and that a halt must be called if the big cash balance now in the state treasury is not to be disturbed. Prudence must be exercised, he says.

Estimates of receipts for the new appropriation periods that are to be changed to conform to the new fiscal year are contained in the auditor's report. He estimates that $3,654,000 will be received from Feb. 16 to June 30, 1915. For the year extending from July 1, 1915, to June 30, 1916, the receipts are estimated at $18,276,021. This is based on the assumption that no change will be made in the state levies. For 1916-17 the estimated revenue is $19,376,000. For the period for which the general assembly will be called upon to make appropriations, the estimated revenues are $43,406,021, a greater sum than ever was placed at the disposal of an administration.

Disbursements Are Omitted.

Estimates of disbursements, which heretofore featured the auditor's report, are omitted this year because the auditor does not know the plans of the assembly. But he makes this suggestion:

"If the general assembly will disregard any treasury cash balance and keep its appropriations within the estimated receipts, it will be following the mandate of the constitution and much benefit will accrue to the taxpayers of the state."

In discussing the manner of making appropriations and in giving to certain departments the use of "receipts and balances" which the report terms an "appropriation fossil," the auditor ventures the assertion that if a man in private business handled his affairs with the same free and easy method that characterizes the administration of public business his family would cause him to be sent to a hospital for treatment. Another abuse attacked is the plan of allowing payment of old bills from appropriations of the previous year.

SEES INCREASE OF CRIME

GOV. WHITMAN POINTS TO LAWLESSNESS IN INAUGURAL SPEECH AT ALBANY.

Albany, N. Y.—A warning of moral decadence if the spirit of lawlessness in all American communities goes unchecked was one of the striking utterances in Gov. Charles S. Whitman's inaugural address.

"Disregard of law, impatience with legal and moral restraints, contempt for the judicial and executive ministers of justice are phenomena observable in all American communities and all classes," he added. "No material prosperity, no abounding wealth, no progress in the sciences can save us from moral decadence and ultimate decay if this spirit of lawlessness and contempt for legal authority shall continue."

Simplify Justice Is Aim.

Chicago, Ill.—A court of convenience—a court without lawyers where people may plead their own cases will be established here in January as a branch of the municipal tribunal, Chief Justice Harry Olson has just announced. Its aim will be to simplify justice and reduce the cost of "going to law."

"Technicalities will be eliminated from decisions and much injustice may be averted," Judge Olson said. "Under the present system both parties are obliged to retain lawyers."

Discovers Torso in Ice.

New York City.—The police are confronted with a mystery which may develop into a second Anna Aumuller case. A boy discovered two large bags frozen in the ice of Coney Island creek in Brooklyn, and reported his find to detectives, who discovered that one of the bags contained the mutilated torso of a human body. The other sack contained the legs and [illegible] missing and those [illegible] so badly mutilated [illegible] impossible to say [illegible]

Hans Helle was arrested in New Orleans and admitted he had manufactured an infernal machine which he intended to ship on a British mule transport, timing it so it would explode in mid ocean.

IMMIGRATION BILL, WITH LITERACY TEST, IS O-K'D

Measure, Which Has Already Passed the House, Is Adopted by Senate, With Provision to Exempt Belgians.

Washington, D. C.—The immigration bill containing the restrictive literacy test for admission of aliens, which has been the obstacle in immigration reform legislation for the greater part of two national administrations, passed the senate by 50 to 7.

The overwhelming majority was recorded despite the fact that President Wilson had indicated he would veto the measure, as did former President Taft, if it should come to him with the educational test included.

The vote in the senate indicated that the bill could be repassed by more than the required two-thirds majority should the president reject the measure. Senators who voted against the bill are Brandegee, McCumber, Martine, O'Gorman, Ransdell, Reed and Walsh.

The bill passed the house Feb. 4, 1914, by 241 to 126.

Although the senate amended the house bill in several particulars, the literacy test was unaltered save for an additional exemption to Belgian subjects, which was adopted after prolonged debate.

Among senate amendments which house leaders said probably would be accepted is one to exclude from the United States all persons of the African race or of negro blood. Another strengthens the phraseology of the prohibition of polygamists.

Closing hours of the debate were devoted to an amendment by Senator Lodge to exempt Belgian farmers from the literacy test and from the provisions which prohibit Americans from soliciting or inducing immigration. Already several American organizations are endeavoring to induce Belgian refugees to settle in this country. The amendment was finally adopted by a vote of 34 to 22.

GIRL WINS HIGH HONOR

MISS MARGUERITE DETERLING, 22, WILL AID GOV. WHITMAN AND WIFE AT ALBANY.

New York City.—Miss Marguerite Deterling, a young Brooklyn girl, who was a stenographer in the office of the district attorney for five years, has been appointed confidential stenographer of Gov. Whitman. She will also act as social secretary to Mrs. Whitman, making her home in the executive mansion with the governor's family.

Before she served as Mr. Whitman's confidential stenographer while he was district attorney Miss Deterling was employed for two years in his law offices. Not only is she an expert stenographer, but her courtesy to all who had occasion to go to the district attorney's office made her a very valuable assistant. Miss Deterling, who is 22 years old, will play an important part in official life in Albany during the next two years. She is a graduate of public school No. 3, Brooklyn. Recently she has taken up the study of French and German with private tutors to fit her for further usefulness in her association with public officials.

More Goggles Sought.

Columbus, O.—So great has been the number of injuries to eyes of workmen in Ohio a campaign is to be started calling for a more extensive use of goggles by workmen. A typical day in the claims department of the state industrial commission is made the basis of a bulletin about to be issued.

A. C. Schott, who tabulated the data, says as great a percentage of men sustained some form of slight or serious injury as were wounded in the European war in four months.

Cigaret in Rubbish Causes Fire.

Camden, N. J.—A lighted cigaret thrown among some rubbish by a waiting passenger resulted in a $700,000 fire in this city that destroyed the railroad station of the Atlantic City railroad, the ferry slips, 21 vestibuled coaches, 4 Pullman cars, the lumber yards of C. B. Coles and the Dialogue ship yard. The fire spread for six blocks along the Delaware river and burned all day. The ferry service to Philadelphia was put out of commission and the entire Atlantic City railroad system was tied up.

AIM TO RUSH SHIP PURCHASING BILL

Senators Vote to Make Administration Measure Unfinished Business.

WARM FIGHT AGAINST PROPOSED ACT

Republican Members of Upper House of Congress Serve Notice That They Will Oppose the Bill as It Is Now Framed.

Washington, D. C.—Government purchase of ships as proposed in the administration bill to create a shipping board, finance a $10,000,000 shipping corporation and expend not to exceed $30,000,000 for the purchase or chartering of ocean carriers became Monday the foremost issue before congress.

By a vote of 46 to 28 the senate made the ship purchase bill the unfinished business to be supplanted only by appropriation bills. This action on motion of Senator Fletcher, acting chairman of the commerce committee, precipitated a showing on the part of the opposition senators, which gave certain indication that there were breakers ahead for the proposed legislation.

Charging that an effort was being made to rush the bill with undue haste, Republican senators served notice that the measure would be fought to the last ditch.

Fear Complications.

Minority members of the commerce committee filed a report, written by Senator Burton and indorsed by Senators Nelson, Perkins, Smith of Michigan and Oliver, asserting that the plan proposed would not relieve shipping conditions, because it would be impossible for the government to get ships enough to do any good. It pointed also to dangers of international complications arising, declaring that "every craft set afloat by the government would add one more risk of our being drawn into the present war."

Senator Fletcher, who has charge of the bill, and who recently conferred with President Wilson concerning it, urged the measure in a lengthy speech after Republican senators had issued their pronunciamento of opposition. He declared the war had produced "a ship famine" and that the interests of all people in the United States demanded that the government take immediate action to supply ships to carry American products demanded in the markets of Europe and South America. He instanced the fact that cotton sold at 19 cents a pound to Germany when it was bringing 7 cents in the United States. Germany would consume 500,000,000 pounds of cotton if she could get it, he said, and the south had 15 times that amount to sell.

Foreigners Get Profits.

When the war began, Senator Fletcher declared, England had 5,000 and Germany 2,000 vessels in the overseas trade, while the United States had only six. He said that American merchants gave annually to foreign ship owners $30,000,000 in ocean freights. Charter rates here had increased in some cases 400 per cent since the war began he added, and ships under the American flag were not obtainable at any price.

The emergency bill opening American registry to foreign built craft, Senator Fletcher said, had not met the needs of American manufacturers.

SINGER KILLS HIS WIFE

MAN RETURNS HOME, SHOOTS THROUGH A DOOR AND IS HELD FOR MURDER.

New York City.—Mrs. Frances Collins was shot and killed at her home, where she lived with her husband, William, and her two brothers. The husband is locked up, charged with murder.

Collins, who is a cabaret singer, and his wife quarreled early in the evening. When he returned home he heard her voice in an adjoining bedroom. He went to the door, peeped through the keyhole and saw her sitting in a man's lap. Collins demanded admission, was refused, and, it is charged, fired through the panel of the door. Mrs. Collins fell to the door, fatally wounded. The man in whose lap Mrs. Collins was sitting was said to be her brother George.

Leaves Million to Charity.

New York City.—Miss Grace Hoadley Dodge, the philanthropist, who died in this city Dec. 27 last, left more than $1,200,000 to public and religious institutions under her will, just filed for probate. Bequests include $500,000 each to Teachers' college of Columbia university and the national board of the Young Women's Christian association of the United States.

Wills Fortune to Son.

New York City.—By the will of Temple Bowdoin, partner of J. P. Morgan, which was filed for probate here, the bulk of the estate, which runs into millions, is bequeathed to the decedent's 16-year-old son, George Temple Bowdoin. Mr. Bowdoin left $100,000 to public institutions and remembered 200 employees in his will.

The will also provides that each person in the employ of J. P. Morgan & Co. or Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia shall receive a sum of money equal to one month's salary.

Many Return to Work.

Chicago, Ill.—The first full working day of 1915 brought joy to thousands of toilers in Illinois.

More than 20 factories resumed operations in this state and it is estimated 10,000 men, many of whom had been idle since the closing of the factories last fall, were re-employed. Activity was reported in several of the large manufacturing districts [illegible]

SAYS PROSPERITY IS NOW WITHIN REACH

Redfield Writes New Year's Greeting to Merchants and Manufacturers of the United States.

Washington, D. C.—Heartened by months of close study of the business outlook of the nation Secretary Redfield of the commerce department, wrote a New Year's greeting to the merchants and manufacturers of the country bidding them, in characteristic language, reach out for the prosperity he sees within their grasp.

There is no warrant, Mr. Redfield declares, for gloom or despair. The ill effects of the European war on American enterprises are passing and new vistas for commercial ventures are opening with each new day.

"If you want prosperity," his message says, "do your own share to bring it and do it now. Get that addition on your shop going. It will cost you less today than six months hence. Is trade a bit dull in the works? Get those improvements begun. Prices are low and likely to rise. You've been thinking of that contract work; better start it yourself before things get the start of you.

'We Don't Know Distress.'

"This country slows down a bit now and then, but it never stops growing and it always moves up and not down. We don't know what it means in most of the United States to have real general distress.

"Think of Belgium and Poland. O man with a grouch, and slink into your hole and pull it in after you. There think of your sins and your blessings and come out with your courage in working order.

"There are lots of good American examples of pluck. Do you remember San Francisco and Galveston and Chicago—Boston, Charleston, Baltimore and Dayton and many others like them? Remember Thomas A. Edison and lots of others of your fellow citizens showed pluck when things were hard.

"Nothing's the matter with the man with a grouch except an absentee heart and missing nerve. Cheer up, go to work, do your level best, quit talking misery. The war's over yonder—not here. Men are slaughtered yonder—they are living here. It's all clouds there—clear day here.

"Get out and sell some goods. Plant some more acres; do more work than you planned. Talk cheerful talk and you'll find this country of ours a pretty good place after all."

Figures Support Views.

To support the secretary's hopeful views are the figures gathered by his department as to American foreign commerce since the outbreak of the great war.

Since August, when the monthly trade balance of the nation showed a deficit of nearly $20,000,000 through excess of imports over exports, the situation has been completely changed.

For December alone it is estimated the export excess will reach $100,000,000 or more, with one exception the highest mark of the last two years.

The war caught the country unprepared in that a tremendous import excess had been rolled up in the four months preceding its outbreak.

With the August total included, American merchants were in debt to foreign manufacturers and producers nearly $40,000,000 by these figures alone. Since then, including the December estimate, the export excess has reached a total of $174,000,000.

President Opens Fair.

San Diego, Cal.—Three thousand miles away President Wilson crossed New Year's in the small hours at Washington and touched an electric button that opened to the world here the Panama-California exposition. It will remain open until Jan. 1, 1916. William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, represented President Wilson at the opening celebration. As the personal representative of King Alfonso of Spain there was present Count Del Valle de Salazar and with him were other foreign legates.

Immigration Falls Off.

New York City.—Immigration through the port of New York for 1914 fell off to the extent of 601,510 persons, or 15 per cent, as compared with 1913, according to figures compiled by the commissioner of immigration, and just made public.

During 1913 arrivals numbered [illegible] persons, of whom [illegible] were aliens and 170,201 were returning American citizens. [illegible]

STEINBACH FALLS INTO FOE'S HANDS

Alsatian Town Is Occupied by French After Germans Are Driven Out.

TEUTONS MADE MOST GALLANT DEFENSE

Siege Which Lasts Week Is Marked by House to House Fighting and Ground Is Gained Only Foot by Foot.

Paris, France.—Steinbach has fallen. The Alsatian town, to which the French laid violent siege a week ago and which they later invested and forced their way into, fighting from house to house and gaining ground only foot by foot, was carried Monday by the French, according to the official statement issued at midnight. Cernay (called Sennheim by the Germans) is being violently attacked by the French. This town is but three miles from Steinbach and the general offensive is directed against these two points in the advance on Muelhausen, which is only eight miles away. The fall of Cernay is expected to follow shortly. French guns massed before Altkirch continue their bombardment of that important railway center, which also is but about eight miles from Muelhausen, but slightly west of south. Steinbach, Cernay, Thann and Aspach are grouped just north of west of Muelhausen. Thus Muelhausen is threatened from two quarters, its front on the west and its left flank on the south.

Germans Make Gallant Defense.

So important is the success of the French in these operations that staff officers of the French army have applied to their attainment that word which has been treasured by even the most radical spirits for use only in decided triumphs—"victory." But defeat did not come to the German defenders of the town without the most desperately gallant defense.

Steinbach is situated on a low plateau about which there reach to great heights rugged cliffs traversed by narrow mountain paths and cut by passes of great natural defensive value. Originally the Germans held all the important passes and heights of strategical importance, but by persistent battering with mountain guns and a few pieces of heavy artillery which the French were able to place to advantage the German batteries were silenced, wiped out or forced to withdraw.

Advancing around a hill to the northwest of the town the French were able several days ago to occupy and install a battery in the ruins of a chateau from which they poured a flanking fire into the remaining German works before the town. Forced finally to withdraw from these positions the Germans retired to their last defensive positions on the edge of the town itself. Here they were reinforced by considerable bodies of troops brought up from Uffholz to the east.

Fighting in Streets Begins.

The French, undaunted by the new show of force, carried the fighting up to the German's last trenches and the fighting to the streets began.

First the official accounts related the taking of "a few houses" by the French troops. This later was denied by the Germans. But the furious house to house fighting continued and the French gradually pressed the invaders back. A day later the French official statement recorded the capture of "another row of houses." Monday the afternoon statement told of the taking of the environs of the church and the cemetery. The night official made this announcement:

"At Steinbach Monday morning we carried the whole village."

Nothing could be more graphically descriptive of the battle than the chronology of these official statements.

Russian and Turkish Reports.

London, Eng.—A remarkable night battle on the bank of the Bzura river is described in the Russian communication, which says the German forces were permitted to cross the river unmolested and then were attacked with bayonets, without the firing of a shot. It is asserted that several hundred Germans were killed and the remainder surrendered. The activities of the Turks in the Caucasus seems to be assuming an increasing importance, judging from the attention the Petrograd official communications are devoting to this region. Although not admitting that the Turks have been victorious, it is conceded that they are fighting with great valor and stubbornness in the vicinity of the fortified town of Sari Kamysh. The Turks claim to have taken this position. Russia, however, does not admit this and says the Turks have suffered enormous losses. Comparing the Turkish and the Russian statements it would seem that the Turks are making some headway, although both sides are losing heavily.

Hits Gary School Plan.

Hammond, Ind.—The Gary public school system is a fake and too widely and falsely advertised says George Dickson, superintendent of the Newcastle (Pa.) schools, who has just returned home after careful study of the Gary system.

Dickson praises the Gary school equipment, but says the system is falsely based. He points out that Gary receives $54 per capita, because of its great taxable property, but also says the average daily attendance is only 83½.

Had Good War Record.

New York City.—Rear Admiral Henry Lycurgus Howison, U. S. N., retired, died at his home in Yonkers as the result of an operation for intestinal trouble. He was 77 years old and had an unusually active service record in the Civil war. In the last years before his retirement he was commandant of the navy yards at Boston and San Francisco. He was appointed to the [illegible] United States naval academy from Indiana [illegible]

GOV. COX TALKS OF STATE FINANCES

Points Out Unparalleled Condition in His Last Message to the Legislature

BIG BALANCE SHOWN IN TREASURY

Urges Caution With Reference to Appropriations to Be Made Under the New Budgetary Plan—Need of Office Building and Residence for Governor.

Columbus, O.—In his summary at the end of his 6,000 word message, delivered to the legislature Monday, Governor James M. Cox says: "We should all felicitate ourselves as proud citizens of a great commonwealth that our fiscal condition is healthy beyond precedent, that industrial justice and peace have been wrought by the workmen's compensation law which has removed the courts from the zone of distrust and re-established them in the confidence of the people, that we are dedicating our efforts in larger measure to education so that the boy and girl in remote locations back on the mud road see the manifestations of interest on the part of his and her government in their educational and material welfare; that taxes, on the average, were lower at the last tax-paying time in December than ever before. We are fortunate to have sprung from the loins of a citizenship that builded us such a state, located in the choicest place of all the world's domains—a rich heritage indeed."

The opening paragraphs of the message call attention to the excellent financial condition of the state, the close of the year showing a grand total in the general revenue fund of $11,224,551.41, notwithstanding the extraordinary expenses of the last year.

The governor calls attention to the fact that each of the state departments are now self-supporting and in the case of the liquor tax the licensing machinery has turned into the general revenue fund $750,000 during the last year.

In line with the effort to establish business methods in handling the business of the state, the governor calls attention to the work done by Mr. Heffernan in establishing the budget department. As a result, the last general assembly changed both the fiscal and the appropriation years, and the new fiscal and appropriation years begin July 1 and run until June 30. Inasmuch as the federal government has precisely the same arrangement and practically every state as well, comparisons can now be made with some guarantee of coherency. It is important that each department instead of receiving lump sum or inflexible specific appropriations as they have in the past be given flexible specific appropriations in the form of a segregated budget which will be submitted to you this year for the first time in the history of Ohio. An example of the lump sum appropriation is:

"Maintenance .... $100,000"

Of the inflexible specific appropriation:

"Three engineers .... $5,400"

Budgetary Plan Best.

My experience as member of the appropriations committee in the house of representatives at Washington, and in the station now occupied, leads me to the positive conviction that the tendency toward increased and excessive cost of government, national, state and local, grows entirely out of the failure to adopt a budgetary plan of appropriations and disbursements. Your honorable body is enabled this year to intelligently make specific appropriations. The law creating the budget department did not become operative until late in 1913, so that it was impossible to carry out our aims in making the appropriations for the current biennium.

Urges Caution.

I therefore urge upon the general assembly the exercise of the utmost care in voting appropriations. The budget is based upon a comprehensive inquiry into the needs of the service, and you should hesitate in exceeding it. Bear in mind at all times that the estimates of departments, generally speaking, include the element of desire and are not based entirely upon necessity. It may be urged that in making flexible specific appropriations, departments will be unable to deal with unforeseen contingencies that may arise. The answer to that is the suggestion that the powers of the emergency board be enlarged. The recent arrangement of making a fixed appropriation for the emergency board has worked so well that the old system ought never be re-established. While there were certain limitations placed upon the authority of the emergency board, there was none on the amount of money that could be disbursed; and besides each recurring administration was called upon to pay the bills incurred by the emergency board in the preceding year. In 1913, for illustration, there fell to the record of expense of this administration the item of over $200,000 for disbursements made the previous year—1912. Under the scheme of making a fixed appropriation for the emergency board $200,000 was allotted and of this $117,862.75 was expended, leaving a balance of $82,137.25 on hand. It will therefore be seen that the emergency board, acting during this administration, will not transfer a dollar of cost to the incoming regime. I desire also to make the most urgent recommendation that the general assembly make no more deficiency appropriations. I have urged upon all state departments that no deficiencies would be recognized. No state official, in the first place, has any right under the law, to incur a deficiency, and if any have developed, the responsibility should be turned back to the offending officer. Instructions from me have been so positive that I have both the hope and the belief that you will be enabled to establish the wholesome precedent against any deficiency appropriation bills.

The practice of departments collecting receipts and turning them into the treasury has been abolished. In making your appropriation bills to the future, it seems to me that experience strongly suggests that balances should no longer be appropriated as such. They should lapse at the end of the fiscal year.

By reason of the change in the fiscal and appropriation year, it will be necessary to make three sub-divisions, all of which are provided for by the budget—One from February 16, the beginning of the old appropriation year, to June 30, the end of the new, the second to cover the first new fiscal and appropriation year; and the third to provide for the second fiscal year beginning July 1, 1916, and running until June 30, 1917.

Need of Office Building.

The recurrent subject of the state erecting a building for the departments that are now renting their quarters is again presented. The records disclose that the state house became inadequate in space in 1902, at which time the fish and game commission leased its rooms outside. Other departments were established in office buildings on the dates indicated:

Automobile department	1909
Board of administration	1912
Departments of banks and banking	1912
State bindery	1912
Board of state charities	1910
State board of health	1907
Oil inspector	1906
Bureau of vital statistics	1908
Fire marshal	1911
Fish and game commission	1902
Highway department	1909
Industrial commission	1911
Public utilities commission	1906
Tax commission of Ohio	1910
Legislative reference library	1910

In the last two years the state board of health, which was paying $7,328.40 a year rent, was moved to the university and that amount saved. The only additional quarters procured were for the civil service commission, the state liquor licensing board (these two branches having been established by constitutional changes), the building and loan department and the censor board, both of which are self supporting through fee assessments fixed by law.

The state procures in interest on monies in the treasury something over $400,000 a year. It would be my suggestion that this be diverted for the purpose of erecting an office building for the state and continued until the funds are sufficient to carry out the project. In this connection thought should also be given to the idea of co-operating with the city of Columbus in creating a civic center. The whole state naturally has pride in the capital city, and the plans adopted would probably mean no additional financial outlay but would add to the ornate beauty of the city.

Governor's Residence Needed.

To an Ohioan, at least, the position of governor of this state is second only in importance to the presidency of the republic. He who occupies this responsible station should live in a manner befitting the dignity of the place. This entails a considerable cost which the governor should not himself bear. Living as we are under a liberal democracy, our people frown upon pomp or display; and yet a calculated, deliberate obtrusive and otherwise mockish simplicity is more offensive to our sensibilities than gaudy ceremonial. I have gone to the trouble of making inquiry from other states as to what they have done in this connection. I find that 33 commonwealths have provided homes for the chief executive. Every state of importance has done so and Ohio should no longer continue an obvious neglect of duty. On retirement from office I feel free in urging that the state make provision for my successor, either by the purchase of a suitable home or the building of one. I shall submit the correspondence which the executive office has conducted with a view to obtaining information on this subject from other states to the clerk of the house of representatives.

The Flood Disaster.

There is transmitted to the clerk of the house of representatives an accounting of all funds collected and disbursed in connection with the flood disaster in Ohio of 1913. The general assembly March 26, 1913, passed H. B. 683, appropriating money for the relief of flood sufferers; and on April 25, S. B. 287, which empowered the governor to select an Ohio flood relief commission, to be made up of five residents of the state, the duty of this organization being to aid the communities that were affected. Pursuant to this the commission was made up of the following gentlemen: John H. Patterson, Dayton; H. H. Johnson, Cleveland; J. G. Schmidlapp, Cincinnati; S. O. Richardson, Toledo; G. W. Lattimer, Columbus. On May 19 Mr. Patterson resigned and his place was taken by E. A. Deeds of Dayton.

I want to bear simple testimony in behalf of the service rendered by these patriotic citizens. The call to duty met with immediate response and their interest was sustained throughout the whole work. Communities were visited at great personal inconvenience and the work of relief was organized at the outset with such efficiency that every local committee received what in its judgment the stricken people required. It was the largest project of its kind in the history of our state, and it is with uncommon gratification that we are enabled to transmit now a report which is in fact an audit, not only of every disbursement to the penny made by the commission, but by the local community treasurers as well. The Red Cross, with the sympathy and dispatch characteristic of that great organization, rendered splendid co-operation. Miss Mabel T. Boardman, its head, visited the state and assigned as an aide to the Ohio flood relief commission Mr. Ernest P. Bicknell, who had rendered conspicuous service in San Francisco following the earthquake disaster.

Workmen's Compensation Law.

The humane results of the workmen's compensation law have been so widespread and the wisdom of the people in changing the constitution so as to make this plan compulsory has been so completely demonstrated that manufacturer and employe now join in praise of the act. While the liability insurance companies contended that the state could not administer this trust and that the cost would run into millions of dollars per year, the experience of the first 12 months shows the cost of administration to be approximately $160,000, and the claims, running far in excess of 50,000 in number, have been adjudicated with such promptness as to justify to the fullest measure the soundness of the state plan. The balance in the fund December 15, 1914, was $2,413,414.07. The number of accidents is diminishing and the cost to the employer is decreasing; so that both lower rates and larger compensation seem assured. As one who passed through the stormy period that led to the passage of this law, I urge upon you the extreme importance of the highest manifestations of vigilance, patriotism and humanity in order that the fundamentals of this beneficent legislation might be preserved.

Good Roads and Good Schools.

The subject of education should always be transcendent in the aims and purposes of those in authority. The state of things in the world today demonstrates the inevitable establishment of many more republics. We not only live in the blessings of geographical isolation from the lands of trouble and fears, but we enjoy as well the benefits flowing from institutions builded upon the sovereign will of our people. World-wide evolutions are now upon us. Civilization may be compelled to face an unprecedented test, and it behooves us, therefore, to see to it that behind the suffrage expression of our people is a constantly improved standard and an enlarged measure of education. Every child in this state should have the opportunity of good school advantages. They have not had in the past in some sections. The depths of neglect and inefficiency to which the school system has drifted in some remote sections is not only a reproach upon a state as resourceful as ours, but a tragedy as well. I renew with undiminished enthusiasm an appeal in behalf of the rural sections and urge only forward steps in education. We have gained too much to have it lost. Folks have tasted the benefits of a modern rural system of education and rural life can only be stimulated by our facing the right direction. Good roads and good schools must continue to be our slogan.

There is a manifest awakening, not only with respect to the permanent improvement of the highways, but interest in the relative merits of material, and methods of transforming bad roads, at small expense seems general. The working out of a more efficient school system has given gratifying impetus to the highway movement because better facilities for transportation enter as an important factor.

Previous to September 1, 1912, there were but 192 centralized school districts in Ohio. In two years' time 242 have been legally authorized; and within the next four weeks elections will be had upon 25 new projects. While the centralization of schools is of great importance, the new school law, which empowers county boards of education to redistrict the various counties for school purposes, is doing even a greater good as many districts have already been in part transferred to adjoining ones and the smaller part left has been added to others by a vote of the electors concerned. It is indeed a great movement, making not only for decreased cost of education per child, but vastly improved facilities, as well as better trained teachers.

Make Universities Co-operative.

In this connection it seems to me that some plan should be devised of so conducting our three universities as to make them co-operative. Doubtless the trustees of the three boards could devise a scheme which would work a benefit to each institution. There should be discouraged any movement calculated to generate animosity as between them. There is a useful sphere for them all.

It is my further observation that more girls' dormitories should be built at the universities. Under the system in vogue their maintenance costs nothing, as they are self-supporting. They provide a home and protection for young women whose aims and aspirations bring them to the college seats.

Urge More Efficiency.

Columbus.—Many suggestions for bettering the work of the bureau of accounting and supervision of public offices was contained in the annual report of that department filed with Governor Cox. The report is signed by Joseph T. Tracy, F. N. Halbedel and W. H. Niven, chiefs of the departments for supervision of city, county and school and township offices. The report is replete with suggestions for making the work of the bureau more efficient. [illegible]

OHIO LEGISLATORS BEGIN THEIR WORK

Eighty-first Buckeye General Assembly Enters Upon Its Existence.

GOV. COX DELIVERS HIS FINAL MESSAGE

D. D. Conover, by Strict Party Vote, Is Elected Speaker of House and C. J. Howard Is Selected as President Pro Tem of Senate.

D. A. DONOVAN,
Special Columbus Correspondent.

Columbus, Ohio.

THE eighty-first general assembly of Ohio entered upon its existence when both branches met and organized by selecting their officials. It was the first Republican assembly in four years and the occasion of the convening was made one of Republican jubilation. By a strict party vote C. D. Conover of Champaign county was elected speaker of the house, the Democrats casting their solid strength for John F. Kramer of Richland county, who Saturday afternoon was vouchsafed that honor by the belated Democratic house caucus. In the senate a Democratic officer, Lieut. Gov. W. A. Greenlund, presided for the reason that there will be no Republican lieutenant governor until Jan. 11. The senate Republicans, however, selected Senator Charles J. Howard of Belmont county as president pro tem. All of the clerks, sergeants-at-arms, stenographers, pages and other officers and attaches who were selected by the caucuses were formally elected. Both the house and senate Democrats practically abandoned their support of the civil service by accepting the right to name one stenographer and one page in both the house and senate. Under a rigid interpretation of the civil service the employes of the 80th general assembly, who are nearly all Democrats would have held over. As soon as the various offices of the assembly were filled the final message of Gov. Cox, the executive's "swan song," was formally received and read. The subject of appropriations occupied the major portion of the governor's message. Thereafter the assembly adjourned until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, when, in accord with the provisions of the Ohio constitution, it met to canvass and certify the result of the vote at the November election. This, however, was purely a formal proceeding, since the figures of the secretary of state always are accepted without question.

JOHN P. MAYNARD,
Clerk of Lower Branch of Assembly.

Anti-Free Pass Edict.

In its December bulletin the state agricultural commission says that "flies, bugs, germs, bacteria and other wild animals" have made furious attacks upon "official dead-beats and petty politicians," since the Ohio state fair eliminated free passes in 1911. The bulletin says that since the anti-free pass edict the fair has endured a constant campaign of annoyance from "horn-short" petty men, inflated and "egotized by official position." What is meant is that, because fair officials have cut out the free pass, they have been subjected to all kinds of heckling and criticism by those who formerly, because of the pass custom, were admitted free to the fair, but now must pay to get in.

Proposed Teachers' Pension Bill.

The teachers' pension bill, which it is proposed to offer at the coming legislative session, was outlined at a meeting of the Ohio Teachers' association by former State School Commissioner E. A. Jones, who is a member of the faculty of Otterbein university. The system proposed would be kept up by subscriptions from both the teachers and the state.

Ansberry to Succeed Donnelly.

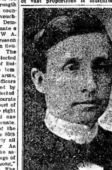
Congressman T. T. Ansberry of Defiance will be appointed by Gov. Cox to succeed the late Judge Michael Donnelly of Napoleon on the court of appeals of the Third district. The appointment will take effect Jan. 5. It has been officially announced. To be eligible to serve on the bench, it will be necessary for Mr. Ansberry to resign as congressman. His term in that office runs until March. The judicial appointment will be for a term of two years. He will serve until the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Donnelly can be filled.

Judicial Reform Committee Reports.

The committee on judicial reform appointed by Gov. Cox has finally decided to recommend the enactment of a law giving the Ohio supreme court power to frame rules of procedure to take the place of the present statutory code of civil procedure where the court finds it is defective. Under the proposed act, where the court promulgates a rule it will supersede the state law. The purpose of this is to shorten litigation. The committee is of the opinion that long delays are due to [illegible] defects in the civil code.

Population of Ohio Is 5,026,898.

There were 5,026,898 people in Ohio on July 1, 1914, according to an official estimate of the population of the Buckeye state by the United States census department, just forwarded to Dr. A. C. Holland, state registrar of vital statistics. The estimate of that official was just five less than that of the census department, evidencing that he is "some" guesser. The population of the state gained nearly 260,000 since 1910, according to the estimate. The estimated population of the large cities show substantial gains. Here are the figures for the more important places: Cleveland, 639,431; Cincinnati, 402,175; Columbus, 204,567; Toledo, 184,126; Dayton, 123,794; Youngstown, 93,341; Akron, 80,291; Canton, 57,426; Springfield, 50,058; Hamilton, 38,841; East Liverpool, 21,877; Steubenville, 25,817; Marion, 22,032; Zanesville, 29,948; Sandusky, 20,127; Warren, 12,074; Salem, 9,523. Cincinnati has the largest colored population, being credited with 21,760 of that race. Columbus is second with 14,428. Springfield third, with 5,276. Xenia fourth with 2,054. No other figures on the colored population by cities are given. While estimate figures are not absolutely accurate, they are approximately so. That the United States is a country of vast proportions is indicated by the fact that the population, based on the census estimate, totals more than 109,000,000. Of this population, the continent is credited with nearly 99,000,000.



C. J. HOWARD,
President Pro Tem of Ohio Senate.

Cox Pardons Diehl.

Walter Diehl, sent to the penitentiary for complicity in the Newark riot and lynching, was selected by Gov. Cox for the New Year's day pardon. He was pardoned upon recommendation of Warden Thomas. Clarence Timmons is the only man connected with the lynching still confined for a part in the affair. Timmons's sentence was commuted from 15 years to seven and one half years, which will cause his term to expire in November of next year. He was convicted of manslaughter. Diehl had been a member of the honor squad since March 19, 1913, when he was sent to the state farm at Orient. Last April he was sent to the Cleveland state hospital and he is the only one of the prisoners at work there who is not under guard. He was convicted solely on circumstantial evidence. He was given a life sentence, having been found guilty of murder of second degree. He was received Oct. 26, 1911. He is 27 years old, and never was arrested before in his life. Diehl was heavily intoxicated the night of the lynching, and the governor makes the pardon conditioned upon his abstaining from the use of liquor. He is also forbidden from entering any place where liquor is sold. Maurice E. Leen, official investigator of the prison, made an exhaustive investigation of the case and submitted a report to Thomas E. Davey, member of the state board of administration, who has been an earnest advocate of Diehl's pardon for more than a year.

Asks Pardon for Husband.

The wife of former State Senator Isaac E. Huffman, who is serving a three-year sentence in the penitentiary for legislative bribery, called on Governor Cox and asked him to pardon her husband. The chief executive expressed regret that he could not see his way clear to grant her request. Huffman's term will expire next March. Mrs. Huffman thought that the governor might be disposed to show her husband leniency in view of the fact that he pardoned former Senator George K. Cetone, who was one of Huffman's colleagues and who was convicted on a similar charge. The governor explained that he freed Cetone because of his ill health.

Willis' First Official Address.

Gov.-elect Willis will make his first official address to the farmers at their annual meeting, to be held in Columbus the second week in January. Outside speakers will be Prof. C. B. Smith of Washington and Ezra A. Tuttle of New York city, and Prof. Brown of the federal agricultural department.

Correspondents Name Officers.

J. W. Faulkner, Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer, Sunday afternoon retired as president of the Ohio Newspaper Correspondents' association after many years of service. John T. Bourke of the Cleveland Leader was selected as his successor. Other officers named were J. H. Galbreith, Columbus Dispatch, vice president; Joseph Sullivan, Cincinnati Times-Star, secretary; D. A. Donovan, Columbus Dispatch and Western Newspaper Union, treasurer; A. E. McKee, Cleveland Plain Dealer, sergeant-at-arms.

Nichols Takes Oath of Office.

Chief Justice Hugh L. Nichols recently took the oath of office for his new six-year term, which begins on New Year's day. The obligation was administered to him by Judge Oscar W. Newman. After taking the oath the chief justice administered the oath to Judges Thomas A. Jones of Jackson and Edward S. Matthias of Van Wert, who take their places on the supreme bench with the beginning of the new year. The court will convene next Tuesday morning for its new term work.

NAVY NOT STARVED

Congress Has Been Liberal With Appropriations.

Figures Show That Republican Administrations Squandered Money Designed for the Upbuilding of the Country's Fleets.

Our neighbor the Sun has joined with the World in expressing a healthy curiosity to know what has become of all the immense sums of money that the American people have spent on the navy during the past 16 years.

The World has repeatedly called attention to the disconcerting fact that our naval expenditures exceed those of Germany and Austria combined, yet Admiral Fiske has testified that it would take five years to get the American navy into a state of efficiency equal to that of the German navy.

The Sun has taken the trouble to compile the naval appropriations of the United States and Germany for the last 16 years. It finds that the total appropriations for the American navy during that time aggregate $1,645,000,186. The total appropriations for the German navy during these 16 years are only $1,237,915,960. Since the Spanish-American war the American people have spent $400,000,000 more on their navy than the Germans have spent, and now we are told by naval experts that our navy is inferior in all respects to the German navy.

It is plain that congress has not starved the navy. No other navy, except the British, has received such generous appropriations. It is equally plain that the American people have not had a dollar's worth of navy for a dollar's worth of expenditure.

The present controversy gets us nowhere—the clamor for four battleships in place of two, the unstinted abuse of Secretary Daniels and the attempt to play party politics with the national defense. The secret of our naval inferiority is obviously in its organization, and until that is remedied there will be no remedy.

For years the army organization was notoriously antiquated. Nothing was done about it until it broke down during the Spanish-American war and the whole country screamed for a victim, which it found in Secretary Alger. Then Elihu Root was allowed to frame a bill that gave the country a modern army organization. Must we wait until the navy has broken down in time of national peril to secure similar legislation reorganizing the navy?—New York World.

The National Defense.

The report of the secretary of war furnishes a needed commentary on that part of the president's address dealing with the question of national defense. Since it is inconceivable that Secretary Garrison is in conflict with his chief, it follows that his recommendations accord with the president's estimate of the country's needs.

Those recommendations are singularly close to the reforms on which the Journal has insisted as necessary to national safety. Three corps—120,000 men—in the regular army, the rapid formation of a trained reserve, the addition of 1,000 officers to the present force at the earliest possible moment—every thinking man must agree that this is a modest program for a rich and isolated nation of 100,000,000 people.

Best of all, the secretary's report takes the question of national defense out of the hands of partisan jingoes whose clamor would have disgusted the American people and made rational reform impossible.—Chicago Journal.

Fifty Millions a Month.

We desire again to press home the question asked in these columns on Saturday morning: how can the business of a country remain good when its customers quit buying? Republican criticism of the operation of the Underwood tariff is offered for political effect only, and with the tongue in the cheek. During the first ten months of 1913 the United States sold in the foreign market a billion and a half dollars' worth of manufactures and materials for manufacturing. During the first ten months of 1914 we sold just a billion dollars' worth. This meant a loss of income from exports of more than five hundred million dollars—fifty millions a month, a full third of last year's business. How absurd it is to overlook the great fact that our customers ceased buying of us to the extent of hundreds of millions and hurl general imprecations at the tariff!—St. Louis Republic.

Silly Expression.

Closed factories are not the result of the war, they are the result of a free-trade tariff.—New York Evening Mail.

Why speak of a tariff higher than that of any other nation on earth, with the possible exception of Japan, as "a free trade tariff"?

Increase in Navy Personnel.

In his aspirations for a carefully organized body of naval reserves, Secretary Daniels is on familiar ground. Every man who gives any study to a war machine, afloat or ashore, must realize the vital need of reserves under modern conditions of conflict. Probably Mr. Daniels is right in not asking for any increase in the personnel of the navy at this time but it is certain that such an increase must come before long, unless a general disarmament follows the great war now raging in Europe.

Country's Great Need.

The factors of basic prosperity are present. These are good crops, the absence of international complications, the biggest export business in the history of the nation with a rising tide of manufactures due to the growth of domestic enterprise. Here, however, is where the snag comes. The country needs more of the spirit of venture and better support by the banks for this spirit upon the part of [illegible] are ready [illegible] forms of an [illegible]

STOP EATING MEAT IF KIDNEYS OR BACK HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Clean Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

MONEY MOST WISELY SPENT

Millions Expended in the Campaign Against Tuberculosis Will Surely Have Its Effect.

More than 20,500,000 was spent last year in the campaign against tuberculosis in the United States. Of this sum 66.8 per cent was derived from public funds, either federal, state, county or municipal, and the remainder was contributed by private philanthropy. These are some of the interesting figures contained in the annual statistical statement of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, made public recently. The statement is based largely on actual reports received from antituberculosis agencies located throughout the country, but where reports are not available, the figures have been estimated.

Institutional care and treatment of consumptives in hospitals and sanatoria makes up the largest share of the total expenditure. More than $17,300,000 was spent for this purpose, with an additional $925,000 for special treatment of tuberculous insane and prisoners. These figures include not only the cost of maintenance, but in some instances the cost of construction of institutions. Antituberculosis associations spent the next largest sum, amounting to a little over $900,000. Care of patients in dispensaries and by visiting nurses cost almost as much, approximately $860,000. The growth of the open-air school movement is shown in the fact that last year more than $300,000 was spent for this purpose, as against $10,000 expended five years ago. State and city boards of health spent $200,000 directly on tuberculosis work.

Cause of the Chill.

"Sut Captain Hawley," said the handsome Miss Plole coquettishly, "will you love me when I grow old and ugly?"

"My dear Miss Plute," answered the captain gallantly, "you may grow older, but you will never grow uglier."

And he wondered why their friendship ceased so suddenly.

Very Likely He Could.

A man walked into a barber shop and removed his hat and coat. He was evidently in a hurry.

"Can you shave me if I do not remove my collar?" he asked impatiently.

"Yes, sir," said the obliging barber.

The man took his seat in the chair, and the barber prepared for business. As he surveyed his customer he noted that the hair had all gone from the top of his head and that his hirsute adornment was limited to a fringe of hair above the neck. Then the barber spoke, as he drew the cloth around his customer's neck and fastened it at the back:

"And I think I could cut your hair if you did not remove your hat."—Columbus Dispatch.

Some people know they are wrong but go ahead anyhow.

STICK TO IT

Until Coffee Hits You Hard.

It is about as well to advise people to stick to coffee until they get hit hard enough so that they will never forget their experience.

A woman writes and her letter is condensed to give the facts in a short space:

"I was a coffee slave and stuck to it like a toper to his 'cups,' notwithstanding I frequently had severe attacks of sick headache; then I used more coffee to relieve the headache, and this was well enough until the coffee effect wore off.

"Finally attacks of rheumatism began to appear, and ultimately the whole nervous system began to break down and I was fast becoming a wreck.

"After a time I was induced to quit coffee and take up Postum. This was half a year ago. The result has been most satisfactory.

"The rheumatism is gone entirely, nerves practically well and steady, digestion almost perfect, never have any more sick headaches and am gaining steadily in weight and strength."

GET BUSY.

If you want prosperity do your own share to bring it and DO IT NOW. Get that addition to your shop going; it will cost you less today than six months hence. Is trade a bit dull at the works? Get those improvements begun, better start it yourself before things get the start of you.

This country slows down a bit now and then, but it never stops growing and it always moves up and not down. We don't know what it means in most of the United States to have real general distress. Think of Belgium and Poland, O man with a grouch, and slink into your hole and pull it in after you! Then think of your sins and your blessings and come out with your courage in working order.

There are lots of good American examples of pluck. Do you remember San Francisco and Galveston and Chicago, Boston, Charleston, Baltimore and Dayton and many others like them? Remember Thomas Edison and lots of others of your fellow citizens who showed pluck when things went hard!

Nothing's the matter with the man with a grouch except an absentee heart and missing nerve. Cheer up, go to work, do your level best, quit talking misery. The war's over yonder—not here. Men are slaughtered yonder—they are living here. It's all clouds there—clear day here.

GET OUT AND SELL SOME GOODS. PLANT SOME MORE ACRES. DO MORE WORK THAN YOU PLANNED. TALK CHEERFULLY, AND YOU WILL FIND THIS COUNTRY OF OURS IS A PRETTY GOOD PLACE AFTER ALL.

Of the Commerce Department.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

For years the public speakers, who used to stir father up into buying something for mother besides a new ax, have told their terrible tales about the loneliness of farm life and concluded their emphatic statements by saying that there were at least twice as many country women in the insane asylum as there were women from the cities. This slander on rural life has been accepted for years with scarcely a challenge, but now the sunlight of fact has been turned on.

Out of the more than 60,000 persons admitted to hospitals for the insane in one year, more than 36,000 came from cities or incorporated towns of more than 2,500 inhabitants while only about 20,000 came from the country. Or, getting at it in a better way, forty-one persons out of every 100,000 population in the rural districts were insane, while eighty-six out of every 100,000 in the cities were placed in asylums. Country women do in many cases lead a lonely life, and the head of the house does need to be scared or entreated into making the burden lighter for his wife, but the reformer will have to get some other story. With two or three times as many people becoming insane in the city as in the country we can hardly blame the isolation of country life with causing insanity.

A NARROW MARGIN.

We very naturally think of the successful people as separated from the failures by a wide gulf, whereas the difference between them may be comparatively trifling. The prize winner in a race may cross the line barely five seconds ahead of his closest competitor. The one who succeeds may do his work only a little bit better than somebody else, and the failure may drop just a little below the accepted standard. And on the whole, this is encouraging, because it shows that almost any man who is willing to set his teeth and try again can turn failure into success.

Brought Back From Youngstown.

Harold Hall, better known as "Hap" was brought back from Youngstown Monday by Sheriff Ora Spink and was given a hearing in probate court Tuesday afternoon.

Hall has been a resident of Geneva for several years and is said to have been implicated in several little stealing scrapes that occurred in that village this fall. In company with Aubrey Craig of Mentor Hall visited Geneva and the boys left two gold bracelets at a restaurant.

Craig is thought to have knowledge of some of the robberies which have taken place in this county and it was in hopes of finding a clue to him that the officers had Hall taken into custody.

The jewelry recovered at Geneva was not that taken from the Hawgood residence nor from the Barrett store and after a heart to heart talk with Hall the officials allowed him to go on his own recognizance upon his promise to return to Painesville should his testimony be needed.

Madison Home

Mrs. Harriet Corlett of North Madison, and Mrs. Gladys Robinson of Dorset, Ohio, called to see Mrs. Suson P. Six on New Year's day.

Mr. W. R. Marsh of Detroit has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Nancy Kiser, for several days, came New Year's day and left Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster of Painesville visited Mrs. Wm. Crowlay on the 2d.

Mr. Cerry Guisewite of Painesville made his aunt, Mrs. E. Sassaman, a pleasant call Sunday.

Mrs. E. L. Norton, Mrs. L. H. Corlett and Miss Dorothy Ella Corlett, of Painesville, were callers on Mrs. Maria Bushnell Monday.

New Year's day passed off very enjoyably to the members of the Home. The W. R. C. No. 29 of Xenia, sent a half pound box of candy and a handkerchief to each member (came too late for Xmas), oranges and apples were provided, which made quite a treat. The Xmas decorations were still in vogue, and a program was given.

The following is contributed by a member, Mrs. Kate M. Greene, in regard to the services on New Year's day: Mrs. Emogene N. Marshall, Matron of The Madison Home, who is ever ready to enhance any pleasure that will enliven the members of the Home, planned and successfully executed the following program for their entertainment on New Year's day: Introductory speech by Mrs. Marshall, which delighted her hearers both old and young; "California and You," "Serenade," by Mrs. Wiker with phonograph; Recitation, "The New Year," Mrs. Julia Lyle; Song, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," Mrs. Emogene Marshall and Miss Mildred Sharpe; Recitation, "The Wife Hunting Deacon," Miss Frieda Zander; "Hungarian Rag," "When the Bell in the Light House Rings," Phonograph, Mrs. Wiker; Reading, "A Midsummer Visit from Santa"; "The Irish Washer Woman" Piano and German Harp, Miss Mildred Sharpe and Mrs. Emogene Marshall; "You're My Girl," Medley "The Dear Old Songs" "Lorena" Quartette, Phonograph, Mrs. Wiker; "Home, Sweet Home," Piano and German Harp, Mrs. Emogene Marshall; Original Poem, Mrs. Emogene Marshall; Song, "Rig-a-jig" Mrs. Emogene Marshall and Miss Mildred Sharpe; "G. A. R. Patrol" Band, "A Dream" Cornet, "The Nightingale" Phonograph, Mrs. Wiker. The original poem by Mrs. Marshall deserves special commendation. Not only did she allude to each member individually, but to the Superintendent and each employee as well, with rhymes well suited to each. In the special commendation line, "The Irish Washer Woman," must not be overlooked, rendered by Mrs. Marshall, on the German Harp, accompanied by Miss Mildred Sharpe at the piano, which brought forth great applause. The selections on the phonograph by Mrs. Wiker were enjoyed by all. The recitations and reading by Mrs. Lyle and Miss Frieda Zander were enthusiastically received. Miss Mildred Sharpe, the accompanist, deserves credit for her able assistance at the piano and with the singing. The selections on the Piano and German Harp were lively and enjoyed exceedingly, and the songs "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" and "Rig-a-jig" were in such a lively strain no one could feel ache or pain. The magnificent Christmas tree had been left undisturbed, and added cheer to the New Year's entertainment, a tree that bore bountifully both at the Merry Christmas time and the Happy New Year. We trust the undisturbed tree is a symbol that the incoming Governor will leave the management of The Madison Home just as it is.

Volume XVI. No. 47 PAINESVILLE, OHIO, JANUARY 14, 1915 One Dollar Per Year

PAINESVILLE WATER RATES ARE BOOSTED BY COUNCIL

Increase of Practically Twenty per cent Recommended by Director and Approved by the Council.

Water rates for Painesville have gone up and the raise will affect the small consumer, the factory owners, railroads and all of the 1650 customers now being supplied by the city plant. To the small consumer the raise will amount to practically 20% and forty per cent. of the patrons of the plant come in under that head.

It is expected that under the new rates the revenue of the water works will be increased $5,000 a year. To operate and care for the plant and meet all expenses $28,000 will be required this year and under the old assessment the income was but $26,000. This left a deficiency of $2,000, with nothing charged off for depreciation of the plant.

Fairport will not be affected by the raise as there is a contract between that village and Painesville which has several years to run. In Painesville township, outside city limits, rates will be advanced. Richmond has a contract with the city fixing the price of water at that price.

O. W. Kile, Chester Hard and a number of the councilmen spoke on the question and every member present voted for the raise in rates after the reading of the complete statement of the water works plant, cost, rates and reasons for change prepared with great care by Director of Service Martin A. Tuttle. The statement follows:

Server's Report.

To the Council of the City of Painesville.

Gentlemen —

In 1886, the then Village of Painesville purchased from the Painesville Water Works Company, the Water Works Plant for the price of $150,000.00. This amount was paid from the proceeds of a Bond issue authorized by vote of the people. These bonds fell due at the rate of $5,000.00 per year, covering a period of 30 years from date of issue and drew 4 per cent interest. These bonds were sold at a premium of about $5,000.00 and this premium was used to pay the first $5,000.00 of bonds that fell due. At the time of the purchase of the plant, it was expected that its income from the sale of water would be sufficient to pay the operating expenses and to retire the bonds and interest as the sum fell due. The receipts of the plant were not sufficient to do this and from that time down until 1903, the bonds were refunded as they fell due until there were issued $25,437.50 of refunding bonds. In 1903, however, a tax levy was made by the [illegible] the bond debt and that levy has been continued down to the present time. Beginning with 1903, the bonds and interest were paid as they fell due, so that at this time, there are outstanding $60,000.00 of the original issue and $25,437.50 of the refunding bonds. Because of extensions made [illegible]

January Term Opens

Court opened Monday morning with Judge A. G. Reynolds on the bench. After the grand jury was charged the civil docket was read. The following cases were assigned for hearing on motion and demurrers:

Farquharson vs Farquharson.
Ely vs Babcock.
Paplowsky Plumbing Co. vs Board of Education, Fairport.
Schnerer vs B. & O. R. B. Co.
Croxton Mining Co. vs Hubbard.
Daykin vs Parmly.
State of Ohio ex rel vs Shepherd.
A. J. McAdams Co. vs Hopper.

GRAND JURY FINDS NINE TRUE BILLS

The grand jury was charged at 10 o'clock Monday morning and finished its deliberations at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, J. C. Barto acting as foreman. Twenty-six witnesses were examined in nine cases and nine true bills were returned. Following are the indictments:

Edward Schissler, murder in the second degree. According to the indictment Schissler is responsible for the death of George Balden which occurred on Sept. 1 on the Clark farm where both men were employed. Balden was found dead with a bullet hole through his head and Schissler disappeared and has not been apprehended.

Andy Lobo, cutting and stabbing with intent to wound and kill. It is charged that Lobo made an assault on Mike Tomchik on July 26.

Leo Bauer, burglary. Bauer is charged with attempting to enter a Fairport barber shop on December 29, in the night season.

Lewis Dieson, robbery. On December 27 Dieson is said to have grabbed a $10 bill from S. B. Leach a resident of the Nursery district.

Jim Fisher, indecent exposure. This offense is charged to have taken place on January 8.

Joseph Morrison, arson. Morrison is held for trial on the charge of burning the summer home of Mrs. F. M. Osborne on the night of December 30.

"Henpecked Henry."

Dull care will have no place at the Utopia Tuesday, Jan. 19th, when the famous Cartoon Musical Farce, "Henpecked Henry" will hold forth for one night only. It depicts certain phases of married life in a most original manner, but at no time does it overstep the line of refinement.

Henry Bowser, a retired banker from Kalamazoo, Mich., visits Chicago with his daughter and domineering wife. Henry is a gay blade when wifey is not looking and much to his joy starts a flirtation with a celebrated vaudeville comedienne who is living in the same hotel. His attentions to the actress and her numerous assistants arouses the jealousy of his wife who watches him with the eye of a hawk. While the parents are thus busily engaged the daughter falls desperately in love with an impecunious young college chap. A sudden turn in the situation causes Henry's wife to order him to make love to the actress. He obeys so well that she renounces him and turns the play into mock tragedy. The incidental music and song numbers are of the light whistly kind and a most capable company of farceurs, singers, dancers and girly girls make up the personnel of the presenting cast.

"Hall Did It."

All around Painesville, on store fronts, deadwalls and bill boards may be found attractive signs, each bearing besides the usual advertising matter, the slogan "Hall Did It." All this, however, is just a prelude to the announcement that a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hall of Charlotte Avenue Saturday morning, January 9th.

LIGHT AND POWER RATES MAY PLAY GAME SEE-SAW

Council Talks Over Plan of Raising Minimum Rate on Lights and Cutting Down Power Price.

That fifty cents a month is entirely too low a minimum rate for house lights is the opinion of practically every member of the city council. The matter of raising this rate and cutting down the power rate was brought up by Councilman George McLeod Monday evening and while no official action was taken, councilmen and city officials expressed themselves freely on the subject.

Painesville has something over 900 electric light users. In the summer time fully three-fourths of these do not use over the minimum amount of juice and their bills are fifty cents a month. Everyone admitted that this charge was too low, that it would hardly pay for the meter reading, bookkeeping, etc., to say nothing of the current used. One dollar a month is considered nearer the proper rate.

In the matter of factory power Councilmen McLeod stated that the Business Man's Club and others were anxious to have power rates reduced, charging that industries were being kept out of town by the present price. Server M. A. Tuttle stated that the power rate for day current could be reduced materially—even one-half—providing the city had the proper equipment so that factory owners could be guaranteed juice at any and all times.

The matter will be taken up later and full reports of the receipts and expenditures of the light plant will be prepared.

It Paves the Way.

If you have something good to sell it pays to advertise it well; let people know what you're about and sales will come beyond a doubt. The man who whispers down a well about the goods he has to sell, will never reap the golden dollars like he who climbs a tree and hollers. So climb a tree right o'er the crowd and holler long and holler loud, and when you've got 'em on the run, your selling game is well begun—which is another way to say that advertising paves the way.

DIAMOND ALKALI CO. TO ENLARGE PLANT

The Diamond Alkali Co., Lake county's leading industry, is preparing to greatly increase the capacity of the Fairport plant. Actual work will start in about two weeks.

The improvements will include an addition to the works, the new building to be 180 feet long and 150 feet in width. Surveyors are now busy laying out new railroad sidings so that material may be placed on the ground just where it is needed. It is expected that ground will be broken for the building some time this month.

It will take several months to construct the big building and equip it with machinery and this work will give employment to a large number of men. The regular factory force will be increased as soon as the new plant is ready for operation.

WILLIS FROWNS ON IDEA OF GOVERNOR BEING A DICTATOR

New Executive, in His Inaugural Address, Declares That the Making of Laws and Their Enforcement Must Not Be in Same Hands.

Columbus, declaring that the making of the laws and the execution of those laws should not be in same hands," and urging that the elder executive of state must not usurp the role of dictator, Gov. Frank B. Willis, in his inaugural address, delivered yesterday, as follows:

To the People of Ohio:

The inauguration of officials with intentional concurrence, however simple or impressive, by no means is an occasion by the people of their personal interest in the affairs of state. Instead, it is a time for reflection upon the principles of government and political liberty, or criticism of a vanquished foe. It is rather an occasion for mind all the people, regardless of party affiliations, to consider the duties of citizenship, and to resolve from time to time upon hands a portion of the people's power has been placed for a fixed term and who in turn by their possession, with certain responsibilities, themselves to expend the trusts of office for the benefit of the people. Hence, it is meet, conducive to the best and to promote the public welfare.

It is said that in certain of the Swiss cantons a part of the occasion at a festival upon the induction into office of the chief magistrate is the admonition to the retiring executive not to allow his zeal to carry him beyond his powers, as chief magistrate of the canton he has just taken leave of, to enforce the laws. In this commonwealth we deem it unnecessary to place the people on oath to obey our laws and statutes. Our people are law abiding and are rapidly in judgment more through and by pressure by opinion convenient. In such a state as ours where people understand and are willing to accept of laws and obey the rights of others, and where the people are governed and will be governed by the people's representatives, the constitutional authority and limitations fixed to be necessary by the experience of the ages. The sense of respect for the law and obedience to its provisions is high and must not be allowed. The usual duty of the court, and the duty of the people, is fully considered. This duty will be performed unhesitingly to the end that the dignity of our state may be upheld and the citizens prospered to the uttermost extent of the constitutional commonwealth.

It is well that the people of Ohio are in a state of mind to accept of their duties as well as to exercise their rights and executive officials in a measure are responsible for the state of mind they are in. It is right that there should be question. Unauthorized authority makes not for law, nor, against his officials, unless his taxes and spends in excessive or free. His sense of exploitation given constantly free and unrestrained, the people, in time, will be made disinclined. It is not improbable that in a benevolent autocracy a higher degree of care, order of government would be easy temporary. It is not improbable that a thousand years of it will produce and develop the free-can-do-no-wrong-and-must-not-be-questioned-and-must-be-obeyed-and-must-be-supported-in-the-exercise-of-the-duties-of-office, political rights and correlative expenditures. Efficiency is desirable in government and it may be attained without the people's right to vote. It is not desirable that the people should be ignorant of their government by the people is a myth. Efficiency is important, self-government is priceless. The remedy for any possible weakness of government is more and better government by the people

A MISSING VOLUME

The Bible has always been the book of books in the country home but there formerly was a little yellow-covered volume hanging in the chimney corner that ran the Good Book a close race in the matter of popularity. We refer to the almanac.

In the good old days every well regulated home had from one to six almanacs hung up by the kitchen stove and they were religiously consulted on all topics of importance, including the weather, proper feeding of babies and calves, time to set a hen or plant a garden. These books also contained a "choice" assortment of jokes and new conundrums like "Why does the chicken cross the road?" and "When is a door not a door?"

Nowadays, when we can buy our favorite magazine for $3 a year with a set of books and a book case thrown in, the almanac has lost favor and this is probably just as well. Like other good things, this old book has had its day, and whenever all the people quit planting their gardens and trimming their corns according to the almanac we'll have a more successful world to wander around in.

TURKEYLESS HOLIDAYS.

Thanksgiving and Christmas without turkey. If not exactly a probability it seems at least a possibility, according to the Federal Department of Agriculture experts, who disclose the surprising fact that within the past ten years the number of turkeys raised in this country has shrunk almost one-half.

Alarmed by the showing, the Department of Agriculture has engaged Andrew S. Welant, a California expert on turkeys, to tour the country and make a thorough study of the situation. Most of the decline, it is believed, has been caused by disease, and Mr. Welant will be expected to investigate means of checking this. Already the experiment station in Rhode Island is making an exhaustive study of "blackhead" the chief ravage. Enough has been learned about this ailment, which affects the turkey's liver, to justify the suspicion that it has been caused by over feeding. The eagerness to fatten birds thus overreaches itself and causes, instead, scarcity.

LOOKING YOUSELF OVER

Some keen advice appears in an editorial in the New England Homestead. See if you don't agree:

It is a good thing at least once a year for every farmer to stand aside and look at his place as if it belonged to some other fellow, and pick out the things this other fellow has left undone. Sticking too close to the work sometimes narrows a man's vision and makes him overlook important things. By going past a pile of rubbish four or five times a day you finally come to think it belongs there, just as a man will sometimes plow around an old stump year after year as if it were established there by Divine mandate.

If this is true of the farmer, isn't it equally true of every other calling? Why shouldn't the doctor, lawyer, teacher, tradesman or merchant form the habit of checking themselves up thoroughly from time to time? Such a personal inventory is bound to be interesting and may be made profitable.

WE DON'T NEED IT.

The decline of the lecture platform—25 years ago one of the institutions of the United States—is easily explained. First and most important is the development of the popular magazine. Today there are forty periodical publications where forty years ago there was one. And there is hardly a man in the country, from the President down, who is not easily prevailed upon to say through the magazines what he would have said on the lecture platform a quarter of a century ago—and to say it more [illegible] and more completely and [illegible]

A second reason is the development of the newspaper interview. Men of importance today freely give out their opinions through the daily press. A third and great reason for the decline of the lecture platform is the growth of the theatrical business, which has rapidly followed the gradual disappearance of old-time churchy prejudice against the stage.

DIPPING THE DIPS.

This blessed country of ours, says Paragrafs, has been dipping the dips in a business way for the past two months. Consequently it is somewhat dizzy; but it is better to be that way than to get into the mess in which Europe has been plunged.

We have slid down some terrifying declivities—and we have had to hold on tight to the car of common sense to keep from falling overboard. But we are still on the tracks and the dips are getting less and less worrisome.

The thing to do just now is not to yell, not to gloom, and not to think the world is coming to an end or that business has gone to the bow-wows. America is safe and sane and every one of us owes it to himself and his neighbor to stick to the job of being sensible.

PUT ON THE BRAKES.

Slow up, Mr. Man, you are handicapping your physical ability to keep pace with your crazy head-long whims and manifold nervous desires. Most of your wants are imaginary; you think you need them, but its the spirit, the nervous spirit of the times, urging you to keep up with the procession. Ignore these imaginary wants and your nerves will settle down. The nerves of the average American are awake twenty-four hours in the day and then we wonder what is the matter with us.

PAINESVILLE ON MAP

New History Tells of Perkins Camp and the Girdled Road.

That the first surveyed road in northern Ohio was run through Painesville and that the man who superintended the surveying was cautioned not to sell land along the road for less than one dollar an acre are among the interesting facts told in the sixth volume of Randall and Ryan's History of Ohio, which is being published by the Century History Company of New York.

General Simon Perkins was the pioneer surveyor and it was in 1798 that he was commissioned to proceed to the property of the Connecticut Land Co., make surveys and explorations, effect sales to best advantage, etc. While the details of the transactions were left to his judgment, it was stipulated that no land should be sold for less than one dollar an acre.

In the month of June, 1798, Mr. Perkins left Owego, N. Y., accompanied by James Pumpelly, whom he had selected as his chief assistant. They went by way of Cayuga and Ontario lakes to Buffalo, where they obtained a batteau, and then coasted up Lake Erie.

Arriving at the mouth of Grand River on the 4th of July—just two years after the historic landing of the Cleveland party some miles farther west—they disembarked and started for the interior. A camp was established four miles south of what is now the city of Painesville, and steps were at once taken to survey a road—the first in northern Ohio. It ran by the camp, and at that point the original name, "The Girdled Road" is still retained; farther west the road becomes the far-famed Euclid avenue. On June 14, 1912 the New Connecticut Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution placed tablets at the sites of Perkins Camp and the Girdled Road.

Mr. Perkins assigned the surveying part of the work to others and himself undertook the more important business of examining the country, determining as to the relative advantages, values, the prospects of the lands. After three months he returned east and made his report to the company in Connecticut.

As Sherman Said, War is H—l

A short time ago a party of local men, combining business with pleasure, made an auto trip into Ashtabula county and in the course of their wanderings, came to a little house-store located close to the upper waters of Grand river and presided over by a quaint character known as "Uncle Breck."

The members of the party entered the store and after a session around the big box stove a call was made for cigars and "Uncle Breck" set out a box of [illegible] marked "three for five." [illegible] asked one of the visitors.

"Nope," responded the old man, "I used to keep some mighty good two-fers, but since this war came on the boys just couldn't afford to smoke 'em."

Health League Meets.

Annual meeting of the health league was held Saturday. Officers were elected and plans for building a "tuberculosis shack" for instruction in the treatment of the disease were discussed.

The report of Miss Routledge, county nurse, showed that 110 patients had been visited. Of these, 30 were cases of tuberculosis and 80 of other diseases; total number of visits 1,270.

Waite Hill

It's Governor Willis now.

Mr. and Mrs. John Page and son Roland, started Sunday for Florida, to spend the winter.

This Tuesday the W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. George Ellsworth.

Kirtland high school gave an entertainment Saturday evening at Town Hall.

The Hunt supper was held at Elmer Sperry's Friday evening.

Mrs. Raser was taken suddenly very ill one day last week, and at first they thought she would have to go to the hospital, but she got so much better, they concluded she wouldn't have to go.

We're having lovely winter weather now. Couldn't ask for better.

Among the relatives around here that attended the funeral Saturday of their cousin, Mrs. Cordelia Radcliffe of Mentor, were: Miss Lillian Cox and sister, Mrs. Arthur Martin, Mr. Cyrus Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Volney Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stevens, Mr. George Smith and daughter, Mrs. Ed Flyer.

The Maple Grove Grange benefit social last Saturday evening was a success, about eighty attended and $11.90 was realized which will help quite a little in relieving some unfortunate family. The Waite Hill orchestra rendered some fine music for them, and with cards, dancing, and a "big" supper to get away with, the evening was much enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cox, the newlyweds, were Sunday guests of his brother, L. D. Cox and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Carpenter of Cleveland were Sunday guests of their daughter, Mrs. Milton McClintock and family.

Sherman Fenner and family spent Sunday at his brother Lyman's, in South Kirtland.

The Benes family were down from the city Sunday to their country home. They motored down.

Mrs. Malkie has been spending several days in Cleveland.

Mrs. Bert Merkell was taken to Charity hospital, Cleveland, last Thursday, to be operated on for a tumor.

Miss Margaret Cox is now staying at her father's Mr. Ed Cox, on Temple Hill and attending high school, which is much easier for her than it was to tramp back and forth over these hills as she had been doing.

On Saturday evening, Jan. 2d the Maple Grove Grangers had their annual installation of officers. Mark W. Judd of Loper, Mich. was installing officer. Mr. Judd was a former resident of Waite Hill.

Lyman Fenner lost a team of horses Saturday night with spasmodic colic.

Mrs. Miranda Trever of Wickliffe is at Milton McClintock's.

Mrs. Walter Baldwin and Mrs. Raymond Frances were in Cleveland Saturday and Sunday attending quarterly meeting of the Friends church.

The South Kirtland and Chester W. C. T. U. societies were invited to meet on Friday last with the society at Wilson's Mills.

Oliver Cox has just purchased a new auto, a "Ford" of course. He has used a Ford machine for several years and now has bought the second one. By the way this speaks well for the machine.

Little Catherine Cox has gone to live with her father Ed Cox, on Temple Hill, and goes to school there, so we have lost our dear little girl out of our school.

Mrs. Clarence Parsons entertained a large company of ladies to dinner Thursday of last week.

Sunday was a fine day for motoring and many occurred to be taking advantage of it. The roads around here are in fine shape for the "Buzz buggy."

W. S. Hobart had business in Painesville Thursday of last week, and he noticed many familiar faces there from the west end of the county, and they all seemed to "fetch up at the Court House."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. [illegible]

TALK ON WESTERN CANADA.

You Don't Have to Lie About Canada—The Simple Truth Is Enough.

The natural resources of this country are so vast that they cannot be exhausted. Canada is a country full of wealth that pathetic love does the one only say, "I am more prosperous than I ever expected to be." And yet if a farmer expects to succeed on land that he has bought for pay $50 to $150 an acre for he ought to know that it cost considerable money when he finds the robust prairie sod as his disposal absolutely free. If he has a little capital, let him invest it all in live stock and farm implements and he will make more money than those who preserve and use their capital in part of the difficulties he encountered and overcame. Success in Canada is made up of two things, natural resources and human labor. Canada has the one and you the other. A farmer who has been a farmer in the Canadian government agent. If you don't hold these two forces and stop the journey the result is to your own fault.

Debt and Canada Will Not Stand Together.

You want a home, a free home, free of debt. Canada is the most difficult country for your children, and some pleasure for you. You want to be independent. Your burden here been hard, and your farm hasn't all the very hard and are discouraged. Well, I'll tell you what I can do. Just write me and I will show you that it is still have advantages. You can get a home in Western Canada. Business men and others who want to come with us to Canada will be fulfilled. If the Prairie Provinces of Canada in fall of Successful Farmers who thought they could not succeed in farming in our land, investing, continued. FAIRPORT HARBOR DRY

Port Town Votes Against Saloons by Very Small Majority

Six men, tried and true, made Fairport a dry town Tuesday. Whether the six were foreign born citizens, factory employes or business men will never be known, but just a half dozen more votes were cast on the dry side than were recorded on the wet.

The election passed off very quietly, although a large vote was polled. For weeks the wet and dry question has been almost the sole topic of conversation on the streets, in the stores and wherever men gathered. Those favoring the saloon had no organization and it is to this fact that they attribute their defeat.

First returns were received from the south precinct, or Precinct B as it is called. This was conceded by both parties to be wet territory and there was no surprise when the vote was announced as 49 dry and 76 wet. With a majority of 27 the wet man felt sure of overcoming the lead of their opponents in the other part of town.

Their hopes were dashed to earth a little later when precinct A reported 160 dry votes and 127 wet. A minute's work with a pencil showed that out of a total vote of 412, 209 were dry and 203 wet, giving the dry forces six majority.

An election official who has served on the Fairport board many times stated Tuesday evening that in A precinct not a ballot was wasted. It is customary to find blanks or spoiled ballots in the box but this time every voter seemed to know exactly how he wished to mark his ticket.

The Finn band gave a short concert on the streets in the evening, and led a parade of a large number of children through the business section. It is stated that another parade, to be headed by the Fairport band, had been arranged for, but that it was called off at the last minute, "on account of the weather."

Five Directors to be Named.

At the annual meeting of the Lake County Agricultural Society on Saturday, January 30, five directors will be elected. Those whose terms expire are E. D. Rust, Concord, W. E. Thompson, Kirtland; H. V. Shuiters, Mentor; E. J. Dickey, Willoughby; A. M. Thompson, Perry.

Membership in the society costs $1 a year, and any citizen over 21, who resides in the county, is entitled to membership and a vote at the election upon the payment of the annual dues.

There are some who have criticised the directors of the society for their omissions and commissions, and this would be a good time for the critics to become members and show just how the fair should be run.

Local Elks would like to use the fair grounds for their Fourth of July celebration this year, but, as one member expressed it, "they don't care to buy the grounds every year just for the privilege of using it one day." Members of the order may take the matter up with the directors and see if a rental considerably under $500 a day cannot be arranged.

Nab Man as Poisoner.

Clyde Thayer, 37, Chardon barber, was arrested one night last week at the instance of his wife who charged him with poisoning her. Thayer was liberated on $1,000 bond.

Thayer and his wife were found on their bed, apparently unconscious. Thayer was taken to the home of his employer and as soon as Mrs. Thayer was revived she swore to the affidavit which resulted in her husband's arrest.

A physician stated that Thayer showed evidence of having drunk poison, but said his condition was not dangerous.

Rubber Company Meeting.

At the meeting of the stockholders of the new rubber company at Willoughby last week officers were elected and the plant of the company inspected. Two more car loads of machinery are said to be on the way and the promoters hope to have at least one department in operation early in February.

G. C. Russell of Kirtland and L. R. Adams and C. B. Shaw of Willoughby are the Lake county members of the board of directors.

Death at Madison.

Alfonso Whipple, a well known resident of Madison, passed away shortly after noon Monday, after a short illness. Here's a Good One.

An Ashtabula man who was asked by his son to help him with some of the problems assigned as night work says he can't see how a boy is going to learn anything when his teacher sends him home with problems like the following: If it takes a 4 months' old woodpecker with a rubber bill 9 months and 13 days to peck a hole through a cypress log that is large enough to make 117 shingles, and it takes 165 shingles to make a bundle worth 93 cents, how long will it take a cross-eyed grasshopper with a cork leg to kick all the seeds out of a dill pickle?

AUTO GOES TO MUSEUM

First Car Built by Former Madison Resident is to be Preserved.

Some time this month the original model Oldsmobile will be placed on exhibition in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington as a historic object in connection with the automobile industry. Local interest in this announcement centers around the fact that the designer was at one time a resident of Madison and Geneva, and has many relatives living in the eastern part of the county.

R. E. Olds, who designed this car, conducted a little machine shop in Geneva many years ago and was always "tinkering around" on some kind of an invention. His car is commonly looked upon as the grandsire of the motor car business and about this aged relic is woven the romance of over a quarter of a century of struggles, tragedies and successes, marking the formative period of the automobile industry.

Plans were laid as far back as 1885 for building the vehicle. It was not until 1895, however, that the car finally was designed and built. It was officially exhibited in 1899. It was laboriously hammered and molded out of metal at Lansing, Mich. The car presents a strange combination of the horse-drawn and power-driven vehicle. The motor is a one-cylinder, gasoline engine. A 10 gallon gasoline tank is located under the rear seat.

Placed in contrast with the modern high powered and luxurious cars of today, the remarkable evolution of the automobile is strikingly illustrated.

Winans Gets Good Places

Senator J. V. Winans of Madison has been honored by being placed at the head of two of the important committees of the Ohio Senate and has a place on a number of other committees.

Senator Winans is chairman of the committee on Medical Colleges and Societies, also the committee on Federal Relations. He was named as a member of the committees on Temperance, Public Education, Public Utilities, Public Health, Agriculture, Banks and Savings Societies, and Finance.

Four drys to three wets is the make-up of the temperance committee, to which will go the liquor license legislation. On this committee are J. L. McDermott, M. B. Archer, J. V. Winans and A. R. Garver, dry Republicans, Lewis P. Pink, wet Republican, and Hermon Fellinger and J. E. Holden, wet Democrats. There promises to be some heated session of this committee.

Easier to Get Married.

If the bill fathered by Senator M. B. Archer should become a law it will not be necessary for brides-elect to appear in person at the probate court to obtain a marriage license.

Under the proposed law the lady can send an affidavit by the groom, or if illness should prevent the groom's appearance in court he may send an affidavit. Under these changes a marriage license may be issued under certain conditions without either of the interested parties appearing.

Attended Funeral.

Several from Painesville attended the funeral of Mrs. Harland Gill which was held at Madison Saturday. Mrs. Gill was 48 years of age and died in Canton, Ohio, after a short illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Gill were residents of Madison until the last three years. A husband, son and daughter, two brothers, one of them ex-commissioner Clinton Phelps, survive.

Painter Found Guilty.

Fred Powers, painter, who was arrested some time ago on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses from a Madison lady, appeared before Probate Judge C. H. Nye Monday, was found guilty and fined $5 and costs.

Powers had been in jail for several weeks and the judge took this into consideration in passing sentence. Powers also agreed to refund the $[illegible] which he obtained at Madison as soon as he was able to earn the [illegible]

Mrs. Emma Root, wife of M. S. Root, proprietor of the Park Hotel at Chardon, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide one day last week.

N. K. Dhalawani, an Oberlin student, has been giving very interesting lectures in the schools of the county on the life and social customs of his native country, India.

Geneva Farmers' Institute will be held Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 1 and 2. State speakers will be J. S. Brigham, Bowling Green; J. J. Crumley, Wooster; Miss Inez Plotner, West Mansfield.

Judge J. B. Burrows attained his eighty-first birthday Monday. The venerable jurist has been confined to his bed for the past month but was able to receive congratulations from a few of his many friends.

No Farmers' Institute for Painesville this year, and those who want to keep posted on all the wrinkles in agriculture will have to journey over to the City of LeRoy, where a fine institute will be held early in February.

Many local people attended the auto show in Cleveland this week and came home talking learnedly about transmission, center control, floating axles and how to prevent the differential calculus from becoming short-circuited with the kabala.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice M. Saslaw have returned from their wedding trip which included a visit to New York, Washington, Pittsburg, and other eastern cities. They will make their home in Cleveland until Spring, Mr. Saslaw making daily trips to this city to look after his clothing business.

Expected that 100 car loads of peaches will be shipped from Geneva this year. Thousands of trees have been set out and they are just coming into bearing. A manager will superintend the marketing of the fruit. Under normal conditions 200 car loads are looked for next season.

Jerry C. Palmer, of Willoughby, well known in Lake county has organized the Western Reserve Panama Excursion Company to provide personally conducted excursions to the California exposition. Mr. Palmer is president of the company, Patrick O'Brien is secretary and F. W. Sarnes and Frank Hughes are directors. Mr. Palmer is a hustler and any one who joins his excursion party will be shown a good time and an enjoyable trip through the west.

Bids Close Soon.

Bids are to close on January 20 for constructing an $85,000 school building at Willoughby. The building will be 80x127 feet, two stories high and to be constructed of brick, stone and terra cotta.

Plans for the work were prepared by Architect Franz Warner, Hippodrome building, Cleveland. Specifications call for face brick, cut stone, terra cotta, reinforcing concrete, reinforcing steel, marble and tile work, heating, lighting and plumbing systems.

Perry Will Pave.

At an election held Wednesday, the voters of Perry village and township gave the paving proposition a large majority. Official figures are not at hand at the hour of going to press, but the paving carried by about three to one.

In the village the vote on issuing $20,000 worth of bonds was 95 for, and 29 against. On the Township bond issue the village gave 92 votes for and 28 against.

Gave Fine Talk.

Gordon S. Meek gave the members of the Austin class a very interesting talk Friday evening, his subject being the Bermuda Islands. Post cards were used as illustrations. Thirty members of the class were present at the meeting, which was held at the Baptist church. A talk by Dr. E. S. Jones and an excellent lunch were other features.

Will Live in Collinwood.

Miss Mary Ellen Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Brown of Kerr avenue, and Mr. R. A. Barhyte of Collinwood were united in marriage January 14 at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Mr. Freeborn officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Barhyte will make their home in Collinwood, where he is engaged in business.

Hold Monthly Meeting.

The district superintendents of the county held their regular monthly meeting at the office of the county superintendent Thursday afternoon. Plans were talked over for a meeting of all the teachers in the county, to be held early the coming month. A meeting of the members of all the school boards is also being arranged.

Most Merchants Know It.

There is only one way to advertise, and that is to hammer your name, your location and your business so persistently, so thoroughly into people's heads that if they walk in their sleep they will constantly turn their steps toward your store. The newspaper is your friend in spite of criticism. It helps build up the community that supports you. When the day comes that the newspapers are dead, the people are on the edge of the grave and nobody to write the epitaph.

What's Your Guess?

An exchange asks, "What has become of the old-fashioned town cut-up who was known as a perfect devil because he gave a girl a pair of silk garters as a Christmas present?"

We don't know for sure what has become of him, but he's probably married now and has to dig up about eight big round dollars for a corset with steel garter attachments and other thingabobs.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

For Vulcan Car Co.—Action Will Aid Disentanglement of Firm's Affairs.

The Vulcan Car company suspended all operations on Tuesday, owing to the application of certain of its creditors made to the federal court in Cleveland, for the appointment of a receiver of its affairs. Carl D. Friebolin was appointed temporary receiver.

It is the intention of the stockholders and directors of the company to resist the appointment of a permanent receiver or trustee of the company's affairs and to make appearance in the federal court and offer settlement on a compromise basis with its creditors so as to relieve the company's present pressing indebtedness. It is believed by those holding the largest interests in the company's business, that with the present indebtedness liquidated in this way, the company can obtain new capital and proceed with its 1915 business.

The company have already contracts for the delivery of its new 1915 model, exceeding in volume the business which it had on its books for 1914 and by a proper advertising campaign could doubtless double the amount of its 1914 business during the season of 1915.

The company has been one of Painesville's biggest industries and gave much promise of profit and good to the community, and its present embarrassment is greatly regretted by all of the business and resident interests.

Receiver Friebolin arrived in Painesville Wednesday afternoon and is now busy going over the affairs of the concern. His appointment is expected to help the company, as it will bring affairs to a head and directors and stockholders will soon know just what condition the business is in.

Ohio Can Hold Her Own.

In flavor, color and size of apples, Ohio can hold her own with any state in the union, not excluding the state of Washington.

This is the opinion of a local man who attended the winter fair and apple show at Columbus last week. There were on exhibition 2,035 trays of apples, containing 12 to 24 apples each, according to size. There were also 288 plates of apples on tables and 150 peck baskets of apples all of handsome colors and all grown in Ohio.

Madison Boy Recommended.

Howard Knudson of Madison has been recommended by Congressman Gordon for appointment as midshipman to the United States naval academy at Annapolis. Knudson is 18, an orphan, and makes his home with Senator and Mrs. J. V. Winans. He is a senior in Madison High School and will graduate next June. Knudson is also president of the Y. M. C. A. and a member of the strong Association athletic teams.

Married at Ann Arbor.

Painesville relatives have received announcements of the marriage of Miss Bernice Sinclair and Mr. Howard Boyd, which occurred Saturday at Ann Arbor, Michigan. The couple went to Detroit to the automobile show after the ceremony and after a short trip will make their home at Chelsea, Mich., where Mr. Boyd is the proprietor of a hotel.

The bride was a former resident of Madison and Geneva and has many friends and relatives here.

Crane Makers to Dine.

Employes of the Cleveland Crane & Engineering Co., located in Wickliffe, will hold a dinner and social this evening at the Wickliffe church.

C. C. Robbins, general manager of the plant, will preside. Among the speakers will be Thomas D. West, of the West Steel Castings Co., who will talk on "Foundering as an Art and Adjunct to Engineering." Music will be rendered by the shop orchestra.

A Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our thanks to the friends for the sympathy expressed at the death of our sister, Mrs. Cordin Radcliffe.

Also for the beautiful floral offerings sent us, from our pastor Brother Clark and family, the Church and Sunday School, the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society, the Ladies' Relief Corps, Mrs. Sandburg's class, the Jackson street friends, Burridge Ave. friends, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Horris, Mr. and Mrs. C. Merkle and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Epple of Cleveland, Mrs. Dr. Gerould of Cleveland, Mr. Barton Smith and family, Mr. Henry Meilly, and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Nolin of Mansfield, Ohio.

Among the friends from Painesville who brought flowers were, Mrs. Adelaide Tuttle, Mrs. W. D. Harrison, Mrs. George Williams, Mrs. C. M. Hawley, Mr. F. W. Collins, and others, friends whose names were not given.

More Nights Needed

It is stated that Painesville is to have a new lodge, providing a sufficient number of charter members can be secured. This announcement may be interesting to the married man who is looking for one more excuse for staying down town nights, but to the ordinary observer it would seem as though the city had its full quota of lodges and fraternal societies. From one to three societies meet every evening during the week, and occasional business and committee meetings are held on Sunday. If more lodges are to open it may be necessary to hold morning and afternoon sessions in order to crowd all the meetings into the space of one short week.

According to rumor, the new lodge is to be of the Order of Lions. Painesville already has flourishing lodges of the Elks and Moose, also of the Owls and Eagles, and it would seem that there is little call for more animals or birds. The Lions are undoubtedly all right in every respect but a line must be drawn somewhere or some organizer will be around after a $10 initiation fee for membership in the Fraternal Fleas or the Royal Order of Goose Pimples.

Stock Company Formed.

On account of the serious illness of A. N. Benjamin, Madison merchant and well-known produce dealer, a stock company has been formed to operate his milling and coal business, Mr. Benjamin retaining a portion of the stock.

It is expected that the new owners, who are Geneva and Madison business men, will continue to operate the mill at Madison, with a competent manager in charge. The transfer will take place as soon as a charter can be obtained and the organization completed.

The Last Shot

Now the animosities and the other from the obstacle to which the Germans had fallen back proved too close together and too strong for us. Our line was a wavy one, with many a curve of salient and a parallelogram or two ahead of the rest. Where the Germans gave the ball out to a second line behind the first, we gave it out to several shooting lines behind us. We were going in strength and depth to retrieve the infantry and automatics the Germans, with the last effort of courage, had once in the attempting-time shooting home screens of hell into a house other than was already up against the wall of the Allies. Our guns, pounding, fight knew where impatiently stood up to beatten, their counterpoints in their ears, and dropped with half relieved sighs, chagrin, and smile on their face.

The bullets from the automatics were spitting and spitting like a smoker, perhaps four or five in a minute, each their velocity and power of penetration. Where shells made gaps and this infantile the Tilman stage, the automatics fell with the regularity of the drump tools of a comb. The men were mowed down in the open and engaged on to the edge of trenches, ground their weight on top of them in the process of trying to bind the grenades of delete, and even made lowcomers from the hatches the dead. The men that neared enough to throw grenades in the trench from it rather over the trench the density of shell arrangement of exposure as it were made a wizard serious damage.

NONE OF OUR BUSINESS

One paragraph of the speech of President Wilson at Indianapolis the other day has not received the attention it deserves to receive. The casual remark to the effect that the people might have a chance to pass upon his administration received the lion share of comment, because it was taken to mean that he would again be a candidate. But here is a statement from the speech that contains more food for thought than anything else he said:

"I hold it as a fundamental principle, and so do you, that every people has the right to determine its own form of government; and until the recent revolution in Mexico, until the end of the Diaz reign, 80 per cent of the people of Mexico never had a 'look in' in determining who should be their governors or what their government should be. Now I am for the 80 per cent. It is none of my business, and it is none of your business, how they go about the business. The country is theirs. The government is theirs. The liberty, if they can get it, and God speed them in getting it, is theirs. And so far as any influence goes while I am president, nobody shall interfere with them."

"The country is theirs"—that is the meat of the coconaut. "It is none of our business"—isn't that putting the question exactly right? The trouble has been that Mexico is such a delightful country, its resources are so great, some Americans have tried to make it theirs, and have sought to make the trouble down there our trouble.

WAR AND PEACE

Auguste Rodin, the great sculptor, has given expression to a thought that has been lurking in the minds of many students of the present war. Thousands have already dimly grasped the theme so well put by the great artist when he declares:

War is but another manifestation of an age which sends men in slavery down into the bowels of the earth, in the midst of danger, to work in coal mines for a pittance, in order to enrich others; which keeps little children standing in factories; which crushes everything beautiful out of life before the juggernaut—commercialism.

This smashing indictment must at least serve to bring us up a round. Is war after all any more cruel than the commercial life of our age? Is it any more heedless in its sacrifice of human life? War is more violent in its outward forms than the commercial struggle. It slays more men in a given time. But the commercial struggle is never ending; it goes on through the centuries.

The great Rodin startles with his accusation, but the truth of it lays hold upon the memory.

POWER OF WEALTH.

How often you hear the expression, "Money will buy everything." Many people prefer to believe it and spend their days and nights scheming and planning ways to get rich quickly. All the pleasures of life are lost sight of and the beauties of nature are overlooked in their struggle for the Almighty Dollar.

Money will buy anything except life, love, happiness, friendship, peace contentment, satisfaction, respect, esteem, beauty, charm, good looks, physical perfection, good health and a few other essential things.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly ... [illegible]

Wealth

You say your great desire is wealth,
Which proves you lightly prize,
The value of your youth, and health,
The good that 'round you lies.

No one can rob you of the gold,
The sun pours down at noon,
Nor of the shining wealth untold
Flung from the silver moon.

The crystal of each bright cascade,
The brilliants of the dew,
The em'rald of each grassy blade,
They belong to you.

See, through the morning's early mist
Before they melt in fire,
The opal, beryl, and amethyst,
Beyond your heart's desire.

More sweet than incense' sweet perfume,
That orient princes burn,
Is breath of flowers rare that bloom
Around some hidden tarn.

The argosies of fleecy sails
That cruise the ether main,
Rear more than merchant's precious bales,
They bring the priceless rain.

The royal purple 'round the hills,
The sunset's gorgeous throne—
Belong to him, who only wills
To make their wealth his own.

The azure arch is nightly set
With countless starry gems,
Whose richness ne'er was rivaled yet
By all earth's diadems.

The river, and the purling stream,
The waving fields of grain—
Have song and laughter, and a gleam
All free from care and pain.

The wave that breaks on lonely shore
Tells secrets to the shell—
That you may learn, and wisely store
If you but listen well.

The green wood has its monarchs grand,
That stand like Druid slaves,
And beckon you, with welcome hand
To search its leafy caves.

No running hand has ever wore
Such gorgeous tapestry,
As mossy sward within a grove
Flecked by the sunshine free.

No artist's brush will e'er portray
Such scenes as meet your sight
No color like the dying day
No shading like the night.

And music—can you call to mind,
Such strains the soul to please,
As anthems of the mighty wind,
Played on the forest keys!

Thus earth, and sky, and mystic wood
The restless heaving sea
Are filled with treasures rare and good,
All made for you and me

Above all this you may possess,
Nor gold can buy, nor quest can find,
The greatest thing a life can bless
A well contented mind

LESS HOSTILE TO FOREIGNERS

Lives of European Explorers in Tibet Comparatively Safe—Work is Going On.

Tibet continues to hold its special fascination for explorers, and it is therefore interesting to learn from the experiences of Captains Bailey and Morshead, who recently cleared up the long-standing mystery concerning the connection between the Tsangpo and Brahmaputra rivers, that a noticeable change has come about in the attitude of the Tibetans toward foreigners. These explorers encountered no signs of hostility or distrust, except when they were mistaken for Chinese, who appear to be held in great dread. No objections were made to the surveying operations, and Capt. Morshead asserts that "it is now possible to traverse the country from end to end, openly, with plane table and theodolite, and without even the formality of a pass from Lhasa." Apparently the Tibetans have learned that the British are their best protectors from Chinese aggression. Apropos of the Tsangpo-Brahmaputra, the current number of Petermann's Mitteilungen announces that the Austrian explorer A. K. Gebauer, who is now traveling north from Burma along the Chinese-Tibetan border, intends ultimately to strike west to the Tsangpo and follow this river through the passes of the Himalaya.—Scientific American.

Blasting With Oxygen.

A practical way of using liquid oxygen for blasting has at last been found. Bags filled with a special form of lamp black are soaked in liquid oxygen for a few minutes. When detonated they explode with the force of dynamite, but when lighted with a match they burn quietly and slowly. The cost is much less than that of dynamite, much less carbon dioxide is given off, and there is no danger from a misfire, as the oxygen will evaporate quickly if not exploded at once.

Swiss Want New National Hymn.

Switzerland is seeking a new national hymn in place of "Rufst du Mein Vaterland," which is sung to the tune of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "God Save the King." It is said that there is some intention of adopting a patriotic song beginning "Heil dir, Mein Schweizerland," but whether this is to be sung to the same tune or a new one is to be evolved it is not yet known.

Tells Farmers to Taste Mud Pies.

Speaking in the Boston chamber of commerce's agricultural course the other day, Prof. S. H. Haskell of Massachusetts Agricultural college advocated the tasting of "mud pies" as an aid in determining productive soils.

"Taste the soil and rub it against the roof of your mouth," said he. "Make mud pies out of it, and soon you will be able to know the right soil."

Hero Fund.

The Carnegie Hero fund applies only to acts performed within the United States and Canada, Newfoundland and the waters thereof, and such acts must have been performed on or after April 15, 1904, and brought to the attention of the fund committee within three years of the date of the act.

LIQUOR REACHED THE SPOT

Error Made by Assistant Need Not Have Worried the Dispenser of Drugs.

Wallace Irwin is fond of telling a yarn about a Scotch sheep herder who slouched into a western town which had recently gone for prohibition. He entered a drug store and, as was customary, made a signal on the soda counter. Now, the proprietor was out, so the assistant, a young lad, understanding the Indian sign, took a bottle from a shelf and helped the customer to half a gobletful of brown liquid. The Scotchman smacked his lips, paid his score and went his stolid way.

Shortly afterward the proprietor came back and said to his assistant:

"Any business?"

"Scotchman came and tapped the you-know on the counter," replied the boy, "so I gave him some." He pointed to the bottle of brown liquid standing alone on the shelf.

"Great heavens, child," shrieked the proprietor, "that ain't whisky. That's sulphuric acid!"

Tableau.

For two weeks the druggist lived the life of a hunted man. He discharged his helper, made his will, contemplated suicide and spent real money advertising for the widow of the unfortunate customer whom his carelessness had sent to an agonizing death. Just as he was about to surrender to despair he was suddenly relieved by beholding the same Scotch sheep herder, healthy and matter-of-fact, shuffle into his drug store, step to the counter, beckon mysteriously, and whisper:

"Losh, laddie. Ye maun gie me a wee nipple. And mind ye pour it out o' the same bottle. It's a wee bit strong but it puts heart in a mon!"

Full Report Unobtainable.

Rome, Jan. 14.—From 20,000 to 30,000 still remains the unofficial estimate of the number of victims of the earthquake which rocked southern and central Italy early Wednesday.

The amount of damage does cannot yet be determined from the meager dispatches of the catastrophe that have reached Rome over the hampered lines of communication.

100 Towns Destroyed.

Avezzano, the town in which Premier Salandra was born, has about 20,000 inhabitants, however, that about 100 towns and villages have been published or nearly wrecked and that great loss of life resulted.

The destruction caused by the earthquake is fully as great as has been feared.

Complete reports of the damage done in the stricken district are not yet at hand, though since that the casualties will reach nearly forty thousand and that the number of injured probably will exceed 50,000.

Fluid and tablets have added tightly terrible disaster, which brought with it the death of thousands of people, and which has suffered from the initial quake are now flooded as the result of the overflow of deadliest weeks diverted from their regular course by the earth disturbance. Entire towns were left in the ruined area of the quake, and the number of victims of the annual school holiday in Avezzano were ignited. Throughout the night western hailed with the great piles of wreckage by torchlight.

Thousands of persons are here left for days beneath crushed habitations without food or medical aid, and those are dead while others still are living. Many have been rescued from the wreckage and brought to Rome hospitals for treatment or are being cared for in their home towns by temporary structures erected over the absolutely destroyed dwellings (of rough and other cities in Italy.

Villas On a Fire.

It is believed many of those caught in the wreckage were not injured but perished from cold and hunger or were burned to death in fires which followed the quake.

The number injured probably was larger at Avezzano and Tagliacozzo Marsi, where fires started and there was no water to extend them.

Avezzano apparently suffered from the quake more than thousand persons in that district are said to have perished and the victims have been buried.

4,000 Killed in Sora.

Sora and Pescina each has 4,000 dead, while the fatalities at Cheti Ortucchio and Scurcola Marsi number 2,000 each of the Sora dead, 2,000 Numerous other towns and villages in the mountains are said to have lost 1,000 persons.

In the stricken districts the people are camping in the open. Troops are guarding the demolished or partly demolished dwellings against looting.

Fresh disturbances everywhere have been felt since the quake of Friday, but fortunately, no serious damage has occurred. Officials are working slender to shore up with prompt sufficient, but, which are in their efforts to rescue the living or remove the bodies of the dead.

Italia Military Call.

A dispatch from Milan to Berlin to the effect that the call for military service in the dominant zone has been revoked by the military authorities.

Automobiles containing members of the Roman aristocracy left Rome in interests throughout the day carrying food and other relief supplies to the sufferers. The family of the duke of Torlonia has come to a revenue, the district which is closely connected with the traditions of the ducal house.

Prince and Princess Torlonia, Duke Colonna Sciarra, who lately has suffered from the loss of his wife, Princess Colonna, and the minister of Italy at, president of the venna's movement in their, were among those who went to stricken districts.

Mayor of Rome Aids.

Prince Colonna, mayor of Rome, has arranged to supply all the stricken villages with oil for illuminating purposes in the aftermath of the city of Rome. The stricken area of the quake is about 100 miles in length and 50 miles in breadth.

Two hundred persons survived the disaster. Fifty of the survivors, Rome, have completed the work of destroying the city.

Huge Office Bldg.

Thomas Nelson Page American ambassador, has cabled from Rome to Ambrosio, the Italian premier, and Baron Sonnino, minister of foreign affairs, whether assistance from the United States is needed. The cable message of the annual school holiday in Avezzano were ignited. Throughout the night western hailed with the great piles of wreckage by torchlight.

Thousands of persons are here left for days beneath crushed habitations without food or medical aid, and those are dead while others still are living. Many have been rescued from the wreckage and brought to Rome hospitals for treatment or are being

AVEZZANO AN ANCIENT TOWN

Chief Sufferer From Quake Was Flourishing and Important Town Many Centuries.

Avezzano, the town in which the largest number of casualties have been reported as the result of the Italy earthquake, lies in the province of Aquila, in the Abruzzi department, 75 miles east of Rome, and is about 2,000 feet above the sea level. It is one of the oldest towns and had a population of about ten thousand. One of the well-preserved Roman bridges, built by the twelve cents built by Gentile Virginio Orsini, still stands in the town. Avezzano is a place of importance, stands relatively in the heart of the Abruzzi, and is connected with Rome and the Adriatic by a good road. The town is the seat of the Prefecture of Aquila, and the Bishop of Rome and the department of the Abruzzi, and is a place of importance and of considerable wealth.

Numerous villages and towns for miles around have been wiped out by the quake, and the loss of life in the district is reported to be very heavy, and as this will not be the last place to be heard from, the number of casualties will be very large, perhaps twice as high as the first estimate.

Avezzano is a town of 10,000 inhabitants, and is the capital of the district which takes however that the French Rome, 3,000 inhabitants, Rome, 3,000 inhabitants, Rome, 3,000 inhabitants,

WHAT OUR INVENTORY MEANS TO YOU

It means that you will have daily opportunities to save money. As our inventory progresses, odd garments, short lengths and many other odd bits of merchandise which we do not care to invoice, will be brought to light.

You are the winner when this occurs for they will be sold at a price which makes no pretense at representing value.

Don't get the idea that because we are taking inventory we are too busy to wait upon customers.

While for us this will be about the busiest period of the entire year, our good service to our customers will be maintained.

Our business creed is such that were we a hundred fold more busy than we have ever been you would still be welcome.

Come in and look around for inventory specials. Your wants will be cheerfully and carefully attended to

GERMANS LOSE BATTLE

Bombardment on Alcott Place Results in Surrender of Fort Zuber.

They are fighting again up on Alcott Place, just as they used to in the old days before the street received its high-sounding name and was known as Miller's Court.

The latest battle is an international affair, with Germans on one side and a mixture of Scotch, Irish and English on the other. Louis Zuber represents the German forces, while S. M. Mallary is the whole works for the allies.

Mallory, who is known as a quiet, peaceable citizen, when everything goes to suit him, owns the house occupied by the Zuber family and wants possession. After starting a court action Mallory decided that law was too slow and proceeded to give the Zubers more fresh air by kicking the windows out of their house and committing other playful didos.

Zuber liked this, auber nicht, and straightway had Mallory arrested on a peace warrant. The hearing took place before Justice Lloyd Wyman and while it was shown that Mallory had undoubtedly been guilty of trespass in entering upon the premises that were rented to another, there was nothing in the testimony to show that any threats had been made and Mallory was discharged.

Zuber will vacate the house without awaiting the outcome of the forceable detention suit.

ANNEXATION ANNOUNCED

Canada and United States to Become One in the Very Near Future.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Quayle of Madison announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence, to Mr. Harry Petersmeyer of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Canada. The wedding ceremony is to occur in the very near future.

The wedding will be the culmination of a little romance, which started when Miss Quayle met Mr. Petersmeyer in California on her trip to the coast a couple of years ago. The bride to be was a former student at Oberlin Conservatory of Music and for the past year and a half has been principal of the Bailey School of Music in Cleveland, which position she resigned last Saturday. Mr. Petersmeyer has been visiting in Cleveland and Madison since the holidays and will take his bride to the northwest immediately after the ceremony.

A Nervous Age.

Just because he came home unexpectedly one night and had to sleep on the couch, a Lake county resident is said to have committed an assault with a broom handle, thrown another citizen down stairs, and in other ways shown his displeasure.

Isn't it funny how peevish some men are.

New Examining Physician

Dr. M. H. Carmedy will be appointed a member of the board of examining physicians for the Lake county pension bureau, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. H. W. Grauel. A number of local people recommended Dr. Carmedy for the position and Congressman Gordon has recommended his appointment.

Burglars at Perry.

Burglars broke into S. E. Cook's hardware store at Perry early Monday morning and took a small quantity of knives and razors. Charles Cross saw a light in the store and notified Constable Keener, but the burglar made his escape before the officer arrived. Entrance was gained by prying up a rear window.

Bad Cold Quickly Broken Up

Mrs. Martha Wilcox, Gowanda, N. Y. writes: "I first used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy about eight years ago. At that time I had a hard cold and coughed most of the time. It proved to be just what I needed. It broke up the cold in a few days, and the cough entirely disappeared. I have told many of my friends of the good I received through using this medicine, and all who have used it speak of it in the highest terms." Obtainable everywhere.

More Barber Shop Trouble.

Ralph Widgren's barber shop at Fairport has been the main cause of several court cases during the past month, four young men having been arrested and tried for attempting to burglarize the place, and now the proprietor is to have a day in court.

In an affidavit sworn to by Julius Jackson, Ralph Widgren is charged with exhibiting a gambling devise, the charge being made that he allowed a slot machine to be operated in his shop. Widgren appeared before Justice Lloyd Wyman Tuesday morning and was released on his own recognizance, the hearing being set for Tuesday, Jan. 26.

Jackson, who swore to the affidavit is said to be a relative of one of the boys arrested for the attempted burglary.

Wants $25,000 Damages.

For the first time in years a Lake county jury was summoned to the Geauga county court house Monday, to hear the case of Morris Eggleston against the Geauga county commissioners, which will consume this week. Eggleston fell through a bridge in Claridon while driving a traction engine and was badly injured. He asks $25,000 damages, alleging the commissioners were negligent in keeping the bridge in good repair.

Morning Light Strongest.

The morning light is from ten to thirty per cent stronger than that of the afternoon, varying with the season. The light-transmitting properties of different kinds of glass vary greatly. Thus the loss of light from glass as compared with outdoor light ranges all the way from thirteen to thirty-six per cent or more. The practice of lapping the panes causes an average loss of light of about eleven per cent. The transmission of light naturally increases as the angle of the roof more nearly coincides with a right angle to the sun's rays.

His Natural Thought.

A South Dakota railroad is noted for its execrable roadbed. A new brakeman was making his first trip over the road at night and was standing in the center of the car, grimly clutching the seats to keep erect. Suddenly the train struck a smooth place in the track and slid along without sound. Seizing his lantern, the brakeman ran for the door. "Jump for your lives!" he shouted. "She is off the track!"

Gunpowder and Dynamite.

While both gunpowder and dynamite are explosives, they fall into different structural classifications. Gunpowder is a nitrate mixture, whereas dynamite is a nitro compound—that is, the former is a combination of nitrogen solution mixed with other ingredients, and the latter is a compound of nitro-glycerin absorbed by a porous inert solid material.

Dynamite.

Dynamite, inestimably more powerful than gunpowder, is formed by soaking a solid absorbent substance with nitroglycerin. The best absorbent material is found at Hanover, Germany, and is known as "kieselguhr." When dried it is a white powder and is said to safely retain more than three times its own weight of nitroglycerin.

MURDER AT WICKLIFFE

Italian Found Dead in Field and Frank Fatrica is Arrested.

After a row in the Italian settlement east of Wickliffe Sunday night the body of Dominic Ciancibello was found in a field with several knife wounds in the abdomen. Deputy Sheriff Maloney placed Frank Fatrica, another Italian, under arrest and he is being held pending the decision of the coroner's inquest.

The dead man was employed on the Corrigan farm in Wickliffe and was the father-in-law of the man who is in jail facing a charge of murder. The son-in-law and father did not get along well together and are reported to have had several fights over money matters. Sunday night the men renewed their old quarrel and each tried to use a shot-gun but failed to get an explosion.

What happened after that is not known. After the finding of Ciancibello's body in a field Deputy Maloney went to the scene in an automobile. He found Fatrica in bed and placed him under arrest at once. He admitted having trouble with his father-in-law and of taking the gun away from him and trying to shoot him, but denied using a knife in any way.

C. H. McLean Dies Suddenly.

Painesville people were shocked Monday morning when they learned that Charles H. McLean, well-known business man, had passed away at his apartments on North St. Clair street. Although Mr. McLean had been in poor health for some time he was thought to be improving and on Saturday he remarked that he felt better than he had for some time.

Mr. McLean was sixty years of age and had been in business in Painesville for the past thirty-five years, dealing in various lines of goods. A sister, Mrs. Mary Davis, and a son Arlie D. McLean of this city, also one brother, A. D. McLean of Chicago, survive him.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the home of his son, A. D. McLean, Avery Terrace, the Elks having charge.

Cheap Fertilizers.

A very large number of farmers in Ohio purchase a low-grade rather then a high-grade fertilizer, because they believe the former is the cheaper. As a matter of fact, the farmer who pays from $16 to $20 a ton for complete fertilizer pays more for each pound of plant food than does the farmer who pays $25 and up per ton for a complete fertilizer. The actual plant food materials in fertilizers are nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. These materials in a low-grade fertilizer cost respectively about 28, 8 and 7 cents per pound, but in a high-grade fertilizer their cost is approximately 20, 3 and 5 cents per pound.

A New Psalm.

The Ford is my auto, I shall not want (another).
It maketh me to lie down beneath it; it soureth my soul.
It leadeth me in the paths of ridicule for its namesake.
Yea, though I ride through the valleys, I'm towed up the hills.
For I fear much evil, thy rods and thy engines discomfort me.
I prepare for blow-outs in the presence of mine enemies.
I anoint the tires with patches; my radiator runneth over.
Surely, if this thing follows me all the days of my life; I shall dwell in the bug-house forever.—Anon.

Creamery and Laundry.

In many sections of the country a laundering plant is being established in connection with the creamery. The same boiler and engine that runs the creamery can be made to do the laundering for the community or the patrons of the creamery. A laundering outfit to do rough dry laundering may be purchased for about $300, which is not a prohibitive sum, and certainly would be a great factor in bringing about a "sunny Monday" on the farms affected.

Wedding at Madison.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Madison Saturday when Florence Fidelia Quayle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Quayle was married to Harry F. Petersmeyer of Moose Jaw, Sask., Canada. Rev. Mr. Freeman of the Central Congregational church officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Petersmeyer will be at home at Moose Jaw, Sask., after March 10.

Who Are the Men?

According to the Willoughby Delta the property of Robert Thomas in that village is to be sold to a company of Painesville men for a consideration of about $5,000. This company, according to the Delta, intends to build a three or four story business block, with a theatre on the first [illegible]

Looks are Deceptive.

It was on a recent trip to Mentor that we first met Sylvia.

How beautiful Sylvia looked that morning! The clear winter sunlight played upon her, and her brown hair seemed almost golden. Her great eyes, twin stars, looked straight into ours, and we wondered what thoughts they hid. Nearer and nearer we drew to Sylvia, and we could feel her breath, sweet as a clover field in June, on our warm brow. We were alone.

Softly we spoke her name, 'Sylvia' and then, as we stooped to caress her a harsh voice rang out—

"You want to be keerful o' that there Sylvia" it said, "'cause she kicks wus than any other cow we got on the farm."

BIG SCHOOL FOR FARMERS

Agricultural College Authorities Have Arranged Elaborate Program

The rural districts of Ohio will be well represented at Columbus Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, at the third annual farmers' week, under the auspices of the agricultural college of Ohio State University.

Forty-five speakers of national reputation will contribute the program for what college authorities believe will be the most successful farmers' week yet held.

Every effort is being made by the agricultural development committee of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce to swell the delegation of farmers from northern Ohio and particularly from the vicinity of Cleveland. For those who will be unable to attend, however, the chamber has furnished means of benefitting from the addresses and exchange of farm intelligence for which farmers' week was primarily established.

L. B. Dunham, assistant secretary of the chamber and secretary of the agricultural development committee, will mail copy of program on request. In addition, Mr. Dunham will attend the gathering and obtain full information on all addresses delivered, demonstrations given and conclusions reached in discussions following the speaking.

"I will endeavor to act as personal representative of all farmers who cannot attend," said Mr. Dunham yesterday, "and will undertake to answer by mail or otherwise any questions relating to the gathering."

Next year, the chamber agricultural development committee plans to organize a large party of northern Ohio farmers to attend the farmers' week gathering at Columbus. If possible, a special train will be chartered.

Blame It Onto Rich.

If you are late getting home some night just blame it onto that big clock in front of John Rith's jewelry store. The clock has been acting badly for some time, running slow and stopping and is apt to register anywhere from one hour to five hours behind the eastern schedule.

A Fairport citizen, who had spent the day at the "Hump," arrived in town on a late car and started for a walk down Main street, with his lee scuppers taking water and his steering apparatus out of commission. He looked at the clock and saw the hands pointed to 9:05.

"Gee!" he said, "I thought it was later. If that's all the later it is, guess I'll go back to Cleveland and finish the night."

High Level Bridge.

Bridge boosters from Willoughby held a little session with the county commissioners Monday morning, and brought along an expert from Cleveland.

A high level bridge is bound to come sooner or later. Of course the people will have a vote on the matter but public sentiment is strongly in favor of all road improvements in these days when every other farmer owns a motor car. The commissioners took the matter under advisement.

A Tip on Tipping.

Don't say "Keep the change, George," if the Ohio assembly enacts the bill introduced by Representative Brown of Ashland county. Such line of conversation to porters, waiters, etc. will be unlawful. The Brown measure is an anti-tipping bill and it provides punishment for letting the waiter keep the change, not only for the tipper but for the tippee and the employer of the tippee. So hand out the proper change.

Peach Crop Uninjured.

The cold weather Sunday did no damage to the peach buds, according to a local authority. Prospects are good for a large crop this year. At Port Clinton, the center of the peach belt, temperature went to 14 below Sunday morning without killing the buds. Some of the growers are trimming their trees close this year on account of the large number of buds [illegible] on the trees.

MAIN MARKET ROAD

Will be Built from Painesville to Willoughby this Spring.

A pavement extending from Painesville to Willoughby will be constructed during the coming summer at a very nominal expense to the property owners along the line.

County Auditor W. Albert Davis was in Columbus Tuesday and held a conference with Senator J. V. Winans and Representative Carl Kimball. The three then paid a visit to the state highway department officials and presented their claims so clearly and strongly that they had little difficulty in obtaining a large appropriation for a main market road.

The state will pay $65,000 towards the cost of the new highway, besides the usual state aid. The balance of the cost will be distributed as follows: State, 50 per cent; county, 25 per cent; township 15 per cent; abutting property, 10 per cent. This means that the property on each side of the pavement will pay but five per cent. of the cost of the improvement, and the cost will be so small that it will not work a hardship on anyone.

Now that the state has come to the aid of the county in such a liberal manner, the people of Willoughby should proceed at once with their high level bridge plans. The only opposition to the proposed bridge came from those who thought the money should be used for paving and as this is now arranged for, the bridge question should carry almost unanimously if submitted to the voters of the county.

This would also be a good time for Painesville township officials to come out of their groundhog sleep and get busy with paving. The road to Fairport should be improved at once and there are other main roads sadly in need of paving. Look at Madison and Perry—those little villages have built or planned to build from ten to twelve miles of pavement; Geneva is preparing for an improved road to Trumbull; even Kirtland and LeRoy have miles of improved roads while Painesville, the richest township in the county, with a tax duplicate nearly as large as that of all the other towns combined, has so far paid little attention to paving, building one little strip towards LeRoy and a small section west.

What's the matter with a main market road from Painesville to Perry and improved roads north and south? They can be secured if the officials go about the matter in the proper way.

Well Known Doctor Dies.

Dr. William H. Sherwood died suddenly about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning at his home in Unionville, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. The doctor was in usual health when he retired.

Dr. Sherwood was 68 years of age and was a nephew of the late Dr. William H. Sherwood of Painesville. Dr. Z. O. Sherwood of Geneva is a nephew of the deceased. He was born in Unionville and spent his entire life there, practicing his profession since 1873 when he graduated from Western Reserve.

Funeral services were held at the Sherwood home Thursday afternoon, Rev. Jenkins Watkins of Perry officiating.

Jefferson Wants Band Meeting

Jefferson is trying to land the 1915 convention of the Western Reserve Band Association. The association is composed of the bands of Northeastern Ohio and has about 300 members. The 1914 convention was held in Painesville and attracted a large attendance of music lovers. H. C. White of Cleveland again offers a prize of a $100 cornet to be given away to some member during the convention.

More Smallpox?

On the advice of the attending physician a house in Richmond was placed under quarantine Tuesday afternoon. One of the inmates has a disease which shows some of the symptoms of smallpox and the doctor wished to be on the safe side.

EMPLOYES GIVE DINNER

Wickliffe Plant's Workers and Officials Get Together For Social Meeting.

About 100 of the employes of the Cleveland Crane & Engineering Co. of Wickliffe held their first dinner Thursday evening in the Wickliffe Presbyterian church, and unanimously decided to hold similar affairs monthly.

The dinner was served by the ladies of the church and the plates were heaped up with good things until they brought to mind the old days down on the farm when mother and the girls fed the harvest hands or thrashers. Thick slices of nicely cooked meat, creamy potatoes with rich brown gravy, and beans, and pickles, and bread and butter, and apple pie and cheese, and coffee, and—but what's the use—there was everything that a hungry man could ask for, with waiters urging a second or a third helping.

After dinner came a short concert by the orchestra, which is composed of shop employes and the vigorous applause showed that the efforts of the musicians were appreciated by the hearers. A few lantern pictures were then shown after which C. C. Robbins, general manager, took the platform and gave a brief talk before introducing the speaker of the evening. Co-operation is the slogan at the Wickliffe plant. The valuable man in any business is the man who can and will co-operate with other men. Any leading employe who opposes the introduction of a new man into an institution and fights every innovation which he, himself, does not suggest, is doomed to defeat. Men succeed only as they utilize the services and ideas of other men.

In introducing Thomas D. West, Mr. Robbins referred to him as the first man in the United States to successfully pour metal direct from a blast furnace. This process was discovered by Mr. West in 1890 and today is considered the only practical way of making ingot molds.

Mr. West subject was "Foundering as an Art and Adjunct to Engineering" and the speaker not only told the history of foundering in an interesting and comprehensive manner, but found time to touch on the safety first movement and his plan for keeping the saloon from the factory door. Many lantern slides were used and the pictures projected on the screen made it possible for every employe to see just what advance has been made in foundering since that day some 3,000 years ago when the first castings were made for King Soloman's temple.

The various sands used in molding, the iron ore, the open hearth, converter and crucible methods of steel making, the new electrical furnace, and many other topics of interest were told about, also the big 310 ton casting made in Germany—the largest yet attempted. The speaker thought that the coming season would be one of great activity in the iron and steel business and that there would be a scarcity of skilled workmen. He deplored the fact that the boys of today are taught to play instead of being trained in the art of working. Foundry and shop work means dirty hands and soiled clothing, but the boy who will go in and stick to it will find that he has mastered a trade that will be well worth all the dirt and grime it costs.

Pictures were shown of the methods used by shop employes to smuggle liquor into the plants, also of the accidents which often occur when these workmen, their brains confused by drink, become careless. Mr. West is working for a law which will prohibit a saloon from operating within 500 to 1,000 feet of the property line of a factory.

Madison Resident Dies.

Sidney Platt, 80, who has been blind for the past three years, died at his home on the Platt road north of Madison last Wednesday, death resulting from a stroke of paralysis and the infirmities of old age. His daughter, Mrs. Charles Balden, traveled all the way from Lewiston, Mont., only to arrive fifteen minutes after her father's death.

Conneaut is Very Dry.

At an election held in Conneaut Monday the city voted to remain dry by a majority of 278. The total vote cast was 1,706. The city has been dry six years under the Rose law.

A Winter Fish Story

"There's just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught." That's an old saying and undoubtedly true, but after a visit to a Richmond fish house you cannot help wondering about the number of fish still at large in the inland seas.

Ton after ton of frozen fish, corded up like wood, and then to think of the time you spent and the angle worms you drowned and how you came home tired and hungry at night with one stiff bass about three inches long and a couple of little ones. Fishing may be all right as a recreation but if you want fish the best thing to do is to cast a silver hook down at Richmond, or Grand River as it is called in the postal guide.

Through the kindness of the manager of the Grand River Fish Company, a Herald reporter spent a chilly half-hour in the cold storage room at the fish house last Saturday and saw thirty-seven tons or seventy-four thousand pounds of frozen fish. These fish came from Lake Erie last April and are in as nice shape today as they were when first caught. The room is kept at a temperature of about 18 degrees and is as neat and clean as could be desired, in fact, there isn't a "fishy" smell about the place.

The big cooler holds seventy tons of fish, but several car load shipments have been made recently. The fish now in storage are mostly pike and perch, from one to three pound in weight and are frozen in cakes, each cake weighing from fifteen to eighteen pounds.

The Grand River Fish Company has customers all over the country, shipping to Chicago and other western cities, to New York, Cincinnati and other points east and south. With the ocean right at her front door it would seem that New York would be well supplied with fish but the manager of the company stated that New Yorkers regard lake fish as far superior to the ocean product.

Abundant Water For Canal.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal project is making steady and rapid progress. Great encouragement was given the friends of the waterway by the filing, this month, of the preliminary report, to the Governor by the Pennsylvania Canal Board, in which it was declared that the canal was feasible and practical from every angle. This means that there is sufficient water for the canal, that there are no insurmountable engineering problems and that transportation on the waterway will be heavy, cheap and profitable.

Announcement has been made of the plan of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal Association to hold a great waterway conference in Pittsburg in March, to arrange for canal bond elections.

The fact that Senator Charles J. Magee of Pittsburg has been made chairman on canals in the Pennsylvania senate and that influential members of the Ohio and West Virginia legislature are friends of the canal, has also encouraged its advocates.

Will Drill For Gas.

As soon as the weather will permit work of drilling a gas well at the township park will be started. If a good flow of gas can be secured it will solve the lighting and power problem at the popular pleasure resort.

The success which has rewarded the efforts of drillers in the Cleveland district leads the township park commissioners to hope for good results here. There are several good wells close to the park.

Institute Trustees Meet.

At a recent meeting of the trustees of the Andrews Institute, Supt. S. D. Shankland was unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year. Quarterly meeting of the trustees will be held in the future instead of semi-annual sessions. Plans for building a $30,000 memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace C. Andrews were talked over and action deferred on account of certain legal questions which have arisen.

Dances of Long Ago.

The Willoughby Band, which is under the direction of Prof. Parsons, netted $40 at its first dance and will give a second dancing party on Feb. 10th at Band's hall. Virginia Reel and Money Musk will have a place on the program along with the Hesitation waltz and Fox Trot.

FARMERS WILL MEET

Little, but Oh My.

"What is a dollar anyhow?"

The question is an easy one to answer. A dollar is what some men promise to pay for their county paper. It is something a newspaper man enjoys more in anticipation than in reality. It is the price of a day's work for some men and a single night's drink for others. It is what the wife frequently needs, but seldom has. It is the power that makes or unmakes men. It is the hardest thing to get and the easiest thing to get rid of, known to mankind. It is a blessing in a small measure and a curse in many instances. It is mighty and scarce. No man ever had more than he wanted and no man ever will. A dollar is a snare and a delusion, and everyone of us are chasing the delusion.

Advertising Up to Date.

It pays to advertise.

If you don't believe it, just step into the Up-to-Date store this week and look at the crowds of shoppers and the busy clerks. The Up-to-Date people have found it necessary to put on additional sales people in order to take care of the rush of customers while other merchants who do not believe in the liberal use of printers' ink are cutting down their sales force.

The Up-to-Date ads will be found in the Lake County Herald each week and should be read just as carefully as the news or editorial columns.

Made a Slight Mistake.

Vincent Stroud, Harpersfield farmer, discovered the first 1915 groundhog. According to Stroud the groundhog saw him almost as soon as he saw it, and fled to its burrow.

Realizing that his friends would not believe his story without proof, Mr. Stroud started to dig out the weather prophet. The ground hog met him half way.

Since that time Stroud has not been able to get near enough to his friends to tell the story but over the phone he explained that he made a slight mistake and discovered a willow pussy instead of a ground hog.

Another Election Coming.

The voters of Willoughby township will go to the polls on February 23, and by their ballots decide whether or not $15,000 worth of additional bonds shall be issued for school purposes.

The election is authorized by a resolution of the Willoughby Township Board of Education passed at its meeting held Jan. 12.

WHAT OUR INVENTORY MEANS TO YOU

It means that you will have daily opportunities to save money.

As our inventory progresses, odd garments, short lengths and many other odd bits of merchandise which we do not care to invoice, will be brought to light.

You are the winner when this occurs for they will be sold at a price which makes no pretense at representing value.

Don't get the idea that because we are taking inventory we are too busy to wait upon customers.

While for us this will be about the busiest period of the entire year, our good service to our customers will be maintained.

Our business creed is such that were we a hundred fold more busy than we have ever been you would still be welcome

Come in and look around for inventory specials. Your wants will be cheerfully and carefully attended to.

GERMANS LOSE BATTLE

Bombardment on Alcott Place Results in Surrender of Fort Zuber.

They are fighting again up on Alcott Place, just as they used to in the old days before the street received its high-sounding name and was known as Miller's Court.

The latest battle is an international affair, with Germans on one side and a mixture of Scotch, Irish and English on the other. Louie Zuber represents the German forces, while S. M. Mallory is the whole works for the allies.

Mallory, who is known as a quiet, peaceable citizen, when everything goes to suit him, owns the house occupied by the Zuber family and wants possession. After starting a court action Mallory decided that law was too slow and proceeded to give the Zubers more fresh air by kicking the windows out of their house and committing other playful didos.

Zuber liked this, auber nicht, and straightway had Mallory arrested on a peace warrant. The hearing took place before Justice Lloyd Wyman and while it was shown that Mallory had undoubtedly been guilty of trespass in entering upon the premises that were rented to another, there was nothing in the testimony to show that any threats had been made and Mallory was discharged.

Zuber will vacate the house without awaiting the outcome of the forceable detention suit.

More Barber Shop Trouble.

Ralph Widgren's barber shop at Fairport has been the main cause of several court cases during the past month, four young men having been arrested and tried for attempting to burglarize the place, and now the proprietor is to have a day in court.

In an affidavit sworn to by Julius Jackson, Ralph Widgren is charged with exhibiting a gambling devise, the charge being made that he allowed a slot machine to be operated in his shop. Widgren appeared before Justice Lloyd Wyman Tuesday morning and was released on his own recognizance, the hearing being set for Tuesday, Jan. 26.

Jackson, who swore to the affidavit is said to be a relative of one of the boys arrested for the attempted burglary.

ANNEXATION ANNOUNCED

Canada and United States to Become One in the Very Near Future.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Quayle of Madison announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence, to Mr. Harry Petersmeyer of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Canada. The wedding ceremony is to occur in the very near future.

The wedding will be the culmination of a little romance, which started when Miss Quayle met Mr. Petersmeyer in California on her trip to the coast a couple of years ago. The bride to be was a former student at Oberlin Conservatory of Music and for the past year and a half has been principal of the Bailey School of Music in Cleveland, which position she resigned last Saturday. Mr. Petersmeyer has been visiting in Cleveland and Madison since the holidays and will take his bride to the northwest immediately after the ceremony.

A Nervous Age.

Just because he came home unexpectedly one night and had to sleep on the couch, a Lake county resident is said to have committed an assault with a broom handle, thrown another citizen down stairs, and in other ways shown his displeasure.

Isn't it funny how peevish some men are.

New Examining Physician

Dr. M. H. Carmedy will be appointed a member of the board of examining physicians for the Lake county pension bureau, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. H. W. Grauel. A number of local people recommended Dr. Carmedy for the position and Congressman Gordon has recommended his appointment.

Burglars at Perry.

Burglars broke into S. E. Cook's hardware store at Perry early Monday morning and took a small quantity of knives and razors. Charles Cross saw a light in the store and notified Constable Keener, but the burglar made his escape before the officer arrived. Entrance was gained by prying up a rear window.

Bad Cold Quickly Broken Up

Mrs. Martha Wilcox, Gowanda, N. Y. writes: "I first used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy about eight years ago. At that time I had a hard cold and coughed most of the time. It proved to be just what I needed. It broke up the cold in a few days, and the cough entirely disappeared. I have told many of my friends of the good I received through using this medicine, and all who have used it speak of it in the highest terms." Obtainable everywhere.

Wants $25,000 Damages.

For the first time in years a Lake county jury was summoned to the Geauga county court house Monday, to hear the case of Morris Eggleston against the Geauga county commissioners, which will consume this week. Eggleston fell through a bridge in Claridon while driving a traction engine and was badly injured. He asks $25,000 damages, alleging the commissioners were negligent in keeping the bridge in good repair.

Morning Light Strongest.

The morning light is from ten to thirty per cent stronger than that of the afternoon, varying with the season. The light-transmitting properties of different kinds of glass vary greatly. Thus the loss of light from glass as compared with outdoor light ranges all the way from thirteen to thirty-six per cent or more. The practice of lapping the panes causes an average loss of light of about eleven per cent. The transmission of light naturally increases as the angle of the roof more nearly coincides with a right angle to the sun's rays.

His Natural Thought.

A South Dakota railroad is noted for its execrable roadbed. A new brakeman was making his first trip over the road at night and was standing in the center of the car, grimly clutching the seats to keep erect. Suddenly the train struck a smooth place in the track and slid along without sound. Seizing his lantern, the brakeman ran for the door. "Jump for your lives!" he shouted. "She is off the track!"

Gunpowder and Dynamite.

While both gunpowder and dynamite are explosives, they fall into different structural classifications. Gunpowder is a nitrate mixture, whereas dynamite is a nitro compound—that is, the former is a combination of nitrogen solution mixed with other ingredients, and the latter is a compound of nitro-glycerin absorbed by a porous inert solid material.

Dynamite.

Dynamite, inestimably more powerful than gunpowder, is formed by soaking a solid absorbent substance with nitroglycerin. The best absorbent material is found at Hanover, Germany, and is known as "kieselguhr." When dried it is a white powder and is said to safely retain more than three times its own weight of nitroglycerin.

MURDER AT WICKLIFFE

Italian Found Dead in Field and Frank Fatrica is Arrested.

After a row in the Italian settlement east of Wickliffe Sunday night the body of Dominic Ciancibello was found in a field with several knife wounds in the abdomen. Deputy Sheriff Maloney placed Frank Fatrica, another Italian, under arrest and he is being held pending the decision of the coroner's inquest.

The dead man was employed on the Corrigan farm in Wickliffe and was the father-in-law of the man who is in jail facing a charge of murder. The son-in-law and father did not get along well together and are reported to have had several fights over money matters. Sunday night the men renewed their old quarrel and each tried to use a shot-gun but failed to get an explosion.

What happened after that is not known. After the finding of Ciancibello's body in a field Deputy Maloney went to the scene in an automobile. He found Fatrica in bed and placed him under arrest at once. He admitted having trouble with his father in-law and of taking the gun away from him and trying to shoot him, but denied using a knife in any way.

C. H. McLean Dies Suddenly.

Painesville people were shocked Monday morning when they learned that Charles H. McLean, well-known business man, had passed away at his apartments on North St. Clair street. Although Mr. McLean had been in poor health for some time he was thought to be improving and on Saturday he remarked that he felt better than he had for some time.

Mr. McLean was sixty years of age and had been in business in Painesville for the past thirty-five years, dealing in various lines of goods. A sister, Mrs. Mary Davis, and a son, Arlie D. McLean of this city, also one brother, A. D. McLean of Chicago, survive him.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the home of his son, A. D. McLean, Avery Terrace, the Elks having charge.

Cheap Fertilizers.

A very large number of farmers in Ohio purchase a low-grade rather than a high-grade fertilizer, because they believe the former is the cheaper. As a matter of fact, the farmer who pays from $16 to $20 a ton for complete fertilizer pays more for each pound of plant food than does the farmer who pays $25 and up per ton for a complete fertilizer. The actual plant food materials in fertilizers are nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. These materials in a low-grade fertilizer cost respectively about 26, 8 and 7 cents per pound, but in a high-grade fertilizer their cost is approximately 20, 6 and 5 cents per pound.

A New Psalm.

The Ford is my auto, I shall not want (another).
It maketh me to lie down beneath it; it soureth my soul.
It leadeth me in the paths of ridicule for its namesake.
Yea, though I ride through the valleys, I'm towed up the hills.
For I fear much evil, thy rods and thy engines discomfort me.
I prepare for blow-outs in the presence of mine enemies.
I annoint the tires with patches; my radiator runneth over.
Surely, if this thing follows me all the days of my life; I shall dwell in the bug-house forever.—Anon.

Creamery and Laundry.

In many sections of the country a laundering plant is being established in connection with the creamery. The same boiler and engine that runs the creamery can be made to do the laundering for the community or the patrons of the creamery. A laundering outfit to do rough dry laundering may be purchased for about $300, which is not a prohibitive sum, and certainly would be a great factor in bringing about a "sunny Monday" on the farms affected.

Wedding at Madison.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Madison Saturday when Florence Fidelia Quayle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Quayle was married to Harry F. Petersmeyer of Moose Jaw, Sask., Canada. Rev. Mr. Freeman of the Central Congregational church officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Petersmeyer will be at home at Moose Jaw, Sask., after March 10.

Who Are the Men?

According to the Willoughby Delta the property of Robert Thomas in that village is to be sold to a company of Painesville men for a consideration of about $5,000. This company, according to the Delta, intends to build a [illegible] story [illegible] [illegible] with a theatre on the [illegible].

Looks are Deceptive.

It was on a recent trip to Mentor that we first met Sylvia.

How beautiful Sylvia looked that morning! The clear winter sunlight played upon her, and her brown hair seemed almost golden. Her great eyes, twin stars, looked straight into ours, and we wondered what thoughts they hid. Nearer and nearer we drew to Sylvia, and we could feel her breath, sweet as a clover field in June, on our warm brow. We were alone.

Softly we spoke her name, 'Sylvia' and then, as we stooped to caress her a harsh voice rang out—

"You want to be keerful o' thet there 'Sylvia'" it said, "'cause she kicks wus than any other cow we got on the farm."

BIG SCHOOL FOR FARMERS

Agricultural College Authorities Have Arranged Elaborate Program

The rural districts of Ohio will be well represented at Columbus Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, at the third annual farmers' week, under the auspices of the agricultural college of Ohio State University.

Forty-five speakers of national reputation will contribute the program for what college authorities believe will be the most successful farmers' week yet held.

Every effort is being made by the agricultural development committee of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce to swell the delegation of farmers from northern Ohio and particularly from the vicinity of Cleveland. For those who will be unable to attend, however, the chamber has furnished means of benefitting from the addresses and exchange of farm intelligence for which farmers' week was primarily established.

L. B. Dunham, assistant secretary of the chamber and secretary of the agricultural development committee, will mail copy of program on request. In addition, Mr. Dunham will attend the gathering and obtain full information on all addresses delivered, demonstrations given and conclusions reached in discussions following the speaking.

"I will endeavor to act as personal representative of all farmers who cannot attend," said Mr. Dunham yesterday, "and will undertake to answer by mail or otherwise any questions relating to the gathering."

Next year, the chamber agricultural development committee plans to organize a large party of northern Ohio farmers to attend the farmers' week gathering at Columbus. If possible, a special train will be chartered.

Blame It Onto Rich.

If you are late getting home some night just blame it onto that big clock in front of John Rich's jewelry store. The clock has been acting badly for some time, running slow and stopping and is apt to register anywhere from one hour to five hours behind the eastern schedule.

A Fairport citizen, who had spent the day at the "Hump," arrived in town on a late car and started for a walk down Main street, with his lee scuppers taking water and his steering apparatus out of commission. He looked at the clock and saw the hands pointed to 9:05.

"Gee!" he said, "I thought it was later. If that's all the later it is, guess I'll go back to Cleveland and finish the night."

High Level Bridge.

Bridge boosters from Willoughby held a little session with the county commissioners Monday morning, and brought along an expert from Cleveland.

A high level bridge is bound to come sooner or later. Of course the people will have a vote on the matter but public sentiment is strongly in favor of all road improvements in these days when every other farmer owns a motor car. The commissioners took the matter under advisement

A Tip on Tipping.

Don't say, "Keep the change, George," if the Ohio assembly enacts the bill introduced by Representative Brown of Ashland county. Such line of conversation to porters, waiters, etc. will be unlawful. The Brown measure is an anti-tipping bill and it provides punishment for letting the waiter keep the change, not only for the tipper but for the tippee and the employer of the tippee. So hand out the proper change.

Peach Crop Uninjured.

The cold weather Sunday did no damage to the peach buds, according to a local authority. Prospects are good for a large crop this year. At Port Clinton, the center of the peach belt, temperature went to 14 below Sunday morning without killing the buds. Some of the growers are trimming their trees close this year on account of the large number of buds [illegible] found on the trees.

MAIN MARKET ROAD

Will be Built from Painesville to Willoughby this Spring.

A pavement extending from Painesville to Willoughby will be constructed during the coming summer at a very nominal expense to the property owners along the line.

County Auditor W. Albert Davis was in Columbus Tuesday and held a conference with Senator J. V. Winans and Representative Carl Kimball. The three then paid a visit to the state highway department officials and presented their claims so clearly and strongly that they had little difficulty in obtaining a large appropriation for a main market road.

The state will pay $65,000 towards the cost of the new highway, besides the usual state aid. The balance of the cost will be distributed as follows. State, 50 per cent; county, 25 per cent; township 15 per cent, abutting property, 10 per cent. This means that the property on each side of the pavement will pay but five per cent. of the cost of the improvement, and the cost will be so small that it will not work a hardship on anyone.

Now that the state has come to the aid of the county in such a liberal manner, the people of Willoughby should proceed at once with their high level bridge plans. The only opposition to the proposed bridge came from those who thought the money should be used for paving and as this is now arranged for, the bridge question should carry almost unanimously if submitted to the voters of the county.

This would also be a good time for Painesville township officials to come out of their groundhog sleep and get busy with paving. The road to Fairport should be improved at once and there are other main roads sadly in need of paving. Look at Madison and Perry—those little villages have built or planned to build from ten to twelve miles of pavement; Geneva is preparing for an improved road to Trumbull; even Kirtland and LeRoy have miles of improved roads while Painesville, the richest township in the county, with a tax duplicate nearly as large as that of all the other towns combined, has so far paid little attention to paving, building one little strip towards LeRoy and a small section west.

What's the matter with a main market road from Painesville to Perry and improved roads north and south? They can be secured if the officials go about the matter in the proper way.

Well Known Doctor Dies.

Dr. William H. Sherwood died suddenly about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning at his home in Unionville, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. The doctor was in usual health when he retired.

Dr. Sherwood was 68 years of age and was a nephew of the late Dr. William H. Sherwood of Painesville. Dr. Z. O. Sherwood of Geneva is a nephew of the deceased. He was born in Unionville and spent his entire life there, practicing his profession since 1873 when he graduated from Western Reserve.

Funeral services were held at the Sherwood home Thursday afternoon, Rev. Jenkins Watkins of Perry officiating.

Jefferson Wants Band Meeting

Jefferson is trying to land the 1915 convention of the Western Reserve Band Association. The association is composed of the bands of Northeastern Ohio and has about 300 members. The 1914 convention was held in Painesville and attracted a large attendance of music lovers. H. G. White of Cleveland, again offers a prize of a $100 cornet to be given away to some member during the convention.

More Smallpox?

On the advice of the attending physician a house in Richmond was placed under quarantine Tuesday afternoon. One of the inmates has a disease which shows some of the symptoms of smallpox and the doctor wished to be on the safe side.

EMPLOYES GIVE DINNER

Wickliffe Plant's Workers and Officials Get Together For Social Meeting.

About 100 of the employes of the Cleveland Crane & Engineering Co of Wickliffe held their first dinner Thursday evening in the Wickliffe Presbyterian church, and unanimously decided to hold similar affairs monthly.

The dinner was served by the ladies of the church and the plates were heaped up with good things until they brought to mind the old days down on the farm when mother and the girls fed the harvest hands or thrashers. Thick slices of nicely cooked meat, creamy potatoes with rich brown gravy, and beans, and pickles, and bread and butter, and apple pie and cheese, and coffee, and—but what's the use—there was everything that a hungry man could ask for, with waiters urging a second or a third helping.

After dinner came a short concert by the orchestra, which is composed of shop employes and the vigorous applause showed that the efforts of the musicians were appreciated by the hearers. A few lantern pictures were then shown after which C. C. Robbins, general manager, took the platform and gave a brief talk before introducing the speaker of the evening. Co-operation is the slogan at the Wickliffe plant. The valuable man in any business is the man who can and will co-operate with other men. Any leading employe who opposes the introduction of a new man into an institution and fights every innovation which he, himself, does not suggest, is doomed to defeat. Men succeed only as they utilize the services and ideas of other men.

In introducing Thomas D. West, Mr. Robbins referred to him as the first man in the United States to successfully pour metal direct from a blast furnace. This process was discovered by Mr. West in 1890 and today is considered the only practical way of making ingot molds.

Mr. West subject was "Foundering as an Art and Adjunct to Engineering" and the speaker not only told the history of foundering in an interesting and comprehensive manner, but found time to touch on the safety first movement and his plan for keeping the saloon from the factory door. Many lantern slides were used and the pictures projected on the screen made it possible for every employe to see just what advance has been made in foundering since that day some 3,000 years ago when the first castings were made for King Solomon's temple.

The various sands used in molding, the iron ore, the open hearth, converter and crucible methods of steel making, the new electrical furnace, and many other topics of interest were told about, also the big 310 ton casting made in Germany—the largest yet attempted. The speaker thought that the coming season would be one of great activity in the iron and steel business and that there would be a scarcity of skilled workmen. He deplored the fact that the boys of today are taught to play instead of being trained in the art of working. Foundry and shop work means dirty hands and soiled clothing, but the boy who will go in and stick to it will find that he has mastered a trade that will be well worth all the dirt and grime it costs.

Pictures were shown of the methods used by shop employes to smuggle liquor into the plants, also of the accidents which often occur when these workmen, their brains confused by drink, become careless. Mr. West is working for a law which will prohibit a saloon from operating within 500 to 1,000 feet of the property line of a factory.

Madison Resident Dies.

Sidney Platt, 80, who has been blind for the past three years, died at his home on the Platt road north of Madison last Wednesday, death resulting from a stroke of paralysis and the infirmities of old age. His daughter, Mrs. Charles Belden, traveled all the way from Lewiston, Mont., only to arrive fifteen minutes after her father's death.

A Winter Fish Story.

"There's just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught." That's an old saying and undoubtedly true, but after a visit to a Richmond fish house you cannot help wondering about the number of fish still at large in the inland seas.

Ton after ton of frozen fish, corded up like wood, and then to think of the time you spent and the angle worms you drowned and how you came home tired and hungry at night with one stiff bass about three inches long and a couple of little ones. Fishing may be all right as a recreation but if you want fish the best thing to do is to cast a silver hook down at Richmond, or Grand River as it is called in the postal guide.

Through the kindness of the manager of the Grand River Fish Company, a Herald reporter spent a chilly half-hour in the cold storage room at the fish house last Saturday and saw thirty-seven tons or seventy-four thousand pounds of frozen fish. These fish came from Lake Erie last April and are in as nice shape today as they were when first caught. The room is kept at a temperature of about 18 degrees and is as neat and clean as could be desired, in fact, there isn't a "fishy" smell about the place.

The big cooler holds seventy tons of fish, but several car load shipments have been made recently. The fish now in storage are mostly pike and perch, from one to three pound in weight and are frozen in cakes, each cake weighing from fifteen to eighteen pounds.

The Grand River Fish Company has customers all over the country, shipping to Chicago and other western cities, to New York, Cincinnati and other points east and south. With the ocean right at her front door it would seem that New York would be well supplied with fish but the manager of the company stated that New Yorkers regard lake fish as far superior to the ocean product.

Abundant Water For Canal.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal project is making steady and rapid progress. Great encouragement was given the friends of the waterway by the filing, this month, of the preliminary report, to the Governor by the Pennsylvania Canal Board, in which it was declared that the canal was feasible and practical from every angle. This means that there is sufficient water for the canal, that there are no insurmountable engineering problems and that transportation on the waterway will be heavy, cheap and profitable.

Announcement has been made of the plan of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal Association to hold a great waterway conference in Pittsburg in March, to arrange for canal bond elections.

The fact that Senator Charles J. Magee of Pittsburg has been made chairman on canals in the Pennsylvania senate and that influential members of the Ohio and West Virginia legislature are friends of the canal, has also encouraged its advocates.

Will Drill For Gas.

As soon as the weather will permit work of drilling a gas well at the township park will be started. If a good flow of gas can be secured it will solve the lighting and power problem at the popular pleasure resort.

The success which has rewarded the efforts of drillers in the Cleveland district leads the township park commissioners to hope for good results here. There are several good wells close to the park.

Institute Trustees Meet.

At a recent meeting of the trustees of the Andrews Institute, Supt. S. D. Shankland was unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year. Quarterly meeting of the trustees will be held in the future instead of semi-annual sessions. Plans for building a $30,000 memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace C. Andrews were talked over and action deferred on account of certain legal questions which have arisen.

Dances of Long Ago.

The Willoughby Band, which is under the direction of Prof. Parsons, netted $40 at its first dance and will give a second dancing party on Feb. 10th at Bond's hall. Virginia Reel and Money Musk will have a place on the program along with the Hesitation waltz and Fox Trot.

Little, but Oh My.

"What is a dollar anyhow?"

The question is an easy one to answer. A dollar is what some men promise to pay for their county paper. It is something a newspaper man enjoys more in anticipation than in reality. It is the price of a day's work for some men and a single night's drink for others. It is what the wife frequently needs, but seldom has. It is the power that makes or unmakes men. It is the hardest thing to get and the easiest thing to get rid of, known to mankind. It is a blessing in a small measure and a curse in many instances. It is mighty and scarce. No man ever had more than he wanted and no man ever will. A dollar is a snare and a delusion, and everyone of us are chasing the delusion.

Advertising Up to Date.

It pays to advertise.

If you don't believe it, just step into the Up-to-Date store this week and look at the crowds of shoppers and the busy clerks. The Up-to-Date people have found it necessary to put on additional sales people in order to take care of the rush of customers while other merchants who do not believe in the liberal use of printers' ink are cutting down their sales force.

The Up-to-Date ads will be found in the Lake County Herald each week and should be read just as carefully as the news or editorial columns.

Made a Slight Mistake.

Vincent Strond, Harpersfield farmer, discovered the first 1915 groundhog. According to Strond the groundhog saw him almost as soon as he saw it, and fled to its burrow.

Realizing that his friends would not believe his story without proof, Mr. Strond started to dig out the weather prophet. The ground hog met him half way.

Since that time Strond has not been able to get near enough to his friends to tell the story but over the phone he explained that he made a slight mistake and discovered a willow pussy instead of a ground hog.

Another Election Coming.

The voters of Willoughby township will go to the polls on February 23, and by their ballots decide whether or not $15,000 worth of additional bonds shall be issued for school purposes.

The election is authorized by a resolution of the Willoughby Township Board of Education passed at a meeting held Jan. 12.

WE ARE NOT WORRYING.

The fact that a receiver is temporarily in charge of the Vulcan Automobile shop is causing much more anxiety in other towns than it is right here at home where the facts are known. Witness the following from the Ashtabula Star:

"When the Vulcan Manufacturing company began making cheap automobiles in Painesville, much was expected of the company. That was two years ago. Now a receiver has been appointed for it who says that he represents 400 stockholders. This means there are a lot of people who cannot afford to lose any money who will probably be hard hit. In many homes the loss of what the breadwinners have in the institution—if they do lose it—will be a calamity. To the man who has more money than he has invested in a losing venture, a failure is not such a serious matter, but when the life savings of a couple go in one crash, nobody but those who have never been through something of the sort realize what it means. There is hope that the reorganization of the company may bring it out of its predicament, and this is a bit of encouragement which is keeping up the spirits of the stockholders."

Now the only thing the matter with this article is the fact that it is not true. A receiver has been appointed, but instead of representing 400 stockholders as the Ashtabula editor would have his readers believe, said receiver represents a number of small creditors of the Vulcan company—little dealers with accounts against the firm of $100, $300, and up to $500 or a little more. The big concerns which furnished the Vulcan company with goods stand ready to day to fill orders and give the company any reasonable time in which to make settlement.

Don't worry about the poor stockholders, Mr Editor. Of course no one likes to lose money, but the great majority of the men behind the Vulcan project have many thousands besides what they put into the company and if they have to stand an assessment or lose part of their money they will take their loss like little men.

The Vulcan is not a dead one by any means. The appointment of the receiver is really a help to the stockholders, as it will bring matters to a focus, put a temporary stop to the insistent demands of a lot of small creditors, and allow the directors a breathing spell in which to work out plans for a satisfactory settlement.

Painesville believes in the Vulcan car and the men behind it.

BUSINESS IS BETTER.

Developments of the past week indicate that the improvement in the financial, industrial and general business situation is progressing very nicely. Doubt and trepidation are passing away. Confidence is rapidly returning, and with its coming the wheels of industry are again beginning to bestir themselves. Trade reports are very encouraging. They indicate that a year in trade in 1915 is assured which will be infinitely better than that which we had in the year just closed. Farmers now have more wealth than before, labor is, considering the depression from which we are just emerging, well paid, though not so largely employed.

Some women seem to live charmed lives. We heard of one the other day who has survived five husbands.

GEORGE E. SCOTT.
Farmer Institute Lecturer, Mt. Pleasant, Ohio.

Of Ohio birth. Sixty years of age. Has lived on present farm 35 years. One hundred and twenty-five acres in farm. Married—wife, two daughters and one son. The farm would be considered a hill farm. Lines of farming are dairying, hog raising, selling seed, potatoes, wheat and corn. Produced high class registered Jersey cattle. Not a shirker when hard work is demanded. Has known what debt means. Spends less than he earns. Says that farm has produced 96 bushels of corn to the acre, 35 bushels of wheat, 2½ tons of hay and 16 tons of ensilage. Twenty years' experience in Institute work in Ohio and other states. Mr Scott discusses from practical experience the following subjects:

1. How to Grow 100 Bushels of Corn on Poor Soil.
2. Silos and Ensilage.
3. Ration for Brain and Brawn.
4. Modern Conveniences for the Farm and Home.

Madison

John Austin had business at the County Seat Monday.

Mrs. A. N. Benjamin spent the week end in Cleveland.

The M. E. ladies will serve supper in the church parlors Thursday afternoon, Jan. 28, to which the public are cordially invited.

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. St John of Ashtabula, Sultan St. John of Painesville, R. G. St. John of Cleveland and Mr. and Mrs. H. G. St. John attended the funeral of their uncle, Sidney Platts, at North Madison, Friday afternoon.

The pretty home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Quayle of River street was brilliantly lighted Saturday evening, Jan 23rd, the occasion being the marriage of their eldest daughter, Florence Fidelia, to Harry F. Petersmeyer of Moose Jaw, Sask., Canada. Rev. M. S. Freeman of the Congregational church performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate family and a few invited guests. The bride and groom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Warren Arnold, Mrs. Arnold being a sister of the bride. A wedding dinner followed the ceremony, the table decorations being pink carnations. This wedding is the culmination of a little romance which started a couple of years ago, when Miss Quayle met Mr. Petersmeyer in California. Mr. and Mrs. Petersmeyer left Saturday evening for Moose Jaw, but will visit in Chicago and Minneapolis enroute.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DEATH CLAIMS PIONEER OF MADISON

Sidney Platt, aged 80 years, passed away at his late home on the Platt Road where he had lived for over 75 years, on Jan. 20, 1915. His parents, Lewis and Nancy Platt were one of the early pioneers of this country, coming here when their only road was through dense wood, and went by marked trees. Mr. Platt was one of a family of eight children, two of whom survive, Mrs. Emily St. John and Richard Platt who reside on the old Platt homestead, where the old log house used to stand, just across the road from the Sidney Platt home. He was married to Susan Hewitt in 1858 who died in the year 1864. Two children came by this union, Ettie Platt Belden and Johnnie who lived to the age of 12 years. In the year 1875 Mr. Platt married Julia Karnes, who cared for the children with a mother's love and care and through the years of poor health and sickness cared for her Sidney, who was always so patient and kind to her. The daughter, Ettie, from the far west, arrived just a short time after he passed away. The funeral took place at the home on Friday P. M. Jan. 22, Rev. O. B. Jones of the M. E. Church officiating. Beautiful floral offerings spoke of the love and esteem felt for the one departed, as everyone loved the pleasant greeting, always received at this home. The burial was made at the North cemetery where all his family departed are at rest. Those attending the funeral from out of town were, Raymond St. John of Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. B. P. St. John of Ashtabula, Sultan St. John of Painesville and Mrs. Hattie Means, Geneva.

Mr. Thomas Riley of McKees Rock near Pittsburg, who has been spending some time at the Platt home returned to his home on Saturday.

Mrs. Ettie Platt Belden who was called here by the illness and death of her father will remain indefinitely.

Try This for Neuralgia

Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

Kirtland

The Ladies Aid Society meeting has again been postponed and will hold its next meeting with Mrs. W. R. Crary next week Thursday, Feb. 4.

A ten cent pie social will be given at the South Church Friday evening, Jan. 29th. Proceeds to be used for church repairs.

Some of the young people are to give a masquerade dance at the Town Hall Saturday evening, Jan. 30th. Mrs. Black, Mr. Fenner and a young men from Willoughby will furnish the music.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Johnson of Cleveland, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sanborn of Willoughby, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Sanborn last Sunday.

John Lewis returned last week from a week's visit with his brother, in Canton, Ohio.

Miss Mary Neduchal who has been at the Wilson home in Willoughby for several months, is spending some time at home.

Miss Rosie Stelss spent Sunday with her parents on the farm.

Cal Strang is again able to be out after being confined to the house for two weeks with heart trouble and other ailments.

Dana Brockway of Michigan, is visiting relatives in Kirtland.

Allan Sperry is still quite lame as the result of being kicked by one of his horses about two weeks ago.

Miss Mildred and Katharine Markell visited relatives in Leroy last Wednesday and Thursday. They found their uncle Frank gaining steadily and their grandmother slightly improved but suffering from a bad cough.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Allen spent several days last week with Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Allan and sons.

Mr. Ed Moore has sold his house and lot on the Chillicothe Rd. to Mr. Loren Call and is spending the winter in Florida.

The men's supper at Maple Grove Saturday evening was a decided success socially and financially. Eighty-five tickets were sold and the children had their supper free. Are the men taking up cookery that the ladies may have time to study the political situation or do they want a change of diet?

Eugene Martin has been suffering with a cold and unable to be out much for the week past. Mrs. E. Martin is much improved but still has some trouble with her side.

Chester Meier and sister, Miss Vera, attended the auto show in Cleveland last Thursday.

Mrs. Will Beach is suffering from a severe attack of asthma.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Barnes were shocked by the news of Mr. Barnas' sudden death which occurred Friday evening, Jan. 22, in Chester, Ohio.

The Gist of It

"Last December I had a very severe cold and was nearly down sick in bed. I bought two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it was only a very few days until I was completely restored to health," writes O. J. Metcalf, Weatherby, Mo. If you would know the value of this remedy, ask any one who has used it. Obtainable everywhere.

Wickliffe

About eighty men sat at the supper given by the Cleveland Crane & Engineering Co. Jan. 21. After having satisfied the inner man, they listened to an illustrated lecture on the manufacture of castings. It is understood that these suppers and lectures will be a monthly affair.

Mr. T. F. Honeywell took a load of our young people for a sleigh ride party Jan. 21. All had a good time.

Every night during this cold spell finds bob-sleds loaded to their capacity with human freight passing through here.

Several residents along the main road east of Stop 22 have large electric lights along the walk in front of their homes.

Wickliffe young people give a Box Social at the Town Hall, Jan. 30.

Mr. Joe Baker is advertised as agent for Tamoroc Chewing Gum.

Sunday afternoon, Jan. 24 found quite a number of Wickliffe parents grown young, for they coasted down the hill leading to the shops just as they did when they were the age of the youngsters who were doing the same. The grown ups seemed to enjoy the sport as much as did the children.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Reeder entertained Mrs. Reeder's cousin, T. E. Borton, with his wife and family, Jan. 24. Mr. Borton is a member of the well-known brokerage firm of Borton & Borton. They live at Shaker Lakes.

Frank Fatico, an Italian, stabbed and killed his father-in-law who he says was about to shoot him, at Stop 24.

The Rev. L. O. Eldridge was distributing the new Methodist church calendars last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goodrich of Wickliffe visited his parents Saturday.

Mrs. Thomas Bridgeford visited her daughter in Cleveland recently.

Mrs. Allen who died in Collinwood last week was well known, having spent her summers near the lake here. She was a mother-in-law of Mrs. Frank Allen of this place.

Some unknown persons broke the windows of two or three of the cottages at Vinewood and ransacked the dressers and cupboards. It is thought that very little was taken. A couch drawn up to the grate in one showed where some one had been sleeping. A neighbor being in the vicinity of Vinewood reported the broken windows and led to an investigation.

Mr. Henry Hooper is on the sick list at the present writing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dickey are spending some time in California and other places.

The Womans' Home Missionary society met Wednesday of this week at the home of Mrs. Samuel Austin on Euclid street.

Miss Eva Palmer of Cleveland, State Secretary of the Blind Association addressed the Womans' Club Friday afternoon at their meeting at the home of Mrs. L. P. McCullough.

Women of Sedementary Habits

Women who get but little exercise are likely to be troubled with constipation and indigestion and will find Chamberlain's Tablets highly beneficial. Not so good as a three or four mile walk every day, but very much better than to allow the bowels to remain in a constipated condition. They are easy and pleasant to take and most agreeable in effect. Obtainable everywhere.

Willoughby
SCHRAM DISTRICT

A new door has been put on the school house and other needed repairs done.

The Robertson family who have lived on the Burke farm for some time, also expect to move away.

L. D. Leuty of Cleveland was a recent guest at "Evergreen Place."

Bad Cold Quickly Broken Up

Mrs. Martha Wilcox, Gowanda, N. Y. writes: "I first used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy about eight years ago. At that time I had a hard cold and coughed most of the time. It proved to be just what I needed. It broke up the cold in a few days, and the cough entirely disappeared. I have told many of my friends of the good I received through using this medicine, and all who have used it speak of it in the highest terms." Obtainable everywhere.

In the inner room, where opening door gives glimpses of Lorenzo and the Lady Gwendolyn, I see a man with a beard. The picture could not come to life, for I know that the dead Lorenzo had not forgotten the dead. He could see there, he could see everything that happened. Had Peter Tarlow said to him: "Don't put the bullet in the back of the man who stands in the archway, by the infantry, for the wounded—five and death is thirty pieces. In time we only can realize how your work?"

He stirred when he saw his plans going right—was that of the instrument of destiny? Perhaps he felt a pride in his power—the hands of the dead around him; the video cannot be his gratitude and his breath were very short at time; the throes of a spirit, longer interval of the soul. Feeling on victory and gave no priority of more, the Lady Gwendolyn, Lorenzo, Peter, he great force all the things must be after, and he was silent in the rotted of their side, which was but required by the display of his talent telephone. Then he turned out of his bedroom. Lorenzo's fortune was to so clear that he could not be mistaken in the picture, the way he wear to the world, and partly. It seemed to them that the chief of staff, the head of the machine who had left the room had it turned as he came.

"The cannon are in from Lorenzo's war gone—gone!" he cried to Gwen. "That means that we have been beat by the enemy—that the enemy knows our intentions."

Perhaps not. Perhaps an accident had gone wrong, said the officer.

"No, no man can," Lorenzo replied "I am sure that we are defeated—and we are lost."

The old Engineer is acting toward to that direction the more important that defeated the house, and it can't be the enemy's fault. Lorenzo's fortune—the enemy's fault—has destroyed his life and the plans of his life, and the plans of his life, and the plans of his life,

We Have the Sizes
We Know How

Good feet depend on proper shoe fitting. Proper fitting is impossible without knowledge, PLUS, proper sizes and widths. Can you afford to experiment with YOUR ONLY PAIR OF FEET by shoeing them at a store that may be lacking in either of these absolute requirements, sizes and knowledge? We have both.

Mentor

Mrs. Sandburg and Mrs. Lamb [illegible] recently.

Dr. Clark, Rev. Clark's father, is in a hospital at Baltimore for treatment and an operation if possible. Much sympathy is expressed for him for he is in extremely poor health.

Mrs. Kit Crother's condition remains practically unchanged.

Mrs. W. Sawyer is spending some time in Akron.

The sound of the Knitting Mills whistle is once more heard in the land to the delight of all, for when a big business shuts down in a small town it makes a big difference financially.

Miss Bessie Irwin has returned from a two weeks vacation spent with Michigan relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Rose entertained his sister from Chagrin Falls a few days lately.

Mrs. Avelle Green has not recovered from her severe cold as yet. Her brother John Shoemaker is with her this winter. Mrs. John Shoemaker is spending some time in Florida looking after some investment there.

Eugene Callendar of Painesville visited Mentor cousins Sunday.

The relatives of Clyde Callender of 93rd street Cleveland have received invitation to East Technical High School, where he is to graduate Friday evening, Jan. 29. From there he expects to enter Case School of Applied Science.

Mrs. Willis Rose mother, Mrs. Hans of Cleveland, has arrived to spend part of the winter with her.

Mrs. Marion Hodges is now convalescing after a severe illness.

Mrs. Frank Stone of Cleveland, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewe Jacks.

Mrs. Anna Shoemaker and brother John Warren, have left to spend some time in the South.

The father and son banquet is to be Thursday evening in the M. E. Church.

It now looks as if all difficulty over the street paving is settled, and a pavement from Painesville to Cleveland would soon be a fact and not a fairy story.

A runaway with two gentlemen in a cutter Sunday morning in Mentor resulted in an awful mix-up of horse, harness, cutter and men, but no one was injured. The C. P. & E. car stopped and helped sort them and took a few names.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Reynolds spent part of last week with Mrs. Reynold's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hines and family of Munson.

Several made an exploring trip to Ashtabula one day last week to see the mammoth new green houses there and the lettuce and tomato culture. Among them were Mr. Reynolds and son Claude.

Mr. and Mrs. Emory Harrington entertained Mrs. Terry of Willoughby, last Sunday.

Mrs. Abram Phelps entertained Little Mountain cousins at dinner Wednesday.

Mrs. Sue Markell made a shopping trip to Cleveland Thursday.

Mrs. Henry Babcock, a former resident here, is very ill at her home in Painesville.

Mrs. Parkhurst has left home for a change for a time.

The Bower Bros. of Willoughby are starting a feed store at the Nickel Plate and A. S. Jackett has started "Everything that goes to make a first class feed store" at Stop 61.

Saturday evening was to be the next number in the lecture course [illegible] the Pierces, but the date is changed to Feb. 9th, we understand on account of illness in their family.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan McCarty are the proud parents of a ten pound son.

Mr. Parloe is going to Cleveland to do some mahogany finishing in one of the Arcades.

Mrs. Albert Noble has returned from spending a week with her sister and other friends and relatives in Cleveland.

The Men's Bible Class of the M. E. Church and a good many more attended the services at the Willoughby M. E. Church Sunday evening to listen to Rev. W. S. Bovard D. D. of Chicago, and returned much pleased with the services.

Mathew Dickey accompanied a party of Willoughby business men to West Palm Beach, Florida, for two weeks outing.

Miss Florence Jacks entertained the Young Ladies Sewing Bee last Friday evening. A pleasant time was reported.

Born, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Porter Edds of Little Mountain, Jan 20.

Many relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Rayl of Little Mountain attended their farewell party Wednesday evening. A large crowd and an enjoyable time was had by all. Mr. and Mrs. Rayl are soon to leave for Mrs. Rayl's 150-acre farm in Leroy, willed her by her mother, Mrs. Brown.

Chas. Master with the help of his efficient clerk, DeWitt Tucker has just removed the interior of his hardware store with great advantage to himself and customers and on Jan 1st also installed a no credit system.

The new Disciple church seems to be in the air at present. The grates in the new furnace were allowed to burn out and of course the pipes bursted and of course the new plaster came and the contractor seems to have vamposed and nearly every workman is tied up on the church at present. But it will come out in time and get straightened out in time. The church was to have been finished Jan. 1st but just now it is somewhat of a conundrum just when it will be.

Chas. Sandburg is quite ill with rheumatism and has been shut in nearly all winter.

Perry

I. C. Shook is visiting friends in Canton and Garrettsville.

Mrs. Leon Wilson and Miss Hazel Kirk are spending a few days in Cleveland.

More Births Reported.

According to the last report of the state board of health Painesville has the lowest birth rate of any city in Ohio. The facts in the case are that local physicians have failed to report births to the authorities.

An inspector paid a visit to this city recently and held conference with a number of doctors. Just what he said to them is not known, but since his visits reports of births have been sent in very promptly. The law provides a stiff penalty for failure of physicians to report births and it is understood that the supreme court has recently declared the law constitutional.

George Hamriet and family have moved into the tenant house of T. H. Harrison and will work for him the coming season.

Miss Hattie Adams is visiting Miss Lena Tew.

Mr. Gertie Pritachan was the guest of friends in Cleveland part of last week. Mr. Pritachan who is employed in Cleveland is spending a week here at his home.

There was a box social at the Brakeman school house last Friday night. Not a very large number out, but they had a very pleasant time and realized a good sum of money towards a library.

Fanny Spear, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Spear has been quite sick the past week.

Louise Spear and Harry Spear are both confined to the house by illness. There will be a dance at the Grange Hall Friday night. Covert and Gilson will be the musicians.

Ground Hog Day.

Newspaper men all over the country are sharpening the pencils in anticipation of a mythical interview with a mythical ground hog concerning one of the many myths coming down from mythology. For Tuesday, February 2, is ground hog day.

There's a story coming down from generation to generation, from your great-grandfather to your grandfather, and from your grandfather to your father and from your father to you, that on February 2 the ground hog comes out of his winter sleep way down in the earth, where he has a snug den. If he sees his shadow, it is a certainty that there's going to be cold weather for six weeks more, and he immediately returns to his hibernating for that length of time. And if he don't see his shadow, why, just as certainly, the winter's cold weather is past, and one may expect to see the dainty heads of the crocus shoot through the grass, the buds on the lilac burst open without warning, and to hear the soft song of the blue bird home from the south, to see the better of the first to the fiftieth robin's tail as he follows the furrow of the early spring planter; and one may note a hundred phenomena of nature that come only when winter throws off his icy harness to welcome virgin spring.

But best of science, and those who are only philosophers, and others endowed with no more than common sense, declare the ground hog story to be pure romance.

Money, but no Small Change

At the meeting of the Fairport council Tuesday evening the clerk read the financial report. The village has a balance of over $8,000 in its sinking funds but only very small amounts in other funds for the payment of current expenses.

Fairport is using its sinking fund in buying its own bonds and during the past year has purchased an entire issue of sewer bonds. An old issue of water bonds comes due next month and these will be paid out of the present balance in the sinking fund.

HENRIETTA G. GRAUEL.
Farmer Institute Lecturer, Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Grauel makes her initial entrance before Ohio farmers' institutes the present season. Yet an experienced worker along these lines. Miss Grauel is a graduate of Tiffin High School, Dayton, Ohio, and the Ohio Northern University at Ada, Ohio. Afterwards at Detroit, Mich. Later a postgraduate course in domestic science. Miss Grauel has lectured on Domestic Science for six years. Officially connected with the Cleveland Housewives' League, she is devoting her entire time to the Institute to periodicals. The following subjects will be discussed by her:

1. The Money Making Home.
2. That Bumper Crop—Corn.
3. A Brand New Deal to Farmers.
4. Making Home Pets Pay Their Way.
5. Farm, Home and School Correlated.
6. How to Prepare For and Conduct School Exhibits.

The above subjects are all exceptionally practical and a synopsis of same furnished this office insures a logical and systematic handling of her work. Several of her subjects will be illustrated by stereopticon and slides.

"September Morn"

Girls—well, just come and see for yourself—the finest buds from the garden of bliss,—hesitation waltzes and tangoists.

Rowland and Clifford's Big LaSalle Opera House (Chicago) success is coming in all its glory. Girls? Well, I should say so. Class! Good looking! Good voices! Dancers of the Tango and Hesitation Waltz kind! A large bunch of principals well known to the music loving public and identified with all big musical comedy successes, which includes such names as Leo Greenwood, Hazel Shannon, Adelyn Estes, Wm. Cameron, John Patton, Fred Nelson and others.

The music is of the catchy, whistling kind that sends you home in a joyful mood. Among the many song hits (sung only in "September Morn") we find:

Fatrica Bound Over.

Frank Fatrica of the Wickliffe Italian who is charged with the murder of his father-in-law, waived examination when arraigned and was bound over to the common pleas court under $2,000 bail, the charge being murder in the second degree.

Fatrica is said to have made a full confession to Deputy Sheriff Maloney admitting stabbing his father-in-law with a stiletto, inflicting four wounds, three in the abdomen and one in the hip.

CITY COUNCIL MEETS

Little Important Business was Transacted Monday Evening

Monday night was not exactly pleasant, and when Mayor Malin entered the council chamber and saw five members, the president, clerk, solicitor, engineer and a couple of directors present he remarked: "Well I didn't know there were so many fools in Painesville; thought I would be the only one here tonight."

Councilmen Church and Wyman were absent at roll call, and as four members could do as much business as five, Councilman McLeod was excused at his request. Hardly had he left the building when Councilman Wyman appeared and important ordinances received but one reading, as the rules could not be suspended.

Not a committee was ready to report. Councilman Werner brought the matter of supplying water to Grand River Avenue should go over for the present as the people down there were apt to get more water than they wanted.

A rebate of $21.00 on sidewalk assessment was made to Chas. Strauter, also a rebate of $35.50 on the Mill lot sidewalk at east end of the bridge. This assessment will be paid by the county commissioners.

A new street was added to the city when the council accepted the plans and profiles submitted by Vesey & Wright. The new thoroughfare will be known as Frederick street and will start on Liberty street, at a point just south of the sec plant, and run due west. The land plotted consists of three and one-half acres and will be divided into twenty-two lots.

Among the ordinances introduced was one providing a sanitary sewer for Charlotte avenue.

Hard Sledding.

Mentor has a young inventor who promises to rival Darius Green of flying machine fame. The Mentor boy's invention is a motor sled and instead of following Green's plan and trying it out from the roof of his father's barn, the Lake county lad picked out the frozen bosom of the Chagrin river as his testing ground.

There was an anxious moment or two while the engine was getting under motion, but after that everything worked to perfection. The sled ran at almost lightning speed—it could be sent skimming from one side of the river to the other—everything was lovely except for the fact that the young inventor had failed to install a break. The Mentor boy was only a few hundred feet ahead of when the inventor happened to think of the missing brake. Frantically he shut off the power, loudly he yelled "whoa," but the sled held steadily to its course and in less time than it takes to tell it shot over the dam and dropped the boy inventor through the ice into the chilly water below.

No serious damage resulted and sled is still skimming up and down the highways of Mentor.

Tell Him Now.

If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing, if you like him or you love him, tell him now; don't withhold your approbation till the parson makes oration as he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow; for, no matter how you shout it, he won't really care about it; he won't know how many teardrops you have shed; if you think some praise is due him, now's the time to slip it to him, for he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead. More than fame and more than money is the comment kind and sunny and the hearty, warm approval of a friend; for it gives to life a savor, and it makes you stronger, braver, and it gives you heart and spirit to the end; if he earns your praise—bestow it; if you like him, let him know it; let the words of true encouragement be said; do not wait till life is over and he's underneath the clover, for he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

He's Still Going.

Way back a dozen years or so we heard men say, the man, good-by, his day was done; he'd run his race, the motor car would take his place, we'd still we hear the faithful old [illegible] holding down the same old job, and doing it so true and well he's sure to win his race [illegible] ... The Lake Co. Herald,
Painesville, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

We want to say to you that we appreciate the fact that an "ad" in your paper is worth the price. More than twenty have written us about our excursion March 10th and we give you credit for helping us to give the farmers and merchants an opportunity to see all we propose to show them on this "opportunity" trip.

Yours truly,

"DID YOU KNOW"

The Y. M. C. A. is Boosting Painesville and Its Industries.

The local Y. M. C. A. has recently put out some attractive letter paper, and on the reverse side of each sheet is printed the following boost for Painesville:

DID YOU KNOW

That Painesville is the home of the Diamond Alkali Co., one of the very few manufacturers of Soda Ash in the world, and probably the most modernly equipped factory anywhere?

That Painesville is the home of the Storrs and Harrison Nursery with over 800 acres under cultivation. This is probably the largest nursery in the United States and with the numerous other nurseries in this vicinity makes Painesville the largest nursery center in the country?

That Painesville is the home of the Coe Mfg. Co. the largest producers of Veneer Machinery in the world?

That the Painesville Metallic Binding Co. furnishes the entire United States and Canada with carpet hardware?

That Painesville is the home of the Educational Supply Co., the largest school supply house in Ohio?

That Painesville is the home of the Vulcan Automobile, a machine selling for $975, and proven to be the "world's greatest light car"?

That Painesville's Young Men's Christian Association is the second oldest in the state?

That the Lake County Court House at Painesville cost approximately one-half million dollars and ranks among the finest county seats in the country?

That Painesville is the home of the Ohio Textile Co., makers of "made to measure" underwear?

That the Harrison Sasket Factory at Painesville, is the largest basket manufactory in Ohio?

That Painesville is the home of the Wadsworth Cabinet Co., a firm specializing in the manufacture of dining cabinets for haberdasheries?

That the Lake Erie College for women at Painesville is one of the very foremost ladies' colleges in the country?

That Painesville has the best natural harbor on Lake Erie?

That the second highest point in the state is Little Mountain, in Lake County, near Painesville?

That some of the finest scenery in Ohio is to be found in the drives around Painesville?

That Painesville owns and operates her own modern lighting plant and water works?

Dies After Long Illness.

Mrs. Catherine Heimbaugh, 78, died at the hospital Saturday morning after an illness of three months. Funeral services were held at the home of her son, J. W. Heimbaugh, Richmond street, Monday afternoon and the body was taken to Rockwood, Pa. for burial.

Mrs. Heimbaugh had made her home with her son for the past three years. Two other sons survive, Grant, of Chicago Junction, O., and Lincoln Heimbaugh of Uniontown, Pa.

DIRECTORS APPROVED

Pres. Shulters and Entire List of County Fair Directors Re-Elected.

The expected fireworks were not in evidence at the meeting of the Lake County Agricultural Society. A large number of membership tickets were sold before the meeting opened, but members new and old seemed to be well satisfied with the present management.

President H. V. Shulters called the meeting to order and the minutes read by Secretary Sam Law. The report of treasurer E. D. Barber showed that there was a balance of $205.83 on hand. The result of the election was as follows:

E. D. Rust, Concord, 191; W. E. Thompson, Kirtland, 201; J. H. Homer, Madison, 203; H. V. Shulters, Mentor, 202; A. M. Thompson, Perry 191; H. H. Bundy, Willoughby, 196. The opposition controlled less than thirty votes and their ballots were cast as follows:

David Slackmore, Perry, 23; M. V. Hanson, Mentor, 21; W. E. Frosty, Concord, 29; W. K. Crary, Kirtland, 23; F. V. Viall, Willoughby, 26.

Leave Schools Alone.

School men in all parts of the state are opposed to changing the present school law until the law has been given a fair trial. At the meeting of the Ashtabula County Christy Institute held Saturday the following resolutions were passed:

"That inasmuch as the state has appropriated state moneys and state is investigated school conditions among rural districts, and that in accordance with and as a result of such investigation, certain laws have been enacted putting into operation a plan of county supervision:

"Be it resolved that it is the opinion of this organization that this plan of supervision ought to receive a fair trial, and that we emphatically protest against any change in the general plan of supervision of rural schools at this time.

Ill Health Suicide Cause.

After an hour's play-spell with his two children Thursday evening, Rev. Charles Erdei of Fairport Harbor kissed the little ones good-night, went to his own room on the second floor and shot himself with a revolver, dying instantly.

Rev. Erdei came to this country from Hungary seven years ago and preached in Cleveland for five years. He accepted the Fairport charge in November, 1913, and although a young man had been in ill health for some time. A wife and two little children survive.

Court of Appeals

The Court of appeals has been in session at the court house this week, but the honorable judges have had an easy time of it as only four cases came before them for review. The cases were docketed as follows:

John A. Perry vs A. L. Perry et al, appeal.

H. O. Yoder vs George Colgrove, error.

John H. Brown vs E. R. Morehouse et al, appeal.

The Lockwood Luetkemeyer Henry Company vs E. A. Lee, error.

A New Ford Story.

A friend up at Wickliffe writes that he thinks we should stop publishing jokes about the Ford car. His car, according to the Wickliffe man's letter, is the boot that ever came down the pike and is, he claims, the only automobile mentioned in the Bible. In support of this claim the Wickliffe man cites a passage in which says: "He went to Heaven on high" and says no other car but a Ford could do that.

Switchboard Damaged.

Considerable excitement was occasioned Saturday morning when the switchboard at the Bell Telephone exchange burned out. The fire department was used and in extinguishing the flames. Fire is supposed to have been caused by a cable falling on an electric wire which caused all the fuses to burn out in the switchboard.

Pioneer Shipbuilder Dies.

Captain Orson Harper, father of Attorney Homer Harper of this place and Miss Elizabeth Harper of Perry, died in Placerville, California, last Thursday.

Captain Harper was born in Harpersfield, but grew to manhood in Perry. He was 89 years of age and had resided in the west for the past fifteen years. Captain Harper was one of the pioneer shipbuilders of this part of Ohio and took contracts for the construction of boats at Madison Dock, Fairport and Toledo away back in the early days when steam was practically unknown as a motive power for lake boats. Among the boats Captain Harper built for himself were the "Rob Roy," "Cocquette" and "M. P. Barkalow". One of the old-time shipbuilders, Alanson Sailey still resides at Madison but most of the vessel men of Captain Harper's time have departed long ago on their last voyage.

DEATH RATE LOWER

Annual Report Board of Health Shows Thirty Less Deaths

The annual report of the Board of Health was read at the council meeting Monday night. According to the figures of Clerk Frank L. Kerr the board has been busy during the past year. Eighteen meetings were held. Sixty-one complaints were received, all of which were promptly investigated. The sanitary inspector visited 950 places and ordered 190 places cleaned up.

The Sanitary Inspector's report shows that the sanitary conditions are fair, but not what they should be. There are still a goodly number of closets, on streets where there are sewer and water which are not connected with same. These cases are sanitary conditions and are a menace to health. Another menace to health is the lack of facilities for the disposal of garbage. We frequently have inquiries, especially from new residents, as to what disposal shall be made of garbage. The Board of Health are of the opinion that the Council should install a Garbage Collection System, and recommend that it be done at once.

With the exception of measles, there has been a greater number of cases of contagious diseases than usual this year, as follows: Scarlet fever, 3; diphtheria, 4; small-pox, 10; membraneous croup, 2. Total 19.

The epidemic of small-pox was very unusual for this vicinity, but the inconvenience and expense caused by it to Painesville seem small when we compare reports from neighboring cities.

The expenditures for doctors, nurses, medicine, provisions, etc. totaled $1290.00. The Board would recommend that the City Council provide a detention hospital for the care of persons having contagious diseases who in this way could be cared for with much less expense.

Under order of the State Board of Health, the local Board ordered the vaccination of all school children and about 975 complied.

Receipts for the year were $48, and expenditures $468.99.

Total number of deaths reported, 93. Total number of birth reported, 32. This is not a small per cent of the actual number of births as they are not reported. The State Board is now engaged in a movement to enforce the law which makes it compulsory to report all children born in Ohio.

Congressional Gerrymander.

And now they are talking about changing the lines of the twenty-second congressional district once more. Every one in the Legislature believes there will be a shifting of district lines, the main idea being to make as many safely Republican districts as possible, and as few Democratic.

Senator J. V. Winans of this county is chairman of the Federal Relations Committee which will have this matter in charge and the senator, it is said, would not object to occupying a soft seat down at Washington. The scheme now talked of is to separate Lake and Ashtabula counties from the twenty-second congressional district and add to one or two other convenient counties, which habitually give fairly substantial Republican majorities.

MORGAN QUIZZED BY FEDERAL OFFICIALS

"I Have No Opinion On the Subject," Rich Man Repeats to Series of Questions.

J. P. JR. MAKES REMARKABLE RECITAL

Disavows Any Interest in Problems of Child Labor, Shorter Working Hours, Increased Pay and Improved Labor Conditions.

New York City.—In a remarkable recital before the federal industrial commission, J. Pierpont Morgan smilingly disavowed any interest in the problems of child labor, shorter working hours, increased pay and improved conditions of labor.

"I have no opinions on the subject," he repeated to a series of questions put to him.

"This commission will appreciate any suggestion you may make as a man of large affairs that might assist in establishing a more lasting industrial peace, Mr. Morgan was informed.

"The purpose is admirable, but it is beyond me," he replied, breaking into a laugh. "I have neither the power nor the ability to suggest any legislation that wouldn't do more harm than good."

In the exposition of his philosophy Mr. Morgan went on record against organized labor, asserted the right of a banking house to control the policy of a railroad whose securities it marketed, defended the trusts and endorsed the great foundations of wealth.

His general attitude toward the problems presented to him is defined in the following:

"In your opinion is wealth distributed proportionally to the services rendered to society?"

Never Considered Question.

Once more laughing, he replied: "That's too big a question for me. I have never considered it."

"Mr. Morgan," asked Walsh evenly, "what do you regard as proper labor conditions?"

The witness looked perplexed. "You mean the length of a working day?"

"Yes—for instance."

"I haven't any opinion on that," was the reply with a smile.

"Well, as to the proper income for unskilled labor?"

"There again I have no opinion," again with a smile.

"Do you believe $10 a week sufficient compensation for a longshoreman?"

"I don't know."

He was informed that a Capt. John Watson, head of one of the departments of the International Mercantile Marine, had said from $10 to $12 was adequate pay for a longshoreman. Morgan thought a while.

"Well," he answered finally, "I don't know. But if that's all he gets and takes it, I should say it was enough."

Says He Hasn't Any Opinion.

"What do you regard as the age and conditions under which children should be employed in industry?" he was next asked.

"I haven't any opinion. Nominally, I should say, the later the better," again with a smile.

"Have you never thought of the length of the day that a child should be employed, Mr. Morgan?"

"No, sir."

He was asked about a rule of the Steel corporation that no skilled laborers over 45 or unskilled laborers over 34 be employed.

"Do you think that would be a good rule?" he was asked.

"That's a matter of opinion," was the reply.

"What's yours?"

"I haven't any."

He finally admitted that he would have the conditions as to the labor of women and children improved as much as possible.

PRESIDENT VETOES IMMIGRATION BILL

Wilson Refuses to Affix His Signature to Measure Containing Literacy Test and Sends Message to House.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson vetoed the immigration bill Thursday because of the literacy test for admission of aliens. His message was received in the house and referred to the immigration committee, whose chairman, Representative Burnett, will move soon that the measure be passed over the executive veto.

"It is with unaffected regret that I find myself constrained by clear conviction to return this bill," said the president's message.

"Not only do I feel it to be a very serious matter to exercise the power of veto in any case, because it involves opposing the single judgment of the president to the judgment of a majority of both the houses of congress, but candor and a sense of duty with regard to the responsibility so clearly imposed upon me by the constitution in matters of legislation leave me no choice but to dissent.

"In two particulars of vital consequence this bill embodies a radical departure from the traditional and long established policy of this country, a policy in which our people have conceived the very character of their government to be expressed, the very mission and spirit of the nation in respect of its relations to the peoples of the world outside their borders.

"It seeks to all but close entirely the gates of asylum which have always been open to those who could find nowhere else the right and opportunity of constitutional agitation for what they conceived to be the natural and inalienable rights of men; and it excludes those to whom the opportunities of elementary education have been denied, without regard to their character, their purposes or their natural capacity.

"Restrictions like these, adopted earlier in our history as a nation, would very materially have altered the course and cooled the humane ardors of our politics.

"The literacy test and the tests and restrictions which accompany it constitute an even more radical change in the policy of the nation. Hitherto we have generously kept our doors open to all who were not unfitted by reason of disease or incapacity for self-support or such personal records and antecedents as were likely to make them a menace to our peace and order, or to the wholesome and essential relationships of life.

"In this bill it is proposed to turn away from tests of character and of quality and impose tests which exclude and restrict; for the new tests here embodied are not tests of quality or of character or of personal fitness, but tests of opportunity.

"Those seeking opportunity are not to be admitted unless they have already had one of the chief opportunities they seek, the opportunity of education. The object of such provisions is restriction, not selection.

"If the people of this country have made up their minds to limit the number of immigrants by arbitrary tests and so reverse the policy of all the generations of Americans that have gone before them, it is their right to do so. I am their servant and have no license to stand in their way.

"But I do not believe that they have. I respectfully submit that no one can quote their mandate to that effect.

"Has any political party ever avowed a policy of restriction in this fundamental matter, gone to the country on it and been commissioned to control its legislation?

"Does this bill rest upon the conscious and universal assent and desire of the American people? I doubt it. It is because I doubt it that I make bold to dissent from it.

"I am willing to abide by the verdict, but not until it has been rendered. Let the platforms of parties speak out upon this policy and the people pronounce their wish. The matter is too fundamental to be settled otherwise.

"I have no pride of opinion in this question. I am not foolish enough to profess to know the wishes and ideals of America better than the body of her chosen representatives know them. I only want instruction direct from those whose fortunes, with ours and all men's, are involved."

Obregon Is in Mexico City.

Mexico City, Mexico.—Gen. Alvaro Obregon, at the head of the Constitutionalist army, re-entered the city Thursday. It was the most peaceful entry of a victorious army in recent history of the many turnovers of affairs in Mexico. Here and there, when the Constitutionalists' vanguard happened to meet the belated outgoing Zapata army there were comparatively insignificant clashes, but nothing of importance occurred. Gen. Obregon went at once to the national palace and took possession in the name of Carranza.

Slashes Wife's Throat.

Houston, Tex.—Mrs. Lorena Wheeler Beresford-Snyder, formerly a musical composer and singer of Chicago, when she was the wife of Arthur Beresford, was murdered in the Baptist sanitarium by her second husband, Ward M. Snyder, a millionaire, formerly of Pittsburgh, but recently living at Coleman, Tex.

Snyder cut her throat with a bowie knife, almost severing her head from her body, stabbed her three times in the body and then took poison. He is now in a dying condition.

TENDERS BURTON FAREWELL FEAST

Ohio Society of Washington Holds Annual Banquet in National Capital.

BORAH LAUDS WORK OF BUCKEYE SOLON

Senator Pomerene and Guest of Honor Also Deliver Speeches—More Than 300 Attend Dinner at Which Justice Day Presides.

Washington, D. C.—The Ohio Society of Washington held its annual banquet here Friday night. The banquet was arranged as a farewell to Senator Burton, who, immediately after March 4, will go to South America to study trade conditions. More than 300 members and guests attended. Justice W. R. Day of the United States supreme court presided. The speech making was confined to addresses by Senator Borah and Senator Pomerene of Ohio, with a reply by Senator Burton.

After dwelling in some detail on the extent and character of the public service of the retiring Ohio senator, his colleague, Senator Borah, said:

During these years he has been a public servant in the highest, truest, broadest sense of the term—a public servant who has spared neither time nor great ability for what he conceived to be the public good. With unremitting toil, with an eagerness of mind which has ever excited the comment and admiration of his friends and colleagues, he has gathered information and brought it to the service of his legislative career and to the ultimate benefit of his countrymen.

Tells of Unswerving Devotion.

With unswerving devotion to what he believed to be the right and the good of all he has made his influence felt in the weighty and most important affairs of the nation until now he stands among the foremost of American statesmen, clean, upright, exceptionally able, unquestionably a patriot. There is no man in public life who has a wider view of public questions or a firmer grasp of the great fundamental principles of a truly representative government. Indeed, he has reached the place in the estimation of his colleagues where he seems not so much a senator from Ohio as a senator of the United States, as all senators ought to be, broad enough to mentally encompass the whole country and brave enough to speak for the whole republic.

Praises Senator's Patriotism.

Some of us at times have differed with him in view, but those who have differed with him have never questioned his high purpose nor challenged his integrity or motive. It is my hope and the hope of his friends that this retirement is but a much needed vacation and that his talents will in due time be called again in the service of the country. No gift within the bestowal of the republic would be above or beyond his abilities or outmeasure the breadth of his patriotism.

TO PUT HADES ON MAP

SAVANTS OF CHICAGO UNIVERSITY WILL TRY TO LOCATE "FIERY REGION BELOW."

Chicago, Ill.—Savants at the University of Chicago are going to put hades on the map. They have just announced that soon they will have located that "fiery region below."

To accomplish this work there has been sunk from the basement of the new Rosenwald Geology building a concrete pillar, 6 feet by 10, 60 feet into the earth to bedrock. The top of the pillar is covered with slate and on it are placed three seismographs to measure earth vibrations. The seismographs will measure longitudinal and vertical vibrations and by computations from these measurements the earth's composition may be ascertained. Thus the molten section, commonly termed "hades," of this sphere can be located.

GUILTY OF MAIL SWINDLE

FIVE ARE CONVICTED ON INDICTMENT CHARGING CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD.

Toledo, O.—John J. (Mickey) Shea and four other men were found guilty by a jury in federal court Friday evening of an indictment charging conspiracy to use the mails to defraud.

At the same time Shea also was found guilty of contempt of court in approaching a witness in the case. On this charge Shea was sentenced to serve 35 days in jail. At the expiration of this sentence he will be sentenced on the finding of guilty to the indictment.

Two Dynamiters Get Parole.

Washington, D. C.—J. T. Butler and H. W. Legleightner, convicted in the Indianapolis dynamiting case, have been tentatively paroled from Leavenworth penitentiary by the federal parole board.

Both men were sold at the department of justice here to be ill. Paroles for Edward Smythe and P. P. Morrin, convicted in the same case, are under consideration.

Paroles have been refused in all other dynamiting cases where application was made.

Kills Men in Gun Duel.

Bynum, Tex.—Dr. A. C. Saylors, standing in a drug store here Friday, fought a duel with and killed Joe Fitz Patrick, a restaurant keeper, who fired from the sidewalk in front of his restaurant.

The physician returned to Bynum Thursday night after recovering from a stab wound inflicted last December by Fitz Patrick as Dr. Saylors was leaving the Fitz Patrick home. Friday was the first time the pair had met since. Spectators say they could not tell who fired first.

FIND COUNTERFEIT PLANT IN MATTRESS

Police and Detectives Raid Rooming House, Unearthing Paraphernalia Used to Make Bogus Coin.

Cleveland, O.—An old mattress on a small bed in the kitchen of a Roumanian rooming house at 2206 Lorain av., which police of the eighth precinct and detectives from central police station raided early in the morning, has served for three months as the hiding place for paraphernalia used by a band of men charged with counterfeiting.

The mattress was torn to pieces by police and concealed inside was found a complete "plant" such as is used by counterfeiters in manufacturing bogus dollars, half dollars and quarters. Four men found in the house were arrested.

Early last October Capt. John E. Washer, United States secret service operative in charge of the Cleveland district, learned of a band of counterfeiters here.

Police were notified and detectives were assigned to help find the lair of the bogus coin producers.

During the holidays the department stores of the West Side and downtown district, where many young and unsuspecting salesgirls were employed on account of the holiday rush, were flooded with counterfeit dollars, half dollars and quarters. Most of these coins were turned over to Capt. Washer.

That the coins were being made by one hand of counterfeiters was evident when federal authorities and police discovered all the dollars were dated 1905, the halves 1902, and the quarters 1892.

SHOOTS TWO, ENDS LIFE

BARTENDER USES A GUN WHEN WOMAN WOULD NOT RECEIVE HIS ATTENTIONS FURTHER.

Toledo, O.—Because Mrs. Ollie Sibley, 32, would not receive his attentions further, Robert Smith, 35, a bartender, went to her rooms and opened fire with a shotgun. The load tore off half the skull of Miss Esther Williams, 25, who was in the room. Smith then whipped out a revolver and, holding it against the Sibley woman's face, fired, the bullet lodging at the base of the brain.

Mrs. Sibley lingered for awhile and then passed away.

Smith then went into an adjoining room and sent a bullet through his own head.

Bishop Scores Wealthy Men.

Atlanta, Ga.—John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie are accused by Bishop Warren Candler of the Southern Methodist church in a statement just issued of tainting education in the United States by their huge foundations. Bishop Candler favors the investigation being made by the federal industrial commission and he calls on President Wilson to urge congress in "liberate the educational interests of the nation from a dangerous thraldom, a thraldom made possible by congress when federal charters were granted to these allied boards."

Kills Three and Himself.

New York City.—Hermen Auerbach, formerly a wealthy real estate operator, shot and killed all but one of his family as they slept in their home in an apartment house he once owned at 386-388 Central Park West. He then killed himself. The police believe he was driven desperate by approaching poverty after having lived a life of luxury. His wife Clair, 34; his daughter Beatrice, 18, and another daughter Daisy 16, were Auerbach's victims. Lester, his 14-year-old son, was the only one to escape death.

Washington, D. C.—More than 100,000 persons have been added to the list of postal savings banks depositors since the European war began, increasing the total deposits at the rate of nearly $3,000,000 a month. ZEPPELINS STRIKE TERROR TO BRITISH Five Hostile War Dirigibles Are Seen Over Dover During Night.

ENGLISH FORTS FIRE ON FOE'S AIRCRAFT

German Submarine Campaign Against John Bull's Merchant Shipping by No Means Ended, as Authorities Had Supposed.

London, England.—Zeppelin terror held London Monday night, for five hostile aircraft were seen over Dover in the evening. Gun fire from Dover forts drove the airships away, according to a telephone message from that city, but darkness so shrouded movements of the invaders that observers could not say definitely whether they proceeded inland or kept out to sea. Later an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Dover stated that the batteries in the harbor kept up a terrific cannonade. In addition to Zeppelins, presence of German submarines is believed to have been the cause of the shelling. Coast searchlights immediately were brought into requisition, and the sea was scanned for miles. Between the great swaths of white light the flashes of the guns from the batteries lighted up the harbor's shore.

One report reaching here says that the Zeppelins, five in number, have been sighted at Romford, 12 miles away, and at Hornchurch. When first sighted at Dover, the Zeppelins were traveling west, it is reported.

It has been unofficially denied by wireless from Berlin that a Zeppelin raid is in progress, but nevertheless the lights were extinguished at certain London railway stations and trains passed over the bridges in darkness. A later report was that the airships turned and sailed to the east.

WHERE TURK MEETS BRITON

Map of the part of the Suez canal and surrounding country where the Turkish troops attempting to invade Egypt come into conflict with the forces of Great Britain.

Renewed German activity everywhere finds but one more expression in an aerial raid. The submarine campaign against England's merchant shipping, carried on so vigorously for the past two days, is by no means ended, as authorities had supposed. A message from Southport says the German U-21, the haunt of the Irish sea, was seen off that port Monday morning. Southport is a seaside resort 18 miles north of Liverpool.

Nine steamers which ply across the North channel have been held in Belfast and 14 colliers are remaining at anchor.

Promised resumption of the German attack in the attempt to reach Dunkirk has been made good. On Friday and Saturday nights the Germans made furious attacks upon the French positions at Givenchy-les-La Bassee and Cuinchy, says a dispatch from St. Omer, in northwestern France. The Germans tried desperately to pierce the English lines, the message adds, but after violent hand-to-hand struggles the Scotch highlanders drove them back at the point of the bayonet.

Reports of Russian operations over a vast area continue to come from the continent. The Russian occupation of Tabriz, in Persia, has been confirmed, and the Russian army which pushed the Turks out of this provincial capital of Persia, after their brief stay there, is sweeping to the south and to the west on the heels of the retreating Turks.

In the Carpathians sharp fighting took place Monday in the forests where the Russians are striving to retain command of the passes which keep the way open behind them. Berlin says that the situation in all parts of the Carpathian theater of the war is favorable.

Will Again Try Mrs. Carman.

Freeport, N. Y.—After a conference with William Bailey, whose wife was shot and killed in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman here, District Attorney Lewis J. Smith of Nassau county announced Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman is to be placed on trial again, accused of the murder. The first trial last October resulted in a disagreement and since Mrs. Carman has been at liberty on a bond of $25,000. District Attorney Smith stated he would try to have the second trial started in May or early in June.

AS TO "PROTECTION"

Matter Here That Seems to Require Explanation.

If the Imposition of High Taxes Has the Effect of Developing Industry, How Is It With Shoes and Gloves?

We beg to call attention, says the St. Louis Republic, to the utter failure of protection to develop industry, as illustrated by the contrast between shoes and gloves. Shoes have always been taxed lightly—25 per cent under the Dingley law, 15 per cent under the Payne-Aldrich law, free under the Underwood law. Gloves have always been "protected" by a very high duty, having a powerful congressional champion in Republican days in the person of Mr. Littauer. The tax ran from $1.75 to $5.80 a dozen under the Dingley law, from $1.25 to $5.75 under the Payne-Aldrich law and remains from $1 to $4.50 under the Underwood tariff. If there is anything in the protection philosophy we should find the shoe industry in the United States weak and overwhelmed with foreign goods and the glove industry strong and able to bid defiance to all competition. As a matter of fact, this country, during the first eight months of the current year imported $5,000,000 worth of gloves, paying the heavy duties, and imported free of duty just $320,000 worth of boots and shoes! It exported not enough gloves to receive separate mention in the governmental monthly summary of trade and commerce—but it exported $11,000,000 worth of boots and shoes!

Take woolen manufactures and agricultural implements. The latter are free of duty—and we sold nearly $20,000,000 worth in the world market during the first eight months of the last year.

CONDEMNED BY ITS RECORD

Proof of Charge That Republican Party "Has Not Had a New Idea In Thirty Years."

President Wilson's charge that the Republicans "have not had a new idea in 30 years" carries this period of mental inactivity back to 1885. Search the records, and it will be found that in that long space of time G. O. P. statesmanship has mainly consisted in jacking up the tariff in return for liberal campaign contributions from protected beneficiaries. Previous to 1885 the Republicans had carried the Civil war to a successful finish and had brought about the resumption of specie payments. Progress had also been made in civil service reform. Since then, however they have done nothing toward improving the banking laws, which the country had outgrown, toward a fair and equitable revision of the tariff, and toward solving the trust problem. It was left to the Democrats to accomplish these three great feats. For the last few years the G. O. P. has been drifting along on forged quotations from Lincoln, who has now been in his grave nearly half a century.

Too Deliberate a Body.

Senator Gore of Oklahoma, who has introduced a bill for the creation of a tariff commission, is quoted as saying that "The tariff ought to be handled the same as railroad rates—by a body of men who would not be swayed in their decisions by political beliefs." It will hardly gain converts for this idea to hold up the interstate commerce commission as a model. While not swayed by politics, this body is principally remarkable for its intense spirit of deliberation. There have been cases before it, notably that of the inter-mountain cities, which were dragged out in hearings and rehearings for from five to ten years before a final decision was given. It will generally be admitted that the present method of settling tariff questions is unsatisfactory, but it has the merit of producing results within the lifetime of the ordinary man.

Returning Prosperity.

Further proof of returning prosperity, which Secretary McAdoo says is apparent all the way to California, is furnished by the strength in industrial securities in nearly all the stock markets, remarks the Washington Times. Trading in stocks was resumed on the Washington exchange yesterday, the first transactions since war began being at prices well above the minimum fixed by the exchange, and as a rule equal or better than those of July 30.

Secretary's Position Correct.

"It is not the business of the United States government to set itself up as a court to pass judgment on partisan charges of violations by various belligerents of the rules of civilized warfare. Secretary Bryan's position in this respect is so obviously correct as to defy criticism."—New York World.

Business Needs Exercise.

If the business men of America want a return of prosperity, they must wish it, think it, will it, talk it and act as if it were here. It does not follow that there cannot be prosperity unless there are big flotations of new securities. There is already enough capital invested in commercial and manufacturing enterprises to provide work for every idle man and women in America if the owners and directors of those enterprises will concentrate their attention for awhile solely upon their own affairs.

Wise Democratic Legislation.

"I am confident of the future. The Republican party, if it had the reins of government at this time, would not repeal a single law the Democrats have placed on the statute books," says Senator James E. Martine of New Jersey. "They would not change the tariff, they would not dare to repeal the currency law, which is a[illegible]

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy, they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

QUIT MEAT IF KIDNEYS BOTHER AND USE SALTS

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast if Your Back Is Hurting or Bladder Is Irritated.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acids of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

TWO COMMITTEES FACING LARGE JOB

Solons Must Suggest Means of Either Saving or Producing Money.

OPINION OF HOUSE FINANCE BODY'S HEAD

Reighard Points Out Shortage of About Three Million Dollars Which State Faces in Additional Expenses and Says He's Figured It Out.

D. A. DONOVAN,
Special Columbus Correspondent.

House and senate finance committees are facing a man-sized job, in the opinion of Frank H. Reighard, chairman of the house finance body. Reighard declares that it is up to the legislature to discover somewhere and somehow the neat little sum of $3,000,000 and anybody who has any suggestions or donations are cordially invited to step forward. Meantime the committees are on the still hunt for coin of the realm. Now there are two ways in which the legislature can "find" money, just as there are for the ordinary household or the ordinary individual. One way is by saving. The other way is by producing more money. And since the house and senate have delegated this delectable job to its finance committees, it will be up to the committees to get busy and do something by way of suggesting means both of saving and producing. Realization of the fact that it will be both unwise and inexpedient to increase taxes, particularly at the present time, has impressed upon the minds of the committeemen the stern alternative that most dependance must be placed upon saving. So in the face of appeals from every quarter for greater allowances, the committees are being directed to painful economy by the pointing finger of necessity. Herein lies the severity of the task. Why the shortage? Mr. Reighard says he has figured it all out, almost to a penny. First, there was that reduction made last summer at the special session of the last assembly in the school levy, which was pared from 335 to 055 mill. This caused of itself alone a shortage of $1,769,661, according to Mr. Reighard's figures. There was also a reduction made in the road levy, for the Democratic officials then estimated that the Warnes tax law would result in a one billion dollar increase in the duplicate of 1914. Tax figures show, says the chairman, that the duplicate will fall more than one hundred million below the estimate of a billion, owing largely to the litigation of the effort to place J. D. Rockefeller on the lists for something like $300,000,000. Moreover, it will take a half million dollars to defray the state's part of the expense of the new rural school supervision. To pay the $2 per capita allowance for enumerated pupils will require almost $2,500,000. There is to be considered also the expense of the foot and mouth disease quarantine, $250,000, the $250,000 reduction in the sinking fund levy and $66,000 that will be needed to pay the state's share of the salaries of the new county judges. All of this means a shortage of about $3,000,000, Mr. Reighard points out.

Exposition Commission.

Daniel B. Torpy of Marietta, succeeded by Newton W. Miller of Columbus as directing commissioner from Ohio to the Panama exposition, will be made a member of the commission by Gov. Willis. The commission has announced its appointments of attaches of the Ohio building at the exposition in San Francisco, which is soon to open. The position of hostess went to Mrs. T. J. Bryce of Columbus. The position pays $100 a month. Mrs. Elizabeth Stull of Gibsonburg was chosen matron, at a salary of $80 a month. Other positions were: Maid, $50 a month, Mrs. Francis McFarland, Columbus; stenographer, $100, Miss Myrtle Morgan, Columbus; check room attendant, Miss Marion Longnecker, Delaware; lady rest room attendant, $80, Mrs. Lydia E. Brown, Marietta; man's rest room attendant, $80, Harrison W. Allen, Toledo; watchman, $80, Clayton A. Breece, Delaware; janitor, $80, August Umpf, Cincinnati; page and messenger, $80, Charles M. Davis, Columbus.

New Kind of Lobby in Columbus.

There's a brand new kind of lobby in Columbus—the lobby that is fighting the anti-tipping bill. Heading it is Tom Fleming of Cleveland, a colored attorney and a former barber, who advances the ingenious argument that the anti-tipping measure, if enacted, will do a great injustice to the colored population of the state. The injustice will be brought about in this way, according to Fleming: The law will compel employers to raise the wages of "the help." Then white folks will come along and apply for the jobs at the higher salary and the white folks will be preferred. Fleming is lobbying also against the barber's license bill, which he says will militate also against colored people.

Rulings of Interest to Cities.

Two rulings of special interest to municipalities have been given to the state accounting bureau by Attorney General Turner. In one he holds that a member of the sinking fund cannot serve as its secretary and draw the salary prescribed for that office. The two offices are held to be incompatible. In the other he holds that municipalities may not pay premiums for accident insurance for firemen for the reason that they are under the protection of the workmen's compensation act and in case of injury would receive benefits under that law.

Probe to Start Soon.

Senator Howard, president pro tem. of the senate, has announced that he will serve as chairman of the joint legislative committee which will probe state departments to find out what jobs can be abolished and whether or not there is extravagance in the expenditure of official funds. Because of the fact that he is the Republican floor leader in the senate there was some doubt as to whether he would be available for service on the committee. [illegible] will start work [illegible]

Reorganization of State Library.

The governor has opened the way for Republican control and reorganization of the state library by appointing Oran F. Hypes of Springfield, Republican, and Prof. C. W. Park of Cincinnati, Republican, to succeed John McSweeney of Wooster, Democrat, and John J. Sinddard of Columbus, Republican, respectively, as members of the board of library commissioners, which has charge of the library. It is expected that an early reorganization of the department will be effected and that John Henry Newman of Fletcher, Miami county, Democrat, will be succeeded by a Republican, probably Charles B. Galbreath of Rogers, Columbiana county, who held the office of librarian for nearly 15 years before Mr. Newman was appointed to succeed him three years ago. The new appointments will give the Republicans two members and leave the Democrats but one representative on the board.

Decides Wife Super-Jealous.

Here's a story in real life that smacks strongly of the melodramatic. It concerns Mrs. Fanny Bonner of Delaware, O., wife of a physician, Oscar W. Bonner, who was committed some time ago to the state hospital at Columbus on the ground of insanity. Recently habeas corpus suit was brought in the Franklin county courts to release her from custody on the ground that she was, in fact, sane. Mrs. Bonner represented that one afternoon, after attending a theater in Columbus, she was seized by the sheriff of Franklin county on a warrant sworn to by her husband and hustled off to the asylum. Now comes the climax. Judge Evans has handed down a ruling releasing the asylum inmate on the ground that the acts declared by her husband to have been committed in his office at Delaware were not those of an insane woman but only of a super-jealous wife.

Cattle Disease Stamped Out.

The foot and mouth disease has been stamped out of Ohio, but the quarantine on live stock shipments from infected zones will not be lifted until 30 days after the final disinfection of such places. If no further outbreaks develop within a month all Ohio territory will be free for shipments. The epidemic broke out the first week in November and since then more than 10,000 animals, either infected or exposed to the disease, have been slaughtered. This caused a direct loss of $400,000 of which the state will bear one-half. The federal government stands the other half. The official records disclose that one goat contracted the disease and was killed. The residence of this goat was in a northwestern Ohio county. The disease developed in 31 counties.

To Authorize Issue of Books.

For the past six years the legislature has successfully resisted attempts to get through a resolution for the printing and issuing by the members of Howe's Historical Collections of Ohio, which comprise two volumes. A movement has been started to have the present general assembly authorize another issue of these books, which give the history of the state up to 1888. For years each legislature would provide for such issues for no other reason than to add to the perquisites of the members. The judicious distribution of these sets by the members was calculated to produce votes when needed. Members of the senate are making inquiry as to the probable cost of another issue of the volumes. The state owns the plates for the books.

Takes Case to High Court.

Whether or not a candidate is guilty of bribery if he offers to serve for a less salary than that to which he is legally entitled, should he be elected, is a question that has been brought to the supreme court for solution. H. R. Ditmer of Napoleon, defeated candidate for common pleas judge of Henry county, in a petition filed in supreme court, charges that P. C. Prentiss, the successful candidate, declared in his campaign that, if elected, he would serve for but $3,000 of the legal salary of $4,650 provided for the office. Ditmer insists that this was equivalent to attempting to bribe the voters, and he asks the court to declare the election null and void.

Probe of Departments Begins.

The budget commissioner, the state auditor's department and the civil service commission were the first state departments to feel the investigational diagnosis of the joint legislative committee appointed for that purpose, when it began its labors. The budget commissioner was the first of all to be called upon by the committee, and after he had been thoroughly probed and diagnosed, the other departments were brought into the legislative hospital for examination.

Wants High Court to Decide.

In a case filed in the supreme court from Franklin county the question is asked as to whether a stock broker who executes orders of customers for the purchase of stock on margin is guilty of gambling and hence may be made to pay back money which customers may lose in playing the market through such brokers. Otis & Hough, Columbus brokers, filed the suit. The lower courts ordered the firm to pay back $2,500 which one of their clients lost.

First Sleeper Found in Bill.

Ah, the first sleeper! It was found the other day reposing snugly in an innocent looking bill which professed to permit the inmates of private orphans' homes and county children's homes to attend public schools without charge. But just in the nick o' time somebody discovered that the entire public school system of the state could be exploited under the terms of the bill by any unscrupulous person or persons who could "start" fake orphanages, charge guardians or other custodians of children for their education and then send them to the public schools.

Longworth Calls on Willis.

Congressman-elect Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of former President Roosevelt, stopped off in Columbus on his way east Thursday afternoon to call on Gov. Willis. It is understood that he spoke a few words in behalf of Cincinnati applicants for places under the new state administration. Mr. Longworth and the governor were members of the Ohio legislature at the same time. They also served in congress at the same time, Mr. Longworth [illegible] the Republican nominee for governor four years ago [illegible]

Excess Capital of Present Companies Will Be Divided—New Company Not Holding Concern, Is Said.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—The bringing of $60,000,000 of life insurance into one company, having a surplus equal to what nine companies have now and to distribute among 11,000 stockholders in Ohio $2,000,000 in cash now held as "dead capital" are the purposes set forth in a trust agreement filed with the State Banking and Insurance Departments.

The men who signed the declaration of trust filed are: C. D. Crites, Lima, the First National Bank, and for years identified with the late Senator Brice; C. Edw. Born, Columbus, president of the Central National Bank; S. W. McFarland, Wapakoneta, president of the People's National Bank and a large holder of stock in the Ohio National Life Insurance Company; Judge J. W. Glauer, Mt. Gilead, a director in the Columbus Mutual Life Insurance Company; E. H. Moore, Youngstown, attorney and until recently insurance Commissioner of Ohio; W. A. Julian, Cincinnati, vice president of the Citizens National Bank and identified with many Queen City interests; W. H. Picking, Bucyrus, president of the First National Bank and a director of the Ohio State Life Insurance Company; C. M. Wambaugh, Columbus, president of the Columbus Chain Company and a stockholder in the Midland Mutual Life Insurance Company; W. G. Benham, Columbus, treasurer of Franklin county; Ben Strauss, Hamilton, banker and manufacturer; Perry V. Bone, Lebanon, president of the Lebanon National Bank; Walter W. Beebe, Columbus, identified with the Wolf interests; C. H. Bishop, Centerburg, president of the First National Bank, and Edw. E. Burkhardt, attorney and former Mayor of Dayton.

C. D. Crites is chairman of the board of trustees. Mr. Crites said: "The nine companies under consideration expended for management in 1913 $877,102. This does not include what was paid to agents. The total income was $2,492,612. Good business men and practical insurance men believe that a powerful organization extending into every county in Ohio, much more efficient than that which now exists, can be operated for less than $300,000 a year, which would save $500,000 a year for dividends to stockholders."

TO AUSTRIA VIA AIRSHIP, $80!

Warren, O.—An agent who claimed to represent a company operating an airship line between America and Austria has booked for passage many Austrians who desired to get home to join the army. The fare was $80 for the trip. Of this amount $10 was paid in cash and the balance was to be sent to the company at New York. The game was uncovered when a foreigner went to the bank to draw out his savings. He bid good-by to the cashier and told him how he was going to make the trip.

EDITORS TO PRESS CONGRESS.

Columbus, O.—Gov. Willis has appointed the following five newspaper men of Ohio to act as delegates to the International Press congress: T. A. Robertson, managing editor Cleveland Leader-News Co., Cleveland; W. O. Vorpe, night editor Cleveland Plain Dealer, Cleveland; Merritt C. Spidel, publisher Piqua Call, Piqua; E. O. Burkam, publisher Dayton Journal, Dayton; John M. Keiser, publisher Marietta Leader, Marietta.

BOBSLED HITS TELEGRAPH POLE.

New Lexington, O.—Two persons were seriously injured and 13 others were bruised and cut in a coasting accident at Junction City. The young people on a bobsled were coasting down a long hill in the town and attempted to turn to avoid crashing into a carriage passing along the cross road at the bottom. The sled dashed off the side of the road and hit a telegraph pole, and overturned.

COURT UPHOLDS HOME RULE.

Columbus, O.—By unanimous vote of the seven supreme court judges the decision of the court of appeals of Franklin county, sustaining the validity of the adoption of the home rule amendment, was affirmed.

TEST STOCKHOLDERS LIABILITY.

Cincinnati, O.—A test suit has been filed in common pleas court to determine whether the stockholders of the C., H. & D. railroad can be held liable to double the amount of their C., H. & D. holdings for the debts of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Western railway. The C., H. & D. attached its guarantee to $2,300,000 worth of the C., I. & W.'s bond issue of $6,200,000 in January, 1903, the law repealing the double liability statute in Ohio and substituting single liability was passed.

SHARE IN RAPID TRANSIT ORDER.

Dayton, O.—As a result of the orders issued by the Public Service Commission to the New York Interboro Rapid Transit Company, requiring the replacement of 478 wooden cars with as many of steel manufacture, it is expected that a good-sized order will be received here by the Barney & Smith Car Company. In order to fill the $5,000,000 order promptly it is probable that a number of car manufacturing firms will be recipients of substantial parts of the whole.

BARRED AS EXECUTRIX

Duchess of Manchester, a Foreigner, Can Not Administer Estate.

Cincinnati, O.—The Duchess of Manchester, accompanied by her personal attorney, H. B. Anderson, of New York, and John E. Bruce, who was her father's legal representative, called on Probate Judge Lueders and ascertained that the duchess can not be appointed an executrix of the estate of her father, the late Eugene Zimmerman. Judge Lueders told her that in marrying the Duke of Manchester, a citizen of Great Britain, she, too, had become a citizen of that kingdom, and therefore could not serve as executrix in this country. This is the law, he said. The heavy black veil the duchess wore concealed her features so thoroughly that no one recognized her when she entered the court house. The duchess and her attorneys will return to the probate court soon to have the will of Mr. Zimmerman probated.

QUESTION FOR LOCAL OFFICERS.

Columbus, O.—Gov. Willis has received the request of the Cincinnati Methodist ministers that he stop the proposed boxing contest at the Cincinnati Armory, and after consultation with Adjt. Gen. Hough referred the whole matter to Atty. Gen. Turner for an opinion as to the authority of the executive in the premises. The governor said that, in his opinion, based on examination of the statutes, the situation is entirely one for local treatment. He cited Section 12,802 of the statutes, in which written permission from the sheriff or the mayor is required. Mayor Spiegel, after a conference with Sheriff Schott and the Cincinnati boxing commission, gave his O. K. to the boxing bout between Flynn and Smith, with the understanding that the law and all rules of the boxing commission are adhered to.

GOVERNOR TALKS TO EDITORS.

Columbus, O.—The midwinter meeting of the Associated Ohio Dailies came to a close after an interesting session. Gov. Willis, W. F. Wiley of Cincinnati, and George M. Rogers of Cleveland, were the speakers. Gov. Willis in addressing the editors declared that "the editors publish things as they see them, and while they do not always see them as I do, or would have them take a view, they must be given credit for being fair." He added that during his public life there had never been an Ohio newspaper man to betray the confidence imposed in him, and many times they were possessed of secrets that would upset his plans if they were published.

METHODISTS TO MEET IN MARCH.

Columbus, O.—What is expected to be one of the largest gatherings of men ever held by the Methodist church of this country will be the Ohio Convention of Methodist Men, March 17-19, in Columbus. It is expected that 4,000 men will be in attendance representing every church in Ohio Methodism. The program will be exceptionally strong. A survey of the rural missionary, educational, social, immigrant industrial, temperance conditions will be made and findings of the survey will be presented by lantern slides before the addresses on different subjects.

BUCKEYE BREVITIES

Brinkhoven, O.—Glenmont, a Holmes county village, voted dry by 57 to 8 under a Beal law election.

Canton, O.—George F. Brown, who has been employed on a farm by Frank Yingling, was awarded $16,167 by Judge Ake, representing wages unpaid since 1889 and interest.

Conneaut, O.—Conneaut voted to remain in the dry column under a Beal law election. The vote was 991 dry and 715 wet, a majority of 276. Conneaut has been dry six years under the Rose law.

Dayton, O.—By a majority of 14 votes the local branch of the National Association of Postal Clerks decided not to send a delegate to the San Francisco convention of the association this summer.

Xenia, O.—Five lots here have been purchased by the Greene County Lumber Co., of which C. W. Murphy, of Urbana, will be the manager. The president of the new company will be Peter Kuntz, of Dayton, president of the Peter Kuntz Lumber Co., of that city.

Dayton, O.—City Manager Waite says that inasmuch as Dayton seems to have the unemployed situation pretty well under control and is at present exercising every means available to prevent acute suffering, he can scarcely conceive of the value of taking a further census of the unemployed.

GIRLS SHOULD MARRY SOONER!

Cincinnati, O.—Two hundred members of the Ohio College Women's association, in convention at the Cincinnati university were given a surprise when Miss Emily McVea, dean of women at the university, read a striking paper in which she declared that college women marry too late in life. The average age of marriage he said is 28 to 35. The race would be improved if it were 25, she urged. She also declared girls should not give up their vocations after marriage.

EARLY DECISION IS WANTED.

Columbus, O.—Early application is to be made by Attorney General Edward C. Turner to the Ohio supreme court for a review of the decision of the Hamilton county common pleas and court of appeals, in which it was held that occupational diseases are within the scope of the workmen's compensation law. The motion for a determination of this important question is a matter of general public interest and should be determined by the highest tribunal of the state.

MET IN THE CAPITAL

First Time That President Lincoln and General Grant Greeted Each Other.

There is a man in the public service in Washington who saw the first meeting between President Lincoln and General Grant in the White House nearly sixty years ago.

Charles H. Richards, who for more than fifty years has worked in the stationery room of the senate, saw the meeting. In an interview Mr. Richards narrated the incidents connected with the meeting and recalled the first words ever exchanged between the two great figures on the Union side of the Civil war. Mr. Richards was appointed to his position in the senate stationery room on the recommendation of Charles Sumner and Henry Wilson. He is a native of Massachusetts and was appointed from that state.

"Congress had just passed the act creating the rank of lieutenant general of the army," said Mr. Richards. "While it was well understood at the time that it was for the benefit of General Grant, he was not named in the bill. It was the first time congress had authorized the rank to be conferred in the army since General Washington held it.

"President Lincoln summoned General Grant to Washington from the field to confer about the appointment. Grant arrived at 5 p. m. at the old Willard hotel. At 9:10 he showed up at the White House. I was there.

"It was a kind of reception as I recall. The affair was proceeding in an informal way, the president, some members of his cabinet and Mrs. Lincoln being in the red room, where persons were being received.

"The affair was suddenly interrupted by a cry, 'Here comes General Grant!'

"President Lincoln immediately left his place in the receiving line and hurried to the door leading to the red room from the vestibule, where he met President Grant. He promptly recognized the general, although they had never met before. My curiosity had led me to the center of interest.

"I heard Mr. Lincoln say, 'General Grant, I believe this is the first time we have ever met.'

"To this General Grant replied, 'Yes, Mr. President, you are right. You are right, this is the first time we have ever met.'

"The rest of the conversation was lost to me, as the two men came closer together and moved away, talking in lower tones. I recall that Seward and Stanton crowded forward and greeted the general and that Mrs. Lincoln also greeted him cordially.

"General Grant soon was hustled into the east room and as he sat on a sofa he was surrounded by a great crowd. He seemed modest and somewhat bored by the attention showered upon him.

"I do not believe there is another man alive who witnessed that affair, and I surely doubt if there is another alive who can recall the first words that ever passed between Lincoln and Grant.

"It was understood in Washington at the time that there was some doubt about Grant accepting the commission. He took the ground that if it required him to relinquish active duty in the field and come to Washington he would prefer not to accept it. It was finally arranged that he should continue in active duty in the field and take charge of the movement 'on to Richmond,' which was much talked about in that day."

THEIR INSPIRATION

Not Bitter in Defeat.

The emotions of defeat at the close of a struggle in which I felt more than a merely selfish interest, and to which the defeat the use of your name contributed largely, are fresh upon me; but even in this mood I cannot for a moment suspect you of anything dishonorable.—Letter from Lincoln to J. J. Crittenden, November 4, 1858.

Daily Thought.

Let us wipe out the past, trust in the future—and rejoice in the glorious Now.

IN ENGLISH CHURCH

Bust of Great American Has Been Placed in Country of His Ancestors.

In the parish church of the village of Hingham, in Norfolk, England, near the old cathedral city of Norwich, lived many generations of Lincolns, ancestors of Abraham Lincoln. A bust of the great American, set up in that church by a committee of Americans, is shown with the church. A description of the church by Rev. Milo H. Gates, vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession and secretary of the memorial committee, is as follows:

"The building, dedicated to St. Andrews, is constructed of rough flints with free stone dressings. It consists of a spacious chancel, a nave with clerestory, north and south aisles and a battlemented tower 120 feet high, containing a fine chime of eight bells cast originally in 1619, on one of which is inscribed: Omnis, sonus, laudet, Dominum.

"The nave, one of the best examples of fourteenth century architecture, has five clerestory windows on each side. It is separated from the aisles by pillars resting on quatrefoil columns. Formerly at the east ends of the two aisles were chapels, probably erected early in the fifteenth century. The east window of the south aisle is one of very great beauty, containing a mixture of geometrical and flowing tracery. The other windows to the north were probably once the same, but have since been replaced by perpendicular tracery. The chancel window, 36 feet high and 18 feet wide, is filled with ancient German glass dating back to about 1500. Apart from its historic interest the church is well worth a visit by anyone who is interested in church architecture. For the building is quite the best preserved of its style in England."—New York Evening Post.

LINCOLN AND BURNS ALIKE

Similarity in the Two Famous Men on Account of Love for Beast and Bird.

Lincoln and Burns were kindred spirits in their tenderness, though one was so much stronger than the other in moral muscle, says a writer in St. Nicholas. There was the Scotch plowman, sorry to uproot the mountain daisy and scatter the field mouse's nest, sorry to scare the water fowl from the dimpling loch, heart pained when he saw the wounded hare, and waking at night in the whirling snowstorm, thinking of the "ourie cattle and silly sheep," and the "wee, helpless, cowering birds."

There was the Illinois woodsman with his hundreds of unrecorded sympathies, for he left no poems to tell them. No one will ever know how often he scorned a chance to rob a nest or bring down with his gun a feathered mate, or how often, instead of the thought of cruelty, there flittered over his rough face that look of tender understanding which always came when wood creatures or men were at his mercy.

The boy Lincoln had argued, "An ant's life is as sweet to it as ours to us," and as his first incensed boy speeches had been against cruelty to animals now, as a man, he would stop to seek a nest from which two young birds had fallen because he could not have slept otherwise, or pull a pig out of the mud "to take the pain out of his own mind."

Saw the Future Clearly.

I am glad I made the late race. It gave me a hearing of the great and durable question of the age, which I could have had in no other way; and though I now sink out of view and shall be forgotten, I believe I have made some marks which will tell for the cause of civil liberty long after I am gone.—Lincoln's letter to Dr. A. G. Henry, November 19, 1858.

"CASCARETS" ACT ON LIVER; BOWELS

No sick headache, biliousness, bad taste or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your store. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipation. Adv.

Modern Suspicion.

"Not on his own account, perhaps. But every time I see that statement I wonder whether he hadn't a wonderful press agent."

SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Olivehill, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back, which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I consulted a doctor, who said that I had Diabetes and that my heart was affected. I suffered for four years and was in a nervous state and very much depressed. The doctor's medicine didn't help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills, and I cannot say enough to express my relief and thankfulness, as they cured me. Diamond Dinner Pills cured me of Constipation."

Sure of Their Reward.

They who, continuing faithful to divine grace, however partially communicated, serve God with their whole lives, will never fail of that one reward, the greatest which ever he has to bestow, the being made able to love him with their whole hearts.—Dora Greenwell.

In Nautical Terms.

A good story is being told by Lord Lovat, head of the famous Lovat scouts, who is to command the Highland Mounted brigade with the allies on the continent. A very much ruffled private was under arrest for some offense, and Lord Lovat inquired of the sergeants as to what his offense was.

"He's a very troublesome fellow, sir," replied the sergeant. "Got too much lip, goes out without leave, comes back when he likes, and gets drunk when he likes—just as if he was an officer."—Toronto Mail and Empire.

OUR NATIONAL DISEASE
Caused by Coffee.

Physicians know that drugs will not correct the evils caused by coffee and that the only remedy is to stop drinking it.

An Arkansas doctor says:

"I was a coffee drinker for many years and often thought that I could not do without it, but after years of suffering with our national malady, dyspepsia, I attributed it to the drinking of coffee, and after some thought, determined to use Postum for my morning drink.

"I had the Postum made carefully according to directions on the pkg. and found it just suited my taste.

"At first I used it only for breakfast, but I found myself getting so much better, that I had it at all meals, and I am pleased to say that I have been relieved of indigestion. I gained 19 pounds in 4 months and my general health is greatly improved.

"I must tell you of a young lady in Illinois. She had been in ill health for many years, the vital forces low, with but little pain. I wrote her of the good that Postum did me and advised her to try it.

"At the end of the year she wrote me that she had gained 40 pounds in weight and felt like herself again."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

MIND YOUR BUSINESS.

By Hiram Wallace

I believe that the farmers in all parts of the country pay too much attention to other peoples' business and not enough to their own. The farmer must understand that his farm is a manufacturing plant and that he is a business man the same as any other individual who is engaged in turning out a finished or partly finished product. Farming therefore is a business. It needs attention and a lot of it if the plant is to be efficient and the product is to be marketed for what it is worth. But the farmer is not minding his own business. He lets another man make the prices—fix the rates he is to receive for the output of his plant. The fellows in the cities, the stock-yards men, the ware-house men, the cold-storage men, the commission men, the butter, milk, cheese and egg men, these are the persons who fix the prices the farmer is to receive and the prices the retailers are to pay. And you may be sure that between these two prices there is a comfortable profit for the man in the middle although all that he does is to stand there between the two extremes of the transaction. But that is his business and he is attending to it. So he gets off at Prosperity Station.

Suppose that all the farmers in each district were organized. Suppose that they followed the plan of the Florida or the California fruit growers. Things would be different. But it is hard to make the average farmer understand this. He will listen to the arguments of reformers and take a day off to vote for this or that freak law to prohibit something that does not affect him at all and that, therefore is not his business. But he will spend no time to come into town to attend a meeting that bears directly on his business—farming. He will vote for a constitutional amendment to prohibit the use of cigarettes, for instance, when the chances are that neither he nor any member of his family uses cigarettes. So he is not minding his own business. His business is to raise the best grain, vegetables, fruit, poultry or stock that he can; to see that he is provided with a cheap and sure means of getting these products to market and to get the best possible price at the market place. He cannot do these things by acting independently. He and his neighbors must get together, act together and stick together. It may be admitted that some farmers are awakening to the fact that they are business men and are conducting their plants as if they were business institutions. But the great majority of these producers are just beginning to realize that it is only by acting in concert that the greatest good can be accomplished. Mr. Farmer, you who read this, are you minding your business?

REAL MORALITY.

"Provincialism is not morality," says Dr. Frank Crane, "many conscientious people feel that whatever is different in immoral."

"To many an honest villager and farmer the city is a sink of iniquity. The unconscious ground for this conviction is simply that so many things are done in cities to which the rural dweller is not used.

"I find a very common expression of opinion among those of any nation, section or race, that those of another are quite loose in morals. The English think French are libertines, and the French think English are hypocrites. Methodists imagine shocking things of Roman Catholics, and the latter can curdle your blood with accounts of the vileness of Methodists. A church member in Kansas looks upon a German sipping beer to music in a garden as on the [illegible] slide to moral wreckage. [illegible] would [illegible] real morality as [illegible] which re[illegible] [illegible] of life, main[illegible] [illegible] and enjoys [illegible]

"useful daily work, subjects all desires to judgment, subordinates personal to altruistic motives, abhors dirt, is stern toward self, and lenient towards others. Wherever you find a principle working these works in a man, you have found morality, whether the man be white, yellow, Christian or Mohammedan, consumer of grape-juice or of pump-water."

THE GROUCH.

The Great Creator in His wisdom created many men of many minds and temperaments knowing that if the sons of men were alike in wishes and desires it would lead to unending strife.

He created well, for man is the noblest work of God. But in some way there crept into the world a creature God did not create—a thing self-made, be it male or female, that is hated, despised and abhorred; a thing self-created, self-pitied and abnormally self-loved.

This self-created creature is the chronic grouch that walks here and there in every town and community searching for happiness—that he may destroy it. Flowers and children, because they represent beauty and love, he detests. He reads as he runs that all men are liars and all women but creatures of evil.

In summer he reviles the bright sunshine and hates the green hills. In winter he reviles the cleansing snow and the purifying frost. The bitterness of gall and wormwood is within his heart.

Children flee from him and his wife can be classed among the martyrs. Men shun him and the world hates him. From an early age he walks this earth spreading unhappiness and unbelief—a maker of evil and discord.

Let us throw the X-ray of self-examination into our own hearts and search out the little microbe that has a tendency to multiply and produce, in time, the hated grouch. There is too much love and sunshine in this old world of ours to spoil it with the canker of selfishness.

The Documentary Theory.

Rev. W. E. Lincoln of the Nursery district was a student at Oberlin at the same time G. Frederick Wright was completing his studies. Mr. Wright now adds D. D., LL. D., and F. R. G. S. to his name and is the editor of the Bibliotheca Sarra, and his career has been closely watched by his former classmate. It is at his request that we publish the following extract from an address delivered by Rev. Wright at a recent Conference of Religious Leaders, the title being, "The Documentary Theory of Imposture."

"The Bible is threatened with the loss of its hold on the public conscience, because so-called scholars are proving themselves to be blind leaders of the blind. Leading publishing houses and religious periodicals accept the confident statements of Higher Critics and their followers. They declare that the Pentateuch is not of Mosaic origin; that the ceremonial law was not written until after the Exile; that the history is largely legendary and mythical. In like manner doubt is spread over all other portions of the Bible, including the New Testament.

"It is pseudo-scholarship, however, which seeks to impose these opinions upon us. Those who are propagating them are either behind the times or are withholding the facts from the general public. They are influenced to do this by professional pride and because large sums of money are invested in books which will be rendered valueless if the truth is fully known.

"Facts, recently brought to light, demonstrate that the analysis of the Pentateuch, and its separation into documents, resulted in the use of a corrupted Hebrew text. The proof of this statement is now accessible to all English-speaking scholars in the writings of Wiener, Griffiths, Dahse, Troelstra, Aalders, Hugh Pope and others. Whoever now refers to the documentary theory of the Pentateuch as 'a scientifically established fact,' confesses himself to be behind the times in scholarship. To do so now in the face of all the evidence is scarcely less than criminal.

"Now is the physchological moment for the defenders of the Bible to challenge the pseudo-scholarship which aims to dominate our religious periodicals and publishing houses. If we hold our tongues, the very stones in the street will cry out, and the scepter will depart from us and fall into other and worthier hands."

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

It Really Does Relieve Rheumatism.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle today.

Had the Right Idea.

The tailor's sign in a little inland town was an apple—simply an apple. The people were amazed at it. They came in crowds to the tailor, asking him what on earth the meaning of the sign was. The tailor, with a complacent smile, replied: "If it hadn't been for an apple, where would the clothing business be today?"

Two Opinions.

Word has been received from Mrs. Lydia Burridge that she has bought a bungalow in Highland, San Bernardino, Calif., and is in five minutes walk of church, school and store.

Feb. 2 "Ground Hog Day." Don't think he thinks he'll ever know it's his day, as the hole is so frozen over and up he couldn't get out if the sun shone all day, which it hasn't the slightest intention of doing. Everything is loaded with ice and small limbs constantly breaking. If it hadn't stopped raining as it did all the trees would have been ruined.

"Do you guess so, I and an icon on the bed two in the second? Nothing can stop us! We would let the Cossacks see and know that the czar's pet daughter is under arrest and that we are going to Siberia! Do you think I care for that? I love you and Lanin—you Lord state—for you!"

"Truly?" She was radiant. "Do I also speak wisely?"

"Yes, you—you are real as the sun!"

"Yes it helped me, now to forget the unreasoned animal beneath!"

"Sonia," I had blown out the candles, "do you know what I am going to do?"

"Tell me!"

"I shall go to Lanin. Lanin! Lanin! the Lord state—the czar!"

LETTERS CAUSE TROUBLE

Madison Men Scrap Over Tender Missives

Ray Bissell, of Cleveland, former resident of Perry and Madison, was arrested Thursday night by Deputy Sheriff Graves, charged with assault and battery on F. Farquharson, proprietor of a laundry in Madison.

Bissell was given a hearing in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court Friday afternoon and was represented by Attorney E. F. Blakely, while Attorney M. A. Tuttle appeared for the plaintiff. The court bound Bissell over to the probate court under $100 bonds, which were furnished.

According to the testimony Mrs. Bissell had been employed in the Madison laundry and her husband became suspicious that everything was not as it should be. Bissell made a surprise visit at the laundry and what he claims to have found convinced him that his suspicions were correct and he took his wife to Cleveland where they had been residing.

From his wife Bissell is said to have obtained a confession and armed with this and a set of questions Bissell made a visit to Madison, obtained answers to his questions and compelled Farquharson to sign the confession. Bissell then demanded certain letters which Mrs. Bissell is said to have written to the laundryman, and, being refused, is said to have placed his hands on Farquharson and choked him,—the testimony differing as to the amount of choking administered. The letters were then produced by Farquharson, who carried them in an inside vest pocket, but before Bissell could get back to Cleveland he was placed under arrest.

In court Bissell admitted that he had choked the laundryman a little, in order to secure the letters. Farquharson admitted receiving these and other letters from Mrs. Bissell and of writing to her on various occasions, and sending her a telegram to "be on her guard" after Bissell's visit to Madison.

Lazy Farmer, Don't Read This

The United States Department of Agriculture, the state boards and the experts all over the country are urging the farmers of America to cultivate every available acre during the coming year. The war in Europe assures the sale of almost everything that can be raised. Every article that is exported to feed the soldiers and the citizens and the stock of Europe means just that much less for home consumption, therefore, even with big crops of everything, the prices will be high. If it is not a good crop year the farmer will at least raise enough for home use and will not have to pay the high prices that will prevail. Utilize every available acre for grain, grasses and vegetables. In many sections farmers are urged to try a double acreage of potatoes. It should not be necessary, under proper conditions, to import potatoes into any agricultural county. Put the hens and turkeys to work and give them a square deal. Raise pigs, cattle and horses in as large numbers as the accommodations of the farm will justify and any losses that any farmer, planter or rancher may have sustained last year will be more than made good. The war in Europe may last for months or years, but while it continues there will be an active demand for everything we produce. Should the war end this week the nations engaged will need all our surplus products for a year at least. Take our advice, for once, and do not permit good, tillable land to lie idle in 1915.

Lake County Stars

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hopper of Unionville will be the stars of the musical comedy, "The College Hero" to be produced at the Colonial theatre in Cleveland this week, the week's proceeds to be devoted to the Dorcas home.

Mrs. Hopper is cast for the part of Elsie, a country girl at college while her husband will appear as Billiken, the college mascot. There are 700 members of the company and they are all amateurs with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Hopper.

Bishop Warren Dies

B. E. Warren, 58, died at his home on Bank street last Wednesday evening after an illness of more than a year. Mr. Warren was born and raised in Geauga county but had lived in Painesville for many years. Funeral services were held from his late residence Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Warren leaves a wife and three daughters, Mrs. Guy Proctor of LeRoy, and the Misses Pearl and Meverette Warren of Painesville.

Series of Dances

Mentor Tent, No. 241, K. O. T. M., has made arrangements for a series of dances to be given during the present winter. The first party will occur on Wednesday evening, Feb. 17 at Mentor Village Hall and Hurley's orchestra will furnish the music.

Stolen Auto Found

The big Studebaker touring car, stolen from the garage of A. N. Benjamin in Madison last November, was found in an East 14th street garage, Cleveland, Friday afternoon, by Sheriff O. M. Spink of Painesville and Detective Starling of Cleveland. The car had been changed in many ways, other parts being substituted for those that were on the machine originally.

Four other cars which had been reported as stolen were also located and the city police hope to locate the men who have been pulling off these stunts in the territory adjacent to Cleveland.

ANDREWS INSTITUTE

Founders' Day and Annual Commencement are Features of Week.

This has been a busy week at the Andrews Institute for Girls at Willoughby, in fact it might almost be called a continuous performance as one important event has followed another in quick succession.

The week was ushered in with a beautiful and impressive vesper service held at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Methodist Episcopal church. This service was conducted by the surpliced choir of the school and there was a splendid musical program. The speaker for this occasion was President John E. McGilvery of the Kent State Normal School, and Superintendent S. D. Shankland was especially fortunate in securing such a well-known educator, and the graduates and their friends found much food for thought in his appropriate and well-chosen remarks.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, both afternoon and evening, there were exhibits and demonstrations of school work, to show out of town visitors the daily processes of the classes and the progress of the student. The exercises and exhibits were not by the nine graduates only, but by every pupil of the school and showed not only the work they are now doing but the work they did when they first became students. There were exhibits of Sewing, Dressmaking, Art Needle Work, Laundry, Cookery, Home-making, Bookkeeping, Map-making, Arithmetic, Costume Design and Millinery.

Wednesday, February 10 being the birthday of Mrs. Andrews, has been designated by the Trustees as Founder's Day and was also chosen as commencement. There was a band concert at the gymnasium from 7:30 to 8, and immediately following this there was a half hour devoted to the presentation of diplomas to the nine graduates. Among those who received the prized parchment were Mildred Dorcas Burt, Esther Hine and Ethel Hopkins of Painesville and Edith Skinner of Perry.

Birds of a Feather

According to an exchange the wife of a Methodist minister in West Virginia has been married three times. Her maiden name was Partridge, her first husband was named Robbins, her second husband Sparrow, the present Quayle. There are now two young Robbins, one Sparrow and three little Quayles in the family. One grandfather was a Swan and another a Jay, but he's dead now and a bird of Paradise. They live on Hawk avenue, Eagleville, and the fellow who wrote this item is a Lyre and a relative of the family.

Watch Your Cow Feed

Our old friend W——— of Madison tells us that he went into his cow stable the other night and by mistake mixed her up a nice mash in a box full of sawdust instead of bran. The cow merely supposing that the hard times had come and they were all going to economize, meekly ate her supper and the man never discovered his mistake until the next morning when he milked the cow and she let down a half gallon of turpentine, a quart of shoe pegs and a bundle of lath.

Moon Won't Get Full

There will be no full moon this month. February is the only month in which such a lack can occur and 1846 was the last year with a moonless February.

Full moons follow one another at intervals of about twenty-nine and one-half days and thus it can happen occasionally that February with its twenty-eight days, hasn't time for a new moon to become full. There were two full moons in January and will be two in March.

Band Elects Officers

At the annual meeting of the Cleveland Crane & Engineering Company's Band at Wickliffe, W. F. Prove was elected president; Henry Karr, vice president; A. C. Garnett, secretary; William Wortman, treasurer. The band has been in existence about three years and numbers among its members some of the best musicians in the county.

COUNTY FAIR OFFICERS

Will Remain the Same for This Year. Fair Dates Not Announced.

At a meeting of the Lake County Agricultural Society directors Saturday evening at the court house all the old officers were re-elected. H. V. Shulters remains as president; Tom West, vice president, Sam Low, secretary, and E. D. Barber, treasurer.

The concession matter was left open for the present, after a lively discussion. The best possible man available is wanted for this position and candidates for the place may be solicited through the newspapers. The concession committee is composed of F. H. Murray, Tom West and A. H. Tryon.

Fair dates this year will be the week following the state fair, but as these dates have not been set the local fair directors will have to make their announcement later. The idea of employing a manager for the fair did not meet with the approval of a majority of the directors.

The Madison Cannery

The magnitude of the Wm. Edwards canning plant at Madison is not realized by many people in the county. Even the residents of the east end of town have little idea of what a modern completely equipped plant has been put in operation without one cent of cost to them.

Last season the Edwards company contracted for 150 acres of tomatoes and from this acreage they purchased about 600 tons of ripe tomatoes. These were cared for at the Madison plant, some being canned, others made into catsup, soup stock, etc. The average pay roll for the season was $350 per week to those employed in the factory. This season the company has secured nearly double the acreage of tomatoes and in addition to buying tomatoes expect to purchase strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, red kidney and navy beans.

The Wm. Edwards Co. is one of the largest concerns in the country and there is almost no limit to what can be done at the Madison cannery in the future providing the people of the county will co-operate with the company. The Edwards concern asked for no bonus or free factory site, has no stock selling scheme, and will run their factory nearly the whole year, providing the people of the county will furnish them with a sufficient amount of farm produce.

Birth Rate High

Fairport undoubtedly has the highest birth rate of any village in Ohio. The foreign residents object somewhat to the plan of reporting births and the doctors are negligent in the matter, so that it is almost impossible to get accurate figures regarding the increase in population.

At the council meeting Tuesday evening Robert Myers, register of vital statistics and his deputy, Matt Hietanen, reported that they had a record of seventy-one births during the year 1914. No reports had been received from physicians, the seventy one cases being attended and reported by the two midwives of the village. Authorities believe that the total number of births was considerably over one hundred. Painesville, with its six or seven thousand population, reported thirty-two births during the last year.

Twenty-seven deaths occurred in Fairport in 1914.

Some Weather

When the frost is on the window and the kitchen pail is froze; when the little icy needles come with every breath that blows; when the chilblains make us groan aloud and cold feet give us pain, it's safe to bet that we all wish for summer time again. For while we sweat and stew around in breezy summer clothes, it's an easy thing to cool off and forget our earthly woes. But it's different in the winter when the world is full of ire and the weather is as hard to beat as any loaded dice. We may boast about our climate and about our spring and fall, but the balmy days of summer are the best ones after all.

Carp Question Is Up

The question as to the legal size of carp to be taken out of Lake Erie has been placed at 14 inches long and with net of four inch mesh. It is stated that 65 per cent of the fish caught in Lake Erie are carp.

In one haul of 600 rod seine on the Ohio river they got a catch of 108 tons of carp, which is certainly going some. This kind of fish, while not very popular in this vicinity, has a big demand in New York City, after they are smoked, and are considered very fine eating.

About People and Places

Thirty new students entered the first grade of the Painesville schools last week.

—o—

Mrs. Roy Tong of Cleveland, has been the guests of relatives in Painesville for a few days.

—o—

C. F. Duer, proprietor of a five and ten cent store here, will open a similar establishment at Middlefield.

—o—

Farmers believe that the recent ice storm will affect the sugar season, as many maple limbs have been broken.

—o—

Willoughby citizens want an auditorium added to the new school building to be constructed in that village.

—o—

Bill Southwick has been chosen as editor of the Ashtabula Standard, taking the place of C. A. Corbin, who retires to become postmaster.

—o—

Thompson has not been on speaking terms with the surrounding towns for some time on account of telephone lines being down.

—o—

L. J. Spaulding of East Jackson street received the sad news Friday morning that his father, J. B. Spaulding, had died at Denver, Colorado.

—o—

Vaughn E. Wyman leaves Friday for Chicago and will go from there to New Orleans and Biloxi, Miss., spending some time in the South.

—o—

Unless a Beal law election is held in the meantime, and the city votes dry, it is expected that saloons will open in Ashtabula by the middle of March.

—o—

Mrs. Charles Titus, a former resident of this city, was buried from her home in Conneaut Monday afternoon. Mrs. Titus maiden name was Nellie Andrews.

—o—

The safety committee of Willoughby offers for sale "the off horse of the village fire team." The advertisement fails to state how badly the horse is "off."

—o—

"Nobody home" in common pleas court this week. The petit jury appeared ready for duty Tuesday morning but were excused until Wednesday, Feb. 17th.

—o—

James Whitney, former resident of Perry and Madison, was killed recently by a New York Central train at Wickliffe where he was employed as section foreman.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wilson of Jackson street were given a surprise visit Friday evening by a number of their friends, the occasion being their fifth wedding anniversary.

—o—

—o—

Ohio Cast Stone Company is a new Painesville concern and will manufacture waterproof blocks with a granite finish. The company has purchased seven acres of land on Fobes street.

—o—

M. C. Rathbun, of Madison was in town on business Saturday. Mr. Rathbun is just back from a trip to Florida and is well satisfied with Ohio as a permanent place of residence.

—o—

Maigs Grow, manager of the Grand River Fish Company at Richmond, has been spending some time in Ashtabula superintending the harvesting of twelve inch ice for the Fred Driscoll Fish Co.

—o—

It has been many a year since Ohio has enjoyed so much good sleighing as has fallen to her lot this winter. Every bobsled or sleigh that could be pulled out from under the fodder and straw in the old wagon shed has been exposed to view and hooked up to "Old Whitie" for a spin over the beautiful snow.

—o—

The Abbott dam is not much in evidence at present. Heavy ice near the mouth of the river and quantities of slush ice coming down from above has raised the water in Grand river until there is only a few inches fall at the dam. The corn lot on the Thompson property was under water Thursday morning, but no serious damage is expected at any place.

Revives Spelling Bees

Over in Ashtabula county H. O. Clarke, county superintendent of schools, plans to revive the old-time custom of holding spelling bees. Business men have complained that the graduates of today are unable to spell correctly and the superintendent thinks that this defect can be remedied by holding spelling matches.

Pride in refusing to be "spelled down" at the old-time spelling matches forced even backward scholars to learn to spell. The matches will be held at regular intervals, according to the pupils' progress.

THE TATTLER SAYS:

Isn't it about time somebody started a movement for a Safe and Sane St. Valentine's day? Fellow sent one of those lacy, mushy, lovey-dovey affairs to a Grass Widow last year and she has been chasing him up ever since and now threatens a Breach of Promise suit.*

* They call 'em Grass Widows, but none of them are green and few are blue.

Perry Wants Dirt Road

Trustees of Perry township were in conference with the County Commissioners Monday regarding the construction of a dirt road alongside the proposed pavement on the Call and Narrows-Center roads in that township.

It is the idea of the trustees that a 16 foot pavement is not going to be wide enough to accommodate all the travel and that a good dirt roadway should parallel the pavement. The commissioners took the matter under advisement, and will take no action until after the county surveyor has finished his preliminary work on the roads.

FAIRPORT DOCKS

Hold Only a Small Amount of Ore at Present

The furnaces are not taking ore forward very freely and shipments from the Lake Erie docks last month were only 249,123 tons. Ashtabula sent forward 91,031 tons, Conneaut 50,621 tons, Cleveland 47,422 and Fairport 36,742 tons. The movement from Buffalo, Erie, Lorain, Huron and Toledo was very light. Shipments from the Lake Erie docks to the furnaces in January, 1914, were 455,759 tons and unless there is a better movement during February, March and April the docks at this end of the route will not be in any better shape at the opening than they were last season.

Stocks at Lake Erie ports on February 1 were 366,214 tons less than they were on the same date in 1914. The first of the month the docks were holding 7,802,806 tons and on the same date last year the stocks were 8,169,020 tons. Ashtabula has the largest amount of ore on dock and Cleveland is second in the list. Stocks of ore at the different Lake Erie ports on February 1 were:

Port	gross tons
Buffalo	227,813
Erie	478,006
Conneaut	995,306
Ashtabula	2,547,936
Fairport	343,327
Cleveland	1,927,241
Lorain	514,361
Huron	470,242
Sandusky	2,471
Toledo	295,504

Painesville Not So Slow

"Potash and Perlmutter" the comedy success is to make its first visit to Cleveland, "sixth city", this month, opening at the Opera House with a Washington's birthday matinee.

Let's see now, where did we hear of "Potash" before? O yes, it was way back in the fall of 1914 that the Utopia management brought the play to Painesville—the little city all the stage comedians delight in making fun of.

"The Misleading Lady" is at the Cleveland Opera House this week, and that's another old one as far as Painesville theatre goers are concerned.

Murder in Geauga County

As the result of a quarrel over timber P. P. Hall was killed Tuesday on a farm in Troy township Geauga county. A neighbor, A. B. Dowell, was arrested pending an investigation of the shooting.

According to report, Hall went with a wagon to get some timber on Dowell's land; Dowell warned him to leave and went into the farmhouse to get his rifle. When Dowell returned Hall was still on the land and Dowell then shot him, death resulting in a few hours.

'Nother Stolen Auto Found

Sheriff O. M. Spink, after a three months' search, has located the automobile stolen from the barn of Dr. C. F. House last October. The machine was in the possession of a Cleveland liquor dealer, who was an innocent purchaser.

The automobile had changed owners several times since October 28 and had been altered in many ways, but the sheriff was positive of his identification. Local men who had driven and worked on the car went to the city Tuesday to identify it.

Fall Results in Death

Charles Szuch, a foreigner residing on the Fairport road, died Friday afternoon as the result of a fall on the icy steps at the residence of George Pongrass on the East Side.

The wife and daughter of Szuch are on their way over from the old country, and it was through his efforts to provide them with a home that he met his death. Szuch had called at the Pongrass home to inquire about a house for rent and in leaving slipped down the front steps, striking on the back of his head. Death resulted in a few minutes from the fractured skull and a ruptured blood vessel.

HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE

Over Chagrin River at Willoughby—Estimated Cost and Apportionment Among Taxing Districts

Recently a number of citizens and electors have asked me what effect the erection of a high level bridge over Chagrin River at Willoughby would have upon taxes and the tax rate.

Without expressing any view whatever as to the desirability or undesirability of such a structure at this time, the financial facts underlying the entire matter, probably, are as follows:

The estimates of engineers as to the cost and expense of such an improvement are something like $150,000 for a structure of steel. A bridge of concrete, while the economical bridge in the end, would cost at least $300,000, possibly $400,000. The life of a steel bridge, in all likelihood, would exceed forty years and bonds can be issued so as to retire the last of them at the end of forty years. At that time the next generation, by reason of increased duplicate, can provide a concrete structure for future years. It is not unreasonable or unfair now to anticipate the future to the extent of forty years for the purpose of constructing a steel bridge, provided it is deemed wise to do so. Let us say that the actual cost and expense of such a structure on the basis of a liberal estimate is $200,000. The tax duplicate at the present time is approximately $54,000,000. The rate of levy, therefore, necessary to produce a sufficient sum annually for interest, to-wit, the sum of $9,000 and for sinking fund, to-wit, the sum of $5,000, will be .00026, or twenty-six thousandths of a mill on each dollar of valuation, approximately three hundredths of a mill. This is not such an increase as is prohibitive in any taxing district, unless it be within the City of Painesville. Even in Painesville there is yet a leeway of one mill, while the increase for the purpose of a high level bridge would be only three hundredths of a mill. An increase in levy of twenty-six thousandths of a mill means an increase in taxes of twenty-six cents on each $1,000, $2.60 on each $10,000, $26 on each $100,000, and $260 on each $1,000,000 of valuation.

The various taxing districts, therefore, were such a bridge constructed, during the first year would have to pay towards the cost and expense of such a structure, and the tax rates in the various districts would be increased, approximately as follows:

DISTRICT	Present Rate	Increased Rate 1st yr decreasing annually	Duplicate	Cost 1st Yr decreasing annually
Concord Township	.00720	.00746	$ 899,000	$ 231.14
Concord Hambden	.00930	.00956	7,000	1.82
Concord Painesville	.00818	.00844	94,000	24.44
Concord Mentor	.00732	.00758	56,000	14.56

Kirtland Mentor	.00722	.00748	61,000	15.86
Kirtland Willoughby	.00642	.00668	90,000	23.40
Leroy Township	.01180	.01206	564,000	146.64
Leroy Hambden	.01180	.01206	52,000	13.52
Madison Township	.01090	.01116	3,302,000	858.52
Madison Village	.01130	.01156	1,406,000	365.56
Mentor Township	.00620	.00646	2,114,000	549.64
Mentor Special	.00350	.00376	12,661,000	3,291.86
Mentor Village	.00980	.01006	2,472,000	642.72
Painesville Twp.	.00820	.00846	4,659,000	1,211.34
Fairport Village	.01440	.01466	2,052,000	533.52
Painesville City	.01500	.01526	7,349,000	1,910.74
Richmond Village	.01070	.01096	812,000	211.12
Perry Township	.00870	.00896	2,298,000	597.46
Perry Madison	.00976	.01002	64,000	16.64
Perry Village	.01070	.01096	713,000	185.38
Willoughby Township	.00700	.00726	7,944,000	2,065.44
Willoughby Kirtland	.00878	.08806	240,000	62.40
Willoughby Village	.01300	.01326	2,741,000	712.66
			$54,119,000	$14,070.94

These various rates and the amount of taxes to be raised thereby will decrease from .00026 on each dollar the first year to .000096 the last year and the total from $14,070.94 the first year to $5,225.00 the last or fortieth year.

By giving a few minutes reflection to the above facts every tax payer can tell at once just how the erection of such a high level bridge would affect the tax rate in his taxing district and as well the amount of increase in his own taxes.

Respectfully,
GEORGE C. VON BESELER,
Prosecuting Attorney.

Trap Net Owners Object

The owners of trap nets along the south side of Lake Erie have been in Columbus protesting before the Senate and House against the raising of size of mesh from 2⅞ inch to 3 inch, which the gill net owners would like. As a result of their efforts it is understood that the size of mesh in back pockets will remain at 2⅞, same as heretofore.

A Prayer

O, Thou who didst all things create
To whom are all hearts known
Whose name alone is truly great
I kneel before Thy throne.

My sins remember not in wrath
Though grievous they may be
And strewn along my headlong path
As sands along the sea.

Forgive each selfish act and deed
Each careless, cruel word—
Forgetfulness of others' need
And sinful thoughts unheard.

Let me with uncomplaining mind
Bear fortune's hardest blow
And whatsoe'er my hand shall find
That with good conscience do.

And when my labors all are done
My journey finished here
O, let me face the great unknown
As one with naught to fear.

H———

Not the Right Notion.

A very sordid notion prevalent in the minds of many, is that the schools are largely to teach the boy and girl how to earn money. In my mind, much more importance should be placed upon the proper enjoyment of it than upon the mere acquisition of wealth and other worldly goods. We school teachers should aim to teach the child to appreciate the finer things in life, such as right living, beautiful surroundings both indoors and out.—A. C. Morris.

DELINQUENT TAX

Causes the Sale of Many Lake County Properties

It was auction day at the court house Tuesday, with Treasurer Orcutt acting as auctioneer and W. Albert Davis as clerk. Lots and lands upon which the taxes had not been paid were disposed of, but there was no rush of bidders. Instead of the usual "going, going, gone" of the auctioneer, the owner's name and amount of tax was read and some one of the half-dozen bidders would say "I'll take it," and the transaction was closed. Unlike the tax sales of the past there was no bidding down, no offering to take a few feet of a lot or a few hundredths of an acre of a farm, each sale was for the full amount and there wasn't a solitary thing for the bidders to scrap over.

About a half-dozen local men were bidders, one of them representing an eastern man who makes a business of dealing in tax titles. Some parcels were not wanted and these went to the state.

One minute before the sale started an elderly man rushed into the office and wanted to pay the claims against several parcels of land in the west end of the county. He was accommodated, and drew his check for $470 to cover taxes and penalties.

County officials, lawyers, and others who have knowledge of the delinquent sales, are not at all satisfied with the present laws and think some better plan should be devised. Some advocate that instead of selling a part or all of a place for one year's taxes that the state should add a penalty of perhaps 10 per cent to the tax, and, if the taxes are not paid at the end of the second period, add another 10 per cent. The third time the taxes were unpaid the property should be sold at public auction in the same manner as any other court sale is conducted, and the money received, after settling the tax claims, should revert to the owner of the property.

Artistic.

"There!" said Mr. Nagg, after a labored explanation of why he had stayed out so late. "I hope this is satisfactory." "It is more than satisfactory," Mrs. Nagg told him, "it is simply beautiful."

HIGH SPOTS IN ROCKEFELLER'S TESTIMONY

"I took back upon the conference with Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Harkness, and I knew they had not helped me, and I knew that they asked me Friday, I think that, if I would come down and testify before the Senate, I would be in a position to do that relative. I'm very sorry to put you with all this trouble, gentlemen."

"We have not asked you for anything which may, we would swear, then of our own knowledge, be in any way, shape or form, to your disadvantage. We have asked questions such as we were, are not to be answered by you, and we have asked you questions which, we were sure, you could be answering. Now, gentlemen, men were sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and I am sorry."

"We shall use duty of remainder capital, and we shall use it to the best of our ability, and we shall use it to the best of our ability, and we shall use it to the best of our ability, and we shall use it to the best of our ability."

New York (This Date) (Gordon Gallup, Dr. appearing before the Senate investigating committee on industrial relations Friday afternoon asked to take the stand for a few minutes and read from a written statement which defended the Rockefeller Foundation. The answer of the "old Rockefeller" was a big surprise as he had been subpoenaed to appear and he refused to put his appearance.

The statement read that the Rockefeller Foundation was "not a Rockefeller foundation." It was stated that Rockefeller "If any has lost capital I think the money should be put back in the New York state legislature."

Rockefeller said he was not acquainted with Carnegie's proposed gift to colleges, most before the committee. They he walked into the room with his son and was assisted to the platform by an attendant.

Answers Questions in Clear Voice

He seemed a little hoarse from the large crowd but answered questions in a clear voice.

In reply to questions about himself he said his address is Pocantico Hills.

The witness said he was "not acquainted with a written statement, he whether written questions and answers he had prepared himself."

Rockefeller said he was a bible class teacher, and a deacon.

"Question No. 11—The majority and minority which underlie the Rockefeller Foundation which you have personally prepared?

"Answer—The only name which underlies the various foundations which I have contributed has been the attempt to devote a portion of my fortune to the benefit of my fellow men. The principles have been fully set forth in the various charters and deeds.

"Question 12—Have other principles been already made a part of the record of your commission?

Gives Purpose and Plans.

"Question No. 13—Your purpose and plans with respect to the expenditure of the special $10,000,000 donation which is reserved for you by the Rockefeller Foundation?

"Answer—The Rockefeller Foundation was a corporation into legal control form of my own personal plans of giving, followed for many years. While I desire to have the direction of the use of the funds, I feel that it would be making no just gift if I reserved the right to designate during my lifetime specific objects to which $2,000,000 of my income should be given annually for purpose being the life was to provide for the required income for the support of my personal in accordance with related in the place of my residence to which I have been a contributor in the past.

"Under the terms of the charter of the foundation, the trustees have the right to use the entire income and the entire principal of the foundation, and my designation are subject to review by the board in its first finance.

House Favors Two Dreadnaughts

Washington, D. C.—Over a vigorous protest from Majority Leader Underwood and his house to produce the naval appropriation bill Friday night passed a program for the construction of two new dreadnaughts.

The action was taken after a prolonged debate which began at 2 o'clock and ended at 10 o'clock. The program calls for the building of a battleship approximately 30,000 tons and a battle cruiser of 30,000 tons.

Anti-Slave Figure Dies.

Washington, D. C.—Dr. George W. Williams, a prominent figure in the anti-slavery days, died here at the age of 70 years.

THEORY GOOD, PRACTICE POOR

Service News, official publication of the Nickel Plate road, contains a strong editorial of "Pride of Station Properties." Just how the company, agent, or any one else could take pride in the old sheep shed that is dubbed dignified by a passenger station in Painesville is hard to determine. Among other things, the editorial says:

If a station and its environment is neat and clean, it will redound to the credit of the one in charge; if the environment is left as a haven of rest for tramps and those who have, mayhap, come long enough to remove valuables, well, possibly, some little tree is left for a crow.

Take pride in everything that is within your jurisdiction. A person is often judged by the appearance of his surroundings, a household, by the condition of her habitation. A station agent may be similarly judged.

Pride should be taken to keep up walling rooms in a tidy condition, so that patrons of the company may have no cause for criticism. Have a place for brooms, shovels, pickaxes and other articles which are frequently in use, and when not in use, keep them on their places. Coopers should never be allowed to get in the condition in which they are only too often seen.

Think of calling the local shanty "a haven of rest!" It is a fact that "a person is often judged by the appearance of his surroundings" and is also a fact that the traveling public judges the Nickel Plate road and service by the old, out-of-date depots scattered along the line.

If the road does not get its full share of the passenger business it has no one but itself to blame. There is travel enough here and out of the city like Painesville to warrant the company in providing a modern, well-equipped waiting station and until such a building is constructed the traveling public will continue to use the trolley line or other railroads wherever possible.

LISTEN DAUGHTER

Listen daughter. Your mother tells me that you and she have been talking over the matter of getting a hired girl to do the housework. She also says that she feels sure that you very could get along with the work all right, and that the young fellow who is coming around here evenings will thank we are not swell enough if he should come home to another do the housework. Don't worry about that. If he likes such stuff, he is not good enough for you. But he looks pretty good to me and I'd be in half the fix I saw him to be he'd think all the more of you when he knows that you not only know how to cook and make and mend, but that you are on the job. So let's put up a little grease on him. The next time he comes, revive him in your mother's room. Tell him to arrange himself in the parlor for a moment until you finish mentioning the supper dishes. I won't be here, you know. He pacts not my judge slightly to make his calls. So I won't be in the parlor to embarrass him.... Then, along about ten o'clock, ask him if he wouldn't like a bite of lunch. He'll insist that it will be too much trouble, but you tell him he may if comes along and help. Any man in the world will fall for that. He'll insist that along after you to the kitchen. You'll have the chairs all set and the proper customs ready. The customs will consist of two spoons, one for you and one for him. Oh, he'll put up a fight. He knows a mighty lot about the proper customs of the table. He has been to a wedding. Probably he has been at a wedding. Probably he has been at a wedding. Probably he has been at

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now. Then the results will—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul breath—sure them. Stop taking nasty, sickening cathartics.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then just to keep their liver strong and to keep their bowels regular. They work gently while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and gross, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they taste like candy or mints. Adv.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

"I think we have practically agreed upon the two indivisibles which have been the cause of our trouble." I continued, with a smile. "Now, I'm ready to listen to your proposal that we take a friendlier attitude to each other."

"And you," put in another officer, who had brought a chorus of assent.

"No, not I—only, these truly!" Lessing's face was red. "I'm ready for it, if this matter—The thing I wanted to say—I'm ready to forget the unfortunate incident, if we can forget and labored for the same purpose this day. Gentlemen, I'm sure, when you read the troops forward in a manufacturing country, you will see that it is a duty. Gentlemen, I thank you for your courtesy."

Lucky Hercules.

It was about the middle of the nineteenth century that the superstitious use of horseshoes as emblems of good luck originated in England. They were nailed on doors of houses, with the curve upward, in the belief that luck was with or will spirit could enter a house guarded by the curve. The curve of iron resembled the shape of the moon, which was a lucky emblem with Catholic countries. Hercules, the god of a favorite idol, and one of the most popular of the Greek heroes, was a lucky man. He was a strong man, and he was the first man who was called upon to do a job of work and get it done. Hercules was the man who had to do the job of cleaning the Augean stables, and he did it. He was the man who had to get rid of the Lernean hydra, and he did it. He was the man who had to get the golden apples of the Hesperides, and he got them. He was the man who had to bring the dog Cerberus from the lower regions, and he did it. He was the man who had to get the girdle of Queen Hippolyta, and he got it. He was the man who had to get the cattle of Geryon, and he got them

"SAVING" MONEY

Mrs. Jones Has a Fine Scheme but Her Husband Objects

"I stopped in to see Mrs. Smith this afternoon," remarked Mrs. Jones "and I was surprised to learn she bakes all the bread for her family. She hasn't bought a loaf of bread at the baker's for years and the saving is astonishing. I never realized how much money a woman could save by doing her own baking. So I have made up my mind to quit patronizing the baker."

"Well, you may calm your mind down again," said Jones, "for I won't stand for any more of your back-action economy. It is true that the right kind of a woman can save all kinds of money by doing her own baking. My sainted mother was a humdinger at making bread, and she exhibited at the county fair every year and always gathered in the blue ribbon and the wooden medal. This was in the halcyon days when people bought very little at the stores. We raised everything we needed, except tobacco, on the farm. Father had his wheat field and mowed the golden grain with a scythe and threshed it with a flail, and then took it to the grist mill and had it ground into real flour, the kind of flour that makes whiskers grow on a man's insides.

"Mother made her world-beating bread with the simplest of implements. She had a board to knead the dough on, and a rolling pin that father whittled out of a piece of cordwood, and I don't remember anything else. And she baked her bread in an old muzzle loading cook stove that was brought to this country by the pilgrim fathers. And as I remarked in a previous chapter, her bread took the ribbons and the honorable mention at the county fair every year and the local paper always had a long editorial about it.

"If I thought for a moment, Mrs. Jones, that you would emulate the example of that grand woman, I'd send for a barrel of flour and a gallon of yeast and tell you to go ahead and bake until the cows come home. But I haven't lived with you all these years without getting wise to your curves, and the most expensive thing I ever ran up against is your economy. Before you could bake a loaf of bread you'd discover that a new stove is necessary, for the old one doesn't track right and acts as though it had the heaves. You'd keep on my trail until I blew in $100 or so for a patent revolving stove with all the latest dofunnies. Then you would want a large, silver mounted cabinet to keep the bread in when it was baked, and about 10,000 implements and utensils of one sort or another, and by the time you had your first batch of bread ready for consumption the infirmary director would be hacking his rig up to the front door and inviting us all to take a ride over to the county farm.

"As I look back across the voiceless years I remember the time when you proved to me by statistics that a cow would be a great saving to us. I was younger then, and thought you might possibly be right once in a coon's age, so I sold my only government bond and invested the proceeds in a lady cow.

"I naturally supposed that the contract wouldn't call for more than a milk bucket and churn as accessories, and I was thinking of an old-fashioned dash churn such as my mother used to handle. But before we had a full equipment I had to soak my watch and borrow money from my friends.

"I discovered that an ordinary bobtailed cow calls for more furniture than a modern apartment building. All the delivery wagons in town were chasing out to our place leaving tinware and patent doodads and there were workmen here day after day building a sanitary stable with a cement floor and ventilators in the roof. I had to buy a sanitary suit before you would let me milk and I got so sick of sanitary buckets and milk-stools that it soured my sunny nature.

"It took me three years to get out of the hole after that experiment and now you want to save money by baking bread! I draw the line here and now, Mrs. Jones."

How to be Healthy.

Jeanne Jomelli, the opera star, said: "If you are a consumptive, sing, or, if you think you are drifting into consumption. I do not advance the ridiculous claim that singing alone will save you or cure you, but it is one of the essentials if one wishes to bring about that result. Singing means deep breathing, and personally I have never heard of a singer being a consumptive."

"What Madame Jomelli said of singers is equally true about actors," said Miss Eugenie Blair, who is being featured in "A Fool There Was," which comes to the Utopia, Monday, February 15th.

"I know personally of only one actor who has died of consumption during the last twenty-two years. Now this is remarkable when you take into consideration the long jumps, waiting at Junction stations, at all times of the night and day, in all sorts of weather and this, crowned with the idiotic heating of the railroad cars, with doors wide open one minute and the next the car like a fiery furnace. Again, the actors have to endure drafts on the stage, poorly ventilated dressing rooms, often playing in tights with the thermometer down to the freezing point. Yet notwithstanding all these health breaking experiences the actor at the end of the season is still on the job.

Ventilate the lungs by deep breathing and don't allow them to become like unsanitary apartments, and undisturbed resting place for germs. In short, keep the mouth shut, breathe through the nose night and day, thereby enlarging the nostrils, and you will become healthy and happy and be in prime condition to resist the germs of tuberculosis.

Laundry Day For Cupid

St. Valentine's Day is due on Sunday this year—and will therefore be celebrated on the 15th, so there is no reason why Cupid, like eveyone else, should not have his "blue Monday," which every housekeeper knows is another term for that cheerless household occasion, wash-day.

Some of the most fetching Valentine Cupids this year wear soldier caps and epaulets quite appropriately, for the imagination of youthful feminity now turns towards brass buttons and other military effects. Hearts and darts are as plentiful as ever, and there is a growing tendency toward making all Valentine missives captivating, whether the sentiment thereon is a declaration of affection, or a "knock" humorously expressed.

St. Valentine's Day has degenerated somewhat in recent years. Formerly the proper ceremony was the drawing of a kind of lottery, followed by ceremonies not much unlike what is generally called the game of forfeits. St. Valentine's Day is alluded to by Shakespeare and by Chaucer and other writers of the olden days.

St. Valentine was a priest at Rome martyred in the third century, and seems to have had nothing to do with customs of the day except that it has received his name.

Waite Hill

Well I've lost all faith in the groundhog tradition, for just look at the weather this Tuesday morning.

Autos were quite numerous on the country roads Sunday and seemed to run as nicely as in warm weather, but give us the good old summer time for autoing.

A number of families around here have been having the grip, the Presley, Yaxley and Brichford families and Miss Amelia Tinkham was quite ill for two weeks with it, but all are better and are getting out again.

The 64th birthday anniversary of Mrs. Mary K. Smith occurred on Saturday, Feb. 6th and a few days previous to this Mrs. Smith received a letter from her friend, "Aunt" Matilda Damon of Minnesota, whose birthday also occurs on the same date as Mrs. Smith's, but is eleven years older, making Mrs. Damon 95. Mrs. Smith's present home was the home of "Aunt" Matilda way back in the fifties, when her four children were kids and went to district school in that old "red school house" by the river. How well we remember them, and why shouldn't we? as the two eldest Henry and James were in our classes, and we were always on a strife to see which would stand at the head of the classes. We sincerely hope these worthy women will enjoy many more birthday anniversaries. There are only a few of the older Kirtland residents left that have reached their 80th milestone. I can only think of a half dozen, Mrs. Smith, [illegible] Booth, Mr. and Mrs. John Hazeltine, Mr. Isaac Wright and sister, Mrs. Kittie Reynolds.

Mrs. Walter Baldwin is on the sick list, and Mr. and Mrs. Worth Baldwin of Ashtabula are there assisting them.

There will be another dance at Kirtland Town Hall Saturday evening, the 13th. The masquerade two weeks ago drew a large crowd, about 70 couple attended. The orchestra consisted of the following musicians, Guy Fletcher, violin; Frank Eldridge cornet; Miss Nellie Slack, pianist.

The next number on the lecture course comes off this Tuesday eve.

It is reported that Dr. Tanner of Willoughby slipped and fell on the icy steps of his office one day last week and fractured some of his ribs, but he keeps right on with his practice.

In a recent issue of the Independent was a letter from Chester Hadlock which we very much enjoyed reading, as he was a former near neighbor of ours and we're always pleased to hear from old friends. He seems to think it a fine country around where he resides, and would be glad to see our Waite Hill auto parties wending its way thither some balmy spring day, which we are liable to undertake, but that 6 miles of dirt road is rather rough as we were over it last season, but if you're well put together one might stand it, but I would advise one to have the top to their auto up and all the curtains on so as not to get spilled out. Now some balmy Sunday next spring when "we smell that chicken dinner cooking" we'll call together the Ford procession and wend our way toward Silver Lake, and be there in time for dinner. It will only make a little over one hundred miles and some of our trips last fall we covered over 130 miles and didn't half try. So Chester be on the lookout for us, and be prepared as we get 'awful hungry' on those trips.

Has Used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for 20 Years.

"Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in my household for the past twenty years. I began giving it to my children when they were small. As a quick relief for croup, whooping cough, and ordinary colds, it has no equal. Being free from opium and other harmful drugs, I never felt afraid to give it to the children. I have recommended it to a large number of friends and neighbors, who have used it and speak highly of it," writes Mrs. Mary Minke, Shortsville, N. Y. Obtainable everywhere.

Leroy

Ward Tenney who is attending a business school in Cleveland was the guest over Sunday of his parents Mr. and Mrs. C. Tenney.

The first Farmers Institute held in LeRoy was a decided success in all respects except the weather which could not have been worse. The roads being very icy and it rained all day, but it did not prevent a good attendance from first to last. The speakers were first class and handled their subjects in a manner that showed they were practical farmers. The music was furnished by the Harmony Club of West Salem and was composed of four ladies. Mrs. Lillian Moore and daughters Mamie and Mildred and Miss Mary Hoffman. The appreciation of their music was shown at the concert given by them Saturday evening, when the Hall was crowded. It was decided to hold an Institute again next year and officers were elected. President, H. F. Callow; Secretary, J. H. Winchell; Executive Committee W. G. Cook, J. H. Harrison and C. H. Eggleston.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Morse and daughter of East LeRoy were guests Sunday of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Morse.

H. F. Callow and son Glen, attended the Farmer's Institute in Perry last Monday.

D. J. Webb of Perry was at the Farmer's Institute in LeRoy last Friday.

Mrs. Ellen Upson was taken ill suddenly Sunday evening and is in a critical condition. Her daughters Mrs. T. H. Harrison and Mrs. D. C. Wedge and families [illegible] homes [illegible] them back. Dr. Carmody was called and is still attending her but she is still very ill.

Miss Ethel Pritschan is confined to her bed with a cold and swelled neck.

Delmer Adams is confined to the house by illness.

LEGAL NOTICE

George Philpott, Elizabeth Philpott, Dall Philpott and Judson Philpott, all residing at Detroit, Michigan, will take notice that on the 29th day of Jan., 1915, Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, filed their petition in the Common Pleas Court of Lake County, Ohio, in case No. 4838, against the above named parties and others, heirs at law and devisees of Joseph Philpott, deceased, praying for the reformation of a deed to the following described premises:

Parcel 1. Situated in Willoughby, in the County of Lake and State of Ohio, to-wit: and known as part of Lot No. 1 in tract No. 1 in said Township and described as follows: Beginning at a stone set on the tract Line between tract No. 1 and tract No. 2 and on the north Line of Lot No. 1 and on the North line of land owned by F. B. Squires. Thence North 3 degrees 00 minutes East on said tract line 677 feet to a Stake. Thence South 86 degrees 30 minutes East on the South line of Land this day deeded by the above Grantor to Florence Clark and Jennie Kitchen 1347 feet to the westerly line of land owned by [illegible] Covert. Thence South 2 degrees 40 minutes West on said Covert westerly Line 677 feet to a stake. Thence North 86 degrees 30 minutes West 1351 feet to the place of beginning—a piece of land 24 feet square in the Southwest corner of the above described parcel of land is not conveyed by this deed, containing without said 24 feet square of land 20 95-100 Twenty and ninety five one Hundredths acres of land.

Parcel 2. Also another piece of land in tract No. 2 beginning at the center of the road at the S. W. corner of land deeded to Florence Clark and her heirs, thence in the center of the road to the S. W. corner of land owned by Elmer Clark, thence on Clark's N. line to tract No. 1, thence S. on tract line No. 1 to Clark's S. line, thence W. on Clark's S. line to the place of beginning containing 2 41-100 acres of land.

Said petition alleges that on the 4th day of October 1905 said Joseph Philpott executed and delivered to said plaintiffs his Warranty Deed whereby he intended and attempted to convey the title to the above described real estate to said plaintiffs and that said plaintiffs paid the full purchase price of the same to-wit: the sum of $1200.00; that by the mistake of the person who drew the deed the granting clause in said deed was written "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, his heirs and assigns forever." Said petition asks that said deed may be reformed so that the granting clause will read: "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, their heirs and assigns forever."

Said defendants are required to answer on or before the 19th day of March, 1915, or judgment may be taken against them.

MAIL BOXES FOR MAIL ONLY

Uncle Sam to Get After Distributors of Circulars and Bills.

The United States government frowns upon the practice of distributors of circulars putting advertising matter or even gas or electric light bills in the mail receptacles at residences.

These private mail boxes, according to an interpretation of a new congressional act, will be under the protection of Uncle Sam and they are not to be used for advertising or other matter that does not bear postage.

Under an amendment to the postal laws and regulations these private mail receptacles are a part of the federal postal establishment.

The act provides a maximum fine of $1,000 or three years' imprisonment or both for persons depositing anything in private mail boxes other than matter properly addressed and sent through the mails. It also covers robbery of private mail receptacles or tampering with the locks or defacing the boxes.

Doubles Selling Field

There is not a shadow of doubt that butchers, grocers, and general merchants can make the rural carrier system a delivery service for themselves at no greater expense for postage than the cost of city delivery. Very few merchants can afford to make deliveries for a distance of eight or ten miles into the country, and it will hardly be denied that, by using the rural carrier service, the average merchant's selling field can be enlarged nearly twofold.

While the delivery of dry goods, clothing, groceries, meats and other commodities from town to country by rural carrier is steadily increasing (as must be the case where experience is daily demonstrating to new patrons the unparalleled benefits of the government's rural mail service,) the increase would be incomparably more rapid were merchants and farmers generally to study more thoroughly their own best interests with relation to the manifold advantages of the wonderful, wide-reaching, genuinely-economical and universally serviceable parcel post.

New Willoughby School

The new Willoughby high school which is to be erected soon is to be fireproof, three stories high, faced with tapestry brick and trimmed in terra cotta. The structure is to be 130 feet front by 90 feet deep. Franz C. Warner, in the Hippodrome building is the architect.

The auditorium is entered from the first floor and has a seating capacity of 600. An ample stage has been provided on both sides of which are dressing and retiring rooms. Space has been left for a pipe organ. The library and executive rooms also are located on this floor.

There are thirteen class rooms aside from the chemical and physical laboratories, the manual training and domestic science rooms and lecture rooms.

The gymnasium is located on the ground floor and is provided with a visitors' gallery. Adjacent to the gymnasium are located the lockers and baths for both the girls and boys.

On the third floor are located the laboratories, commercial department, etc.

Backaches Saved

Tomato growers of Madison will use planting machines this spring and in that way save time and much back-breaking work. The machines will plant [illegible] acres per day, setting the small plants, watering and fertilizing them. The Wm. Edwards Co., owners of the cannery have purchased the machines and will rent them to the growers at the nominal price of 50 cents an acre.

With improved machinery for fitting the land, planting, cultivating and harvesting most of the crops, farm life is getting to be a continuous round of pleasure and the hired man of the future will have little to do except climb up on the barb wire fence and sit there till the cows come home.

'Way back some thirty years ago they used the eight hour plan on the farms around Madison—that is, eight hours work in the morning and eight in the afternoon, with a few little chores like slopping the pigs, bringing in the wood and teaching the calf to drink thrown in for good measure, and the hired man who didn't get on the job before 4 A. M. had a mighty hard time holding down a position at $10 a month and "found." Times have certainly changed, and for the better.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Was Generally Observed in Lake County Seventy Years Ago.

In days gone by February 22, the birthday of George Washington, father of his country, was observed in nearly every city and village throughout the country, ranking as a holiday with the Fourth of July, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Mrs. A. W. Leland of Jackson street has loaned to the Herald a yellowed, time-worn copy of a handbill printed in Painesville, February 21, 1842. Type and printing are vastly different from the work turned out by the printers of today. Following is a copy of the seventy-three year old document:

WASHINGTON

The Painesville Band will give their 3d Concert on Tuesday Evening, 22d inst., at the Concert Hall.

Performance to commence at 7 o'clock.

Single tickets 25 cts. Tickets to admit a Gentleman and Two Ladies, 50 cts.—To be had at Geauga Store, Card's and Whitney's Hotels.

Feb. 21, 1842.

Get Ready for Spring Work.

Now is the time to overhaul the farm machinery in preparation for the rush work in the spring. The more preparation you make now, the less you will have to do when the time arrives for the actual work of seeding, plowing, and planting. Overhaul all your machinery and see if repairs are needed. If some parts are broken or lost, get them and put them on now, do not wait until you must use the machine. Go over your plows and see that they are in good shape. Also have your disk harrows sharpened and polished and oiled so that they will be ready for use.

Why Send Money or Food To Aid Starving Belgium?

Why help the Belgians? Why take up the burden that properly rests on those who made the war? Why not let war-mad Europe take care of its own victims? Here is what Irving Cobb, reputable American correspondent, has written out of the fullness of his heart:

"In Belgium I saw homeless men, women and children by thousands and hundreds of thousands. Many of them had been prosperous. A few had wealth and practically all had been comfortable. Now with scarcely an exception they all stood upon one common plane of misery. They had lost their homes, their livings and their means of making livings.

"I saw them tramping aimlessly along wind-swept, rain-washed roads, fleeing from burning and devastated villages. I saw them sleeping in open fields, upon the miry earth, with no cover and no shelter. I saw them herded together in the towns and cities to which many of them ultimately fled—existing God knows how. I saw them ragged, furtive scarecrows, prowling in the shattered ruins of their houses, seeking salvage where there was no salvage to be found. [illegible] another. I saw their abandoned farm lands where the harvest rotted in the furrows and the fruit hung mildewed and ungathered upon the trees. I saw them staggering from weariness and from the weakness of hunger. I saw all these sights repeatedly and multiplied infinitely—yes, and magnified, too—but not once did I see a man or woman, or even a child, that wept or cried out.

"If the Belgian soldiers won the world's admiration by the resistance which they made against tremendously overpowering numbers, the people of Belgium—the families of their soldiers—should have the world's admiration and pity for the courage, the patience and the fortitude they have displayed under the load of an affliction too dolorous for any words to describe, too terrible for any imaginations to picture."

Why help the Belgians?

The Ohio ship is to sail March 1. The special car that will carry Lake county's contribution to its cargo must be ready to start not later than February 25. As the local committee must have a day or two to place orders with the merchants of the country and attend to the loading of the car, this week must see the actual gathering of the funds and other contributions. HORSE AND HORSE

Suit Over Venerable Steed Wins Small Purse

In Common Pleas court last week Judge Reynolds passed on the last lap of the horse suit of H. P. Winters against Jerry Canfield and D. A. Wagar. In 1912, at an auction on his farm, Winters among other articles, put up for sale an ancient black mare which was bid off by Jerry for $80.

As he did not then have the money to spare, Jerry gave his note, Mr. Wagar signing as surety. Jerry paid on the installment plan until he had paid $50, when the animal, in spite of the efforts of two skilled veterinarians, expired; the death certificate and epitaph both giving colic as the last sickness of the deceased. Jerry refused to pay any more for a "dead horse," and Mr. Winters promptly brought suit on the note, against principal and surety. Judgment was taken before Justice Wyman for $30 and interest, and the defendants appealed to the Common Pleas.

On trial last week the defendants gave evidence to show that the animal had "thumps," "pants," "ringbone" and colic, and had been warranted to be sound except blind. The plaintiff denied this except the blindness and that the horse was seventeen years of age. Attorneys M. A. Tuttle for plaintiff and Homer Harper for defendant, fought the case vigorously, displaying in the argument much recently acquired knowledge of horses.

Judge Reynolds, after carefully reviewing the evidence, rendered judgment for plaintiff for $10, making $60 with what had been paid on the note. The attorneys agreed that it was "hoss and hoss."

Make Syrup from Cider

Just at a time when owners of sugar groves in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio are burnishing their buckets and evaporators, and getting ready for the first run of maple sap, there comes the information from Washington that there has been developed a process for making table syrup from cider.

However, this should be good news for farmers who allow thousands of bushels of apples to go to waste under the trees on account of lack of market for the kind of apples that usually are thus neglected. Orchards must be well cared for in order to produce apples which have the requisite color, flavor and keeping qualities to make them a premium in the market.

Making windfall apples into table syrup opens a field which may prove as profitable as a sugar camp. The culls and surplus apples are made into raw cider, which is treated with pure milk of lime to neutralize the malic acids. The subsequent operation resembles maple syrup making, in that the liquid is heated, filtered and evaporated. Another filtering process removes the crystals of calcium malate, and the result is a syrup of a clear ruby or amber color which, when sealed in cans, will keep indefinitely. Only seven gallons of cider are required to make a gallon of apple syrup.

For a number of years sugar has been made successfully from beets. It may yet be proved that saccharine properties of great value lay hidden beneath the folds of the festive cabbage or in the luscious tomato.

Mrs. Mark Connor Dies

Mrs. Mark Connor passed away at her home on North State street at 6 o'clock, Sunday morning, after a three weeks' illness.

She was born in Roscommon County, Ireland, coming to this county at a very early age. Her girlhood days were spent in Hudson, N. Y. She has resided in this city for over fifty years.

She is survived by nine children all of whom make their home in this city with the exception of James E. of Montreal, Canada.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning.

Our Credit is Good.

Bond buyers are not afraid of Painesville securities, notwithstanding the howl that has gone up about the city being nearly bankrupt. While other cities are having trouble to get bids on their bond issues a half dozen bond houses were willing to take the sidewalk and paving bonds offered for sale Monday.

At the council meeting it was voted to accept the bid of Otis & Co. for the Liberty street paving bonds in the sum of $51,500 and the sidewalk bonds amounting to $15,000. The bid was for par and accrued interest. The paving bonds only carry 4½ per cent interest while the sidewalk issue is at 5 per cent. Money is worth anywhere from 6 to 7 per cent at present and the city authorities are fortunate in finding such a good market for their securities.

The funeral services were held from St. Mary's church at 9:30 Eastern time, Thursday morning.

TOO MUCH SUPERVISION

Senator Winans Says This is Main Defect in Present School Laws.

That the public schools of Ohio are over-supervised is the belief of Senator J. V. Winans of Madison, who spent some time in Painesville Saturday. The local senator always took a lively interest in school matters but has other things which require his attention at Columbus just at present.

In a talk with friends Senator Winans expressed himself as opposed to any changes in the present school laws except on the one matter of supervision. He thinks that the schools, which are like a factory, converting raw material into finished product, are in the same position as a factory that has too much "overhead" expense.

Lake county has, including the county superintendent, eight supervisors of schools, Ashtabula county has twenty or more, and so it goes, all over the state. This feature of the law, the Senator believes, must be changed, otherwise it will pull down the whole school structure that has been built up during the past few years.

A prominent Lake county educator expresses the opinion that at least one-half of the supervisors should be cut off in this county. Money is needed all over the state for the betterment of the schools, but he believes there will be little left if every county makes it a point to put as many supervisors as possible on the pay roll.

Another school man advocates the abolishment of the office of county superintendent in the state and a rearrangement of the supervision districts so that these officials will have charge of a sufficient number of schools to make their services of real value to the state and counties. Another idea expressed is that the district supervisors be given more power, so that they can do more than recommend the changes they find necessary, when local boards refuse to take any action.

Bring in Money or Supplies.

The local Belgian Relief committee has opened headquarters in the store room of the American Express Company on North State street and are ready to receive contributions of money, food or new clothing. All donations by cash or check should be made to O. P. Ferron, Painesville.

At the meeting Monday evening several liberal donations of cash were made and the Nickel Plate Milling Co. donated five barrels of flour. All money received will be spent with local merchants.

As the Ohio ship will sail soon, contributions must be in the hands of the committee by the last of the present week.

Busy Burglars

Several Willoughby stores were visited by robbers Monday night and small amounts of money were taken from the cash registers at Carrel's and C. S. Smart's. The Wilson dry goods store and Kirby's grocery were also visited but nothing taken.

PASSING OF A LAND MARK

Old Rider Tavern to be Converted into Apartment House.

The creaking coach rolled slowly out of the forest road and drew up before the wide veranda with its huge square pillars.

From the recesses of the roomy tavern stepped a jovial innkeeper, Joseph Rider, to welcome his guests.

That was way back in 1817 when Lake county was almost a trackless forest.

But for years, since 1865, when the advent of the railroad made tavern keeping unprofitable and Zerah Rider, Joseph's son, just lived there with his family, Painesville folk have pointed with pride to the oldest house in northern Ohio.

Many visitors have inspected the spacious ballroom with the spring floor and listened to the description of the old-time dances.

They were told how Joseph Rider came into the forest and built a stage stop and how the famous tavern has passed down through four generations, always remaining in the Rider family.

It was a point of pride with the family that the tavern stood just as their sturdy ancestor had built it.

But the old tavern is to undergo a change. It is to be remodeled, probably next month, into a three-family apartment house. The old ballroom is to go and practically the entire interior will be changed. Only the architectural style will be retained.

Many interesting stories are told of the tavern of the olden days and of the stage drivers and passengers. Horace Bacon of this place spun one of these yarns for a Herald reporter recently. It seems that in the stage-coach days there was a driver named Frank Bryant, known then and later to every resident of this section. Bryant, so the story goes, was on his way to Cleveland with the coach, having as passengers a middle-aged lady and her charming daughter. At the Rider tavern a stop was made while Bryant went inside to exchange greetings with the landlord and get a little something to take the wire edge off his whistle. The horses became frightened and started to run, taking with them the coach and passengers.

Some time later when Bryant appeared at the doorway, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand, he was much surprised to find that his rig was gone. Running to the barn he threw a saddle on a horse he found there and started at a fast clip towards the west. It was a long chase and a hot one, the coach horses running at top speed. Several times Bryant sighted the coach and horses but it was not until Willoughby was reached that he caught up with them.

At the doorway of the Willoughby tavern the coach horses stopped as neatly as though the driver had been in the box and Bryant was just in time to jump off his horse and open the coach door for his passengers. When the lady alighted Bryant expected she would be either frightened or mad but instead she smiled and shook his hand, remarking, "You are the first real driver we've had since we left Buffalo."

The women had ridden a dozen miles or more behind a runaway team and never knew that anything was wrong.

Odd Bits of News

Vernon, Pa.—Spontaneous combustion in a piece of dried cheese set fire to a house here recently. The cheese had become dry on a shelf and the fire was discovered in time to save the house.

Petrograd, Russia—During the half year since vodka has been prohibited in Russia more than 1800 secret distilleries have been discovered. Many of them have been refining shellac and converting methylated spirits into alcoholic beverages.

Winsted, Conn.—Miss Elizabeth M. Kilbourn, the first woman in the world to take a stitch on a sewing machine, died here recently at the age of 86.

Oxford, N. Y.—The only woman Civil War veteran, Mrs. Robert S. Browoell, died here a few days ago. She enlisted with her husband in the First Rhode Island Battery of volunteers and saw active service for nearly three years.

Chicago, Ill.—When "Ben" Rosenstein died here recently it was discovered that "he" was a woman and had been married for several years. "His" wife was at the bedside when "he" died. The two young women had "married" so that the "husband" could do a man's work and make more money.

Chicago, Ill.—The department that caused the most comment at the Fashion Show that opened here this week was the one devoted to smoking apparel for women. Although the Blackstone, Chicago's most exclusive hotel, has permitted women to smoke in the public dining halls for several months, but two or three women have made use of the privilege.

Post, Texas—This town has the most complete cotton factory in the world. The cotton is taken from the farmers' wagons, ginned, spun, woven into cloth and made into sheets and pillow cases in the one factory.

Wants Cheaper Lights.

W. L. Baker, in a communication to the council, complains that the electric light plant is greatly overloaded, causing the customers to receive less candle power than they should. He also claims that the light patrons are paying for all city lighting, including street lights, engine house lights, all night lights in alleys and even for the Great White Way. These lights, Mr. Baker claims, should be paid for by the city and present users should be given a much lower rate. Council took no action.

Short Council Meeting.

Council meeting Monday evening was rushed in order that the members might attend the performance at the Utopia. James Garrett was on hand with a little talk about rest rooms but he was told to come again and the report of the electric light plant also went over.

Ordinances were passed to improve Charlotte avenue, appropriate property for sewer purposes on Rabbit Row, and to assess costs of sidewalk repairs.

Birds As Neighbors

Most people enjoy having birds, especially song birds, as neighbors. Few people, however, have a very definite idea of how much value birds really are to the farmers of the United States. It has been stated recently that the annual loss to the farm crops of the United States due to insects is more than $400,000,000 and also that a large part of this loss could be prevented by birds if they were protected from slaughter. This game would seem worth while.

The Farmers Will Get Free Seeds This Spring

A Washington dispatch announces that congressmen will distribute free seed as usual this spring.

This will be glorious news to the horny-handed agriculturist who finds planting government seeds a much better form of amusement than guessing riddles, putting together sectional maps or trying to solve the old pigs in clover puzzle. These little surprise packages of seed with which congressmen pay political debts to their rural friends will cost the government $200,000 this year, but they are well worth it, considering the joy they bring to the farmer.

One spring when we forgot to hide the spade, our wife coaxed us into making a garden, using moral suasion and a section of broomstick as arguments. While we were turning up a choice assortment of fish worms and accumulating sunburn and blisters the other half of the sketch team wrote to Uncle Jake Beidler down at Washington for samples of his best garden seeds.

The signals must have got crossed somewhere. Either Jake had forgotten a whole lot about farming or else he left the filling of the order to some office boy who didn't know a shorthorn cucumber from an early blooming summer squash. We did not know this at the time and as soon as the seeds arrived we planted them [illegible]

In laying out our garden we had planned to have the lettuce, onions and radishes close to the kitchen where they would be handy for home consumption and not subject to the raids of the old she-battleship next door. For some reason the onions were backward about coming upward and the few that did appear looked puny but were really strong for their age. The lettuce and radish seed must have worked overtime in the trenches for the plants appeared some twenty feet away and in the bed we had so carefully prepared for their arrival were some strange plants which our neighbor claimed belonged to the Ruta Bagga family. As we were not on speaking terms with this family we pulled up the plants and threw them in the alley where the Bagga people could find them and turned our attention to our other prizes.

What we supposed were pole beans from Lima, Ohio, turned out to be of a very retiring disposition and the beautiful trellis work we built was useful only as an ornament. The corn crop was fine, except that the Washington man forgot to put any sweetening in the seed. Our watermelons turned out to be pumpkins but this did not matter as the bugs ate up all the plants.

WELL-KNOWN HYMN WRITER IS NO MORE

Miss Fanny Crosby Passes Away in Her Ninety-fifth Year.

THOUSANDS SING BLIND WOMAN'S SONGS

Eight Thousand Hymns of Christian Warmth Produced in Protestant Churches Throughout World — Work of Noted Author.

Bridgeport, Ct.—Miss Fanny Crosby, well-known hymn writer died at her home here Sunday night.

Her death was not unexpected, as she had been ill for some time. Miss Crosby celebrated her 95th birthday and she was conscious and remained in her mind until the end. At her bedside were her sister, Mrs. Henry G. Hardy and other members of her family with whom she had had made her home for years. Her last words were trying to sing in a short time before her death.

Wrote Eight Thousand Hymns.

Eight thousand hymns of Christian warmth sung in Protestant churches throughout the world are the work of Fanny Crosby. No one knows the date of Charles Wesley or Isaac Watts lies in the cemetery at Bridgeport, Ct., and the author of the hymns of Christian faith and hope is dead.

Fanny Crosby's name was signed so regularly as author of one hymn after another that the term, hymn became as a quality of a century ago even more than a name. Her contemporaries seem to have it appear that someone besides the Isaiahs, writer had contributed the thousands upon hundreds of thousands—who sang yesterday while were immortalized in every language. Her last words that it was a short time before she was called to sing in the Heavenly Jerusalem the tunes she had written.

Blind Since Infancy.

Blind since infancy, Miss Crosby was a prolific writer. Her work was not the work of a genius, but it was the work of a writer of a century ago even more than a name. Her contemporaries seem to have it appear that someone besides the Isaiahs, writer had contributed the thousands upon hundreds of thousands—who sang yesterday while were immortalized in every language. STARVING A PEOPLE

There is a great deal of comment about America supplying the countries of Europe with munitions of war and other such things as they are consuming, some saying if America will stop feeding them they will have to stop fighting; but we cannot be so sure. We have a faint knowledge of men fighting four years on limited rations most all the time.—Omaha Breeze.

Replying to this editorial the Dallas, Texas, News says: "Your faint knowledge of a four-year's war in which one side was reduced to rags and hunger long before its martial spirit was weakened, goes back to that unhappy time, more than half a century ago, when this nation was rent in twain by cannon fire. To most of us that knowledge comes only second-handed, therefore it is far less vivid in its impress upon us than upon the few who yet remain as living witnesses of those intense days.

The doom of the confederacy was sealed when the seas were closed to it. Notwithstanding the South was a fertile and almost fallow empire in proportions, notwithstanding it had the benefit of slave labor, notwithstanding its population was small in comparison with its potential productivity, the South could not sustain itself and carry on war after it was deprived of the use of its seaports. In the beginning the South was victor, largely because it had more of dash and initiative, more of military aptitude, more of the romantic war spirit than the North. But it could not long survive its separation from the great world round about it.

To many minds Germany today seems like the South of '61. The initial successes were Germany's, the enthusiasm, the unity, the promptitude are still here. But against her is gathering, as gathered in '62 against the South, the terrific weight of numbers, an incomparable superiority of resources in men, money and food stores. Above all, against Germany are drawn the curtains of the deep. She cannot share with her enemies, except furtively, the privileges of the ocean, and isolation is her portion. What avails serried hosts of trained soldiers against the invisible processes of suffocation? What avails Von Kluck and Von Buelow and Von Hindenburg that did not avail Lee and Jackson and Johnson? What avails the persistence of the kaiser that did not avail the persistence of Jefferson Davis?

Destiny writes all the histories. Fate presides over every board of strategy. Against them valor may shiver its lance into splinters and statesmanship batter its brains out, prevailing not. And when destiny rides upon the waves and fate blockades a nation's coasts, the agonies of chancelleries are but as the cries of a child in the night. Since sails were invented the great waters ever have been the arbiters of great wars.

CARE OF HUMAN BEINGS

Society is far from perfect, but it can be reasonably defended against the sweeping charge brought against it by Miss Sophia Loeb at a hearing in Albany the other day. She said that she had been drawn into that movement by learning that the State had provided care for a sick cow and its calf, but not for an ill mother and her dependent children, who owned the cow. Let us hope that her work in caring for sick mothers and children is not governed by the same logic that got her into it.

If it is, we might hear complaints that while the State vigorously executes infected cattle, it has shamefully neglected to put to death any infected children or mothers. It is really going rather far to assert: "We are trying to conserve the fish, [illegible] system, [illegible] increasing its watchfulness over the health and welfare of the child. That this can be reasonably and [illegible] efficially [illegible] nothing is done for children under our system is to take refuge in recklessness of truth to emphasize an assertion hardly founded on fact. In China, where inconvenient and unprofitable female babies are thrown into the rivers, there might be some basis for it.

The Liver Regulates the Body—A Sluggish Liver Needs Care.

Immense Damage by Rats.

No animal is more destructive to property or more dangerous to human health than the rat. The damage it does to property runs up into figures which stagger the imagination. It is estimated that there are in the United States at least 300,000,000 rats. They destroy a hundred million dollars' worth of grain in this country every year, or enough to feed one hen for every man, woman and child in the nation. The total annual cost of rats to the nation is estimated at $360,000,000.

ORDINANCE NO. 1011

An ordinance determining to proceed with the improvement of Charlotte Avenue from Liberty Street in an easterly direction to the end of said Charlotte Avenue and at a point on the line between tracts 2 and 3, township 10, by constructing in said street a sanitary sewer of vitrified pipe.

Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, three-fourths of the whole number elected thereto being present and concurring.

Section 1. That it is hereby determined to proceed with the improvement of Charlotte Avenue from Liberty Street in an easterly direction to the end of said Charlotte Avenue and at a point on the line between tracts 2 and 3, township 10, by constructing to said Avenue a sanitary sewer of vitrified pipe in accordance with Resolution No. 431, passed December 7th, 1914, and in accordance with the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles of the proposed improvement heretofore approved and now on file in the office of the Director of Public Service.

Section 2. That the grade of said street as improved shall be the existing grade.

Section 3. That all claims for damages resulting therefrom shall be judiciously inquired into after the completion of the proposed improvement.

Section 4. That the entire cost of said improvement, less one-fiftieth thereof and the cost of intersections shall be assessed in proportion to the benefits which may result from the improvement upon the following described lots and land, to-wit: All lots and lands bounding and abutting upon said proposed improvement, which said lots and lands are hereby determined to be especially benefited by said improvement, and the cost of said improvement shall include the expense of preliminary and other surveys, of printing and of publishing the notices, resolutions and ordinances required, the serving of said notices, the cost of construction, together with the interest on bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of deferred assessments, and all other necessary expenditures.

Section 5. That the assessments so to be levied shall be paid in five (5) annual installments, with interest on deferred payments at five (5) per cent per annum, provided that the owner of any property [illegible]

[illegible] George Philpott, Elizabeth [illegible] Dail Philpott and Judson Philpott, all residing at Detroit, Michigan, will take notice that on the 27th day of Jan., 1915 Albert L. Thence North 88 degrees 30 minutes West 1251 feet to the place of beginning—a piece of land 24 feet square in the southwest corner of the above described parcel of land is not conveyed by this deed, containing without said 24 feet square of Land 20 95-100 Twenty and ninety-five one Hundredths acres of land.

Parcel 2. Also another piece of land in tract No 2 beginning at the center of the road at the S. W. corner of land deeded to Florence Clark and her heirs, thence to the center of the road to the N. W. corner of land owned by Elmer Clark, thence on Clark's N. line to tract No. 1, thence N. on tract line No. 1 to Clark's S. line, thence W. on Clark's S. line to the place of beginning, containing 2 38-100 acres of land.

Said petition alleges that on the 9th day of October, 1905, said Joseph Philpott executed and delivered to said plaintiffs his Warranty Deed, whereby he intended and attempted to convey the title to the above described real estate, to said plaintiffs, and that said plaintiffs paid the full purchase price of the same, to-wit, the sum of $1200.00; that by the mistake of the person who drew the deed, the granting clause in said deed was written "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, my heirs and assigns forever." Said petition asks that said deed may be reformed so that the granting clause will read "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, their heirs and assigns forever." Said defendants are required to answer on or before the 20th day of March, 1915, or judgment may be taken against them.

Mrs. Erie Huntington is quite sick with grip.

Miss Olive Evilla is at home very ill with some disease of the nerves.

Miss Rutledge, county nurse, will speak at the Hall Feb. 27th, at 2 o'clock. Everyone invited.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv

He Was Neutral.

An Irishman went into a well known Boston restaurant a short time ago to get his lunch. Among other things he ordered some cold meat, and the waiter—when he served the meal—inquired:

"Will you have the French or German mustard, sir?"

"Neither," was the Irishman's prompt reply. "I'm neutral. Bring me horseradish!"

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS WHEN BLADDER BOTHERS

Harmless to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids—Splendid for the System

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.—Adv.

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray, also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. CHAPTER I.

Granser and the Boys.

The way led along what had once been the embankment of a railroad. But no train had run upon it for many years. The forest on either side swelled up the slopes of the embankment and crested across it in a green wave of trees and bushes. The trail was as narrow as a man's body, and was no more than a wild-animal runway. Occasionally, a piece of rusty iron, showing through the forest mold, advertised that the rail and the ties still remained. In one place a ten-inch tree, bursting through at a connection, had lifted the end of a rail clearly into view. The tie had evidently followed the rail, held to it by the spike long enough for its bed to be filled with gravel and rotten leaves, so that now the crumbling, rotten timber thrust itself up at a curious slant. Old as the road was, it was manifest that it had been of the monorail type.

An old man and a boy traveled along this runway. They moved slowly, for the old man was very old, a touch of palsy made his movements tremulous, and he leaned heavily upon his staff. A rude skullcap of goatskin protected his head from the sun. From beneath this fell a scant fringe of stained and dirty-white hair. A visor, ingeniously made from a large leaf, shielded his eyes, and from under this he peered at the way of his feet on the trail. His beard, which should be snow-white, but which showed the same weather-wear and camp-stain as his hair, fell nearly to his waist in a great tangled mass. His arms and legs, withered and skinny, betokened extreme age, as well as did their sunburn and scars and scratches betoken long years of exposure to the elements.

The boy, who led the way, checking the eagerness of his muscles to the slow progress of the elder, likewise wore a single garment—a ragged-edged piece of bearskin, with a hole in the middle through which he had thrust his head. He could not have been more than twelve years old. Tucked coquettishly over one ear was the freshly severed tail of a pig. In one hand he carried a medium-sized bow and arrow. On his back was a quiverful of arrows. From a sheath hanging about his neck on a thong projected the battered handle of a hunting knife. He was as brown as a berry, and walked softly, with almost a catlike tread. In marked contrast with his sunburned skin were his eyes—blue, deep blue, but keen and sharp as a pair of gimlets. They seemed to bore into all about him in a way that was habitual. As he went along he smelled things, as well, his distended, quivering nostrils carrying to his brain an endless series of messages from the outside world. Also, his hearing was acute, and had been so trained that it operated automatically.

Suddenly he became alertly tense. Sound, sight, and odor had given him a simultaneous warning. His hand went back to the old man, touching him, and the pair stood still. Ahead, at one side of the top of the embankment, arose a crackling sound, and the boy's gaze was fixed on the tops of the agitated bushes. Then a large bear, a grizzly, crashed into view, and likewise stopped abruptly, at sight of the humans. He did not like them, and growled querulously. Slowly the boy fitted the arrow to the bow, and slowly he pulled the bowstring taut. But he never removed his eyes from the bear. The old man peered from under his green leaf at the danger, and stood as quietly as the boy. For a few seconds this mutual scrutinizing went on; then, the bear betraying a growing irritability, the boy, with a movement of his head, indicated that the old man must step aside from the trail and go down the embankment. The boy followed, going backward, still holding the bow taut and ready. They waited, till a crashing among the bushes from the opposite side of the embankment told them that the bear had gone on. The boy grinned as he led back to the trail.

"A big un, Granser," he chuckled.

The old man shook his head.

"They get thicker every day," he complained in a thin, undependable falsetto. "Who'd have thought I'd live to see the time when a man would be afraid of his life on the way to the Cliff house? When I was a boy, Edwin, men and women and little babies used to come out here from San Francisco by tens of thousands on a nice day. And there weren't any bears then. No, sir. They used to pay money to look at them in cages, they were that rare."

"What is money, Granser?"

Before the old man could answer, the boy recollected and triumphantly shoved his hand into a pouch under his bearskin and pulled forth a battered and tarnished silver dollar. The old man's eyes glistened, as he held the coin close to them.

"I can't see," he muttered. "You look and see if you can make out the date, Edwin."

The boy laughed.

"You're a great Granser," he cried delightedly, "always making believe them little marks mean something."

The old man manifested an accustomed chagrin as he brought the coin back again close to his own eyes.

"2012," he shrilled, and then fell to cackling grotesquely. "That was the year Morgan the Fifth was appointed president of the United States by the board of magnates. It must have been one of the last coins minted, for the Scarlet Death came in 2013. Lord! Lord!—think of it! Sixty years ago, and I am the only person alive today that lived in those times. Where did you find it, Edwin?"

The boy, who had been regarding him with the tolerant curiousness one accords to the prattlings of the feeble-minded, answered promptly:

"I got it off Hoo-Hoo. He found it when we was herdin' goats down near San Jose last spring. Hoo-Hoo said it was money. Ain't you hungry, Granser?"

The ancient caught his staff in a tighter grip and urged along the trail, his old eyes shining greedily.

"I hope Hare-Lip's found a crab . . . or two," he mumbled. "They're good eating, crabs, mighty good eating when you've no more teeth and you've got grandsons that love their old grandsire and make a point of catching crabs for him. When I was a boy—"

But Edwin, suddenly stopped by what he saw, was drawing the bowstring on a fitted arrow. He had paused on the brink of a crevasse in the embankment. An ancient culvert had here washed out, and the stream, no longer confined, had cut a passage through the fill. On the opposite side, the end of a rail projected and overhung. It showed rustily through the creeping vines which overran it. Beyond, crouching by a bush, a rabbit looked across at him in trembling hesitancy. Fully fifty feet was the distance, but the arrow flashed true; and the transfixed rabbit, crying out in sudden fright and hurt, struggled painfully away into the brush. The boy himself was a flash of brown skin and flying fur as he bounded down the steep wall of the gap and up the other side. His lean muscles were springs of steel that released into graceful and efficient action. A hundred feet beyond, in a tangle of bushes, he overtook the wounded creature, knocked its head on a convenient tree trunk and turned it over to Granser to carry.

"Rabbit is good, very good," the ancient quavered, "but when it comes to a toothsome delicacy I prefer crab. When I was a boy—"

"Why do you say so much that ain't got no sense?" Edwin impatiently interrupted the other's threatened garrulousness.

"What I want to know," Edwin continued, "is why you call crab 'toothsome delicacy.' Crab is crab, ain't it? No one I never heard calls it such funny things."

The old man sighed but did not answer, and they moved on in silence. The surf grew suddenly louder as they emerged from the forest upon a stretch of sand dunes bordering the sea. A few goats were browsing among the sandy hillocks, and a skin-clad boy, aided by a wolfish-looking dog that was only faintly reminiscent of a collie, was watching them. The old man accelerated his pace, sniffing eagerly as he neared the fire.

"Mussels!" he muttered ecstatically. "Mussels! And ain't that a crab, Hoo-Hoo? Ain't that a crab? My, my, you boys are good to your old grandsire."

Hoo-Hoo, who was apparently of the same age as Edwin, grinned.

"All you want, Granser. I got four."

The old man's palsied eagerness was pitiful. Sitting down in the sand as quickly as his stiff limbs would let him, he poked a large mussel from the coals. The heat had forced its shells apart, and the meat, salmon-colored, was thoroughly cooked. Between thumb and forefinger, in trembling haste, he caught the morsel and carried it to his mouth. But it was too hot, and the next moment was violently ejected. The old man spluttered with the pain, and tears ran out of his eyes and down his cheeks.

The boys were true savages, possessing only the cruel humor of the savage. To them the incident was excruciatingly funny, and they burst into loud laughter. Hoo-Hoo danced up and down, while Edwin rolled gleefully on the ground. The boy with the goats came running to join in the fun.

"Set 'em to cool, Edwin, set 'em to cool," the old man besought, in the midst of his grief, making no attempt to wipe away the tears that still flowed from his eyes. "And cool a crab, Edwin, too. You know your grandsire likes crabs."

From the coals a great sizzling, which proceeded from the many mussels bursting open their shells and exuding their moisture. They were large shellfish, running from three to six inches in length. The boys raked them out with sticks and placed them on a large piece of driftwood to cool.

"When I was a boy we did not laugh at our elders; we respected them."

The boys took no notice, and Granser continued to babble an incoherent flow of complaint and censure. But this time he was more careful, and did not burn his mouth. All began to eat, using nothing but their hands and making loud mouth noises and lip smackings. The third boy, who was called Hare-Lip, slyly deposited a pinch of sand on a mussel the ancient was carrying to his mouth; and when the grit of it bit into the old fellow's mucous membrane and gums, the laughter was again uproarious. He was unaware that a joke had been played on him and spluttered and spat until Edwin, relenting, gave him a gourd of fresh water with which to wash out his mouth.

"Where's them crabs, Hoo-Hoo?" Edwin demanded. "Granser's set upon having a snack."

Again Granser's eyes burned with greediness as a large crab was handed to him. It was a shell with legs and all complete, but the meat had long since departed. With shaky fingers and babblings of anticipation, the old man broke off a leg and found it filled with emptiness.

"The crabs, Hoo-Hoo?" he wailed. "The crabs?"

"I was fooling, Granser. They ain't no crabs. I never found one."

HARD MATTER TO ARRANGE

Question of Disarmament, Following War, Will Test the Mettle of Diplomats.

Whenever talk of the re-establishment of peace after the present war comes up, disarmament, or the reduction of armaments is sure to be an important issue. Just how the nations shall effect a program of disarmament is a vexed question. The Encyclopedia Britannica cites as "the only existing case of contractual reduction of armaments," the disarmament agreement of the 28th of May, 1902, between Chilean and Argentine republics. By this agreement the two governments arranged to reduce their fleets according to an arrangement establishing a reasonable proportion between the two fleets, and respectively promised not to increase their maritime armaments during five years, unless the one who shall wish to increase them shall give the other 18 months' notice in advance.

The Britannica authority points out [illegible] slight differences in the ages of ships may make great difference in their fighting value.

Disappearing in Smoke.

A war correspondent of the Rotterdam Courant reports observing a new method of concealing airships in the vicinity of Roulers.

He says he was watching German aviators who were being shelled by French artillery, when suddenly, the aeroplane disappeared in the midst of a huge brown-colored cloud, which was too large to be the result of an explosive.

He continued to watch the aeroplanes and noticed that they produced a similar cloud of smoke the moment they were subjected to bombardment, and in a few moments, thanks to this cloud, they became perfectly invisible and made it impossible for the gunners to aim at the machine.

SET OUT CATALPA TREES IN WASTE PLACES

In These Days of Timber Scarcity It Is Important to Have Plenty of Post Timber.

(By C. S. MILLER.)

Why not set out lotus and catalpa trees in waste places, such as small corners of fields, small fields that are cut off by creeks or ravines, rough lands, brier and brush lots, and other places that cannot be worked to advantage, and grow post timber?

The trees can be set out when other farm work is not pressing, and in a few years will furnish all of the post timber needed on the farm.

The work of getting the trees started costs no more than keeping down weeds. If set in rows eight or ten feet apart, and cultivated for about three years, the trees require no further attention.

Many out-of-the-way places that are producing scarcely anything of value, besides being an eyesore to the farm, can be set to valuable trees at very little expense.

In this way ragged corners and ravines can be transformed into fine groves that will pay larger profits than some of the other portions of the farm.

Then the matter of having plenty of post timber right at hand is one of importance in these days of timber scarcity.

CHICKEN RAISING MADE PROFITABLE

Much Patience and Steady Work Required—Takes Years to Learn the Business.

What is the sense of a woman going into poultry unless she has a liking for that sort of thing. Chicken-raising as a fad is the most ridiculous business I ever saw, and I have seen some queer things down on a farm. In the first place, it takes a person a couple of seasons to learn the chicken game and there is so much patience and steady work required that people will not stick to it unless they have a real passion for the business.

It's a queer fact that the majority of people, even farmers, lose money on poultry, or at least fail to make anything substantial, whereas a man or woman who likes to handle chickens and sticks to it in a sensible way can clean up a lot of money. There is a very great deal in doctoring poultry, keeping it free from vermin and feeding it wisely. The faddist can't do those things and so quits in disgust after a year or two of failure or poor success.—An Old Farmer.

Good Combination.

For a few acres, fruit and poultry make a profitable combination.

WATER SUPPLY OF AN ORDINARY FARM

Consumption Will Vary From Day to Day and With Seasons—Approximate Figures.

The following gives approximate quantities of water required per day on the farm:

Each member of the family for all purposes will require 25 to 40 gals.; each cow will require 12 gals.; each horse will require 10 gals.; each hog will require 2½ gals.; each sheep will require 2 gals. The water consumption will vary from day to day and with the seasons. For a family of six persons a 200-gallon supply should be sufficient if the water is used in the house only. On a farm where water is supplied to a family of six persons, ten horses, 12 cows, 25 hogs, and 15 sheep, the daily storage supply should be at least 500 gallons, with whatever additional amount, if any, the farmer deems necessary for fire protection.

Prevent Ducks Crowding.

Unless a lantern or some other light is kept burning at night in sheds where large numbers of ducks are confined they are apt to become frightened and pile up on each other in such numbers as to smother the ones on the under side.

MUCH WILL BE GAINED BY THINNING FRUIT

The Result of Thinning Peaches—At the Left, 140 to 180 Peaches Per Bushel of Thinned Fruit—At Right, 260 to 272 Peaches of Unthinned Fruit.

(By E. WALKER.)

While the advantages of thinning fruit are recognized by all, neglect of thinning fruit is more usual than the opposite. Some effective thinning is done at the time of pruning the tree each spring, but this is not sufficient. The best practice requires that the peaches on a limb shall not be closer than four to six inches. This will mean knocking off from half to three-fourths of the peaches. Some who practice thinning peaches reduce the number of peaches still more.

The best time for thinning is when the peaches are about the size of a small prune, and after what is known as the "June drop."

The hired man, working on a stepladder, makes the cost of the thinning of a medium tree about five cents. The effect on the size of the remaining fruit is astonishing, increasing the salable value of the remaining fruit sufficient to pay 1,000 per cent on the cost of the work of thinning, and adding to the strength of the tree in reducing the number of pits borne.

The flesh of the peach is largely water. The greater draft on the strength of the tree is the production of the pits. In thinning peaches we reduce the number of pits 75 to 80 per cent and almost or fully double the size of the peaches. It is better to knock off some of the peaches of a loaded tree rather than allow the tree to overbear, even if the thinning must be done in a somewhat rough manner.

On every side we see evidences of the great advantages to be derived from thinning fruit. In one case, the results of moderate thinning resulted as follows: Peaches from thinned Elberta trees ran 140 to 180 peaches to the bushel, while in the same orchard, fruit from unthinned trees numbered from 260 to 272 peaches to the bushel.

Peaches are gathered as soon as ripening begins and before they have become soft. An experienced picker knows at a glance when the fruit is in proper condition. The fruit should never be pressed with the thumb to determine its ripeness. When gathered the fruit is taken at once to the packing shed, where it is graded and packed. The most rigid standards should characterize the assorting and packing of grades. One misshapen, soft or undersized specimen may spoil the whole package. Any deception, either intentional or otherwise, in the selling of the crop is sure at last to bring loss.

Winter Hog Pasture.

When it comes to winter and spring hog pasture, nothing equals dwarf Essex rape. Ground where it is sown, however, must be in good condition. Then the yield is enormous. Drills two feet apart, sown at the rate of three pounds per acre, give the best results.

Use Thermometer.

Before churning use a dairy thermometer and have the cream at from 60 to 70 degrees. Butter should require from 25 to 35 minutes to come. Regulate temperature so that this will be true, but do not add hot or cold water to the cream.

LABOR WILL FIGHT PLAGUE

Plans Made for Co-Operation With National Association for Prevention of Tuberculosis.

A campaign for closer co-operation with labor unions and other groups of working men has recently been launched by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

A committee has been appointed with Dr. Theodore B. Sachs, president of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, as chairman, to formulate plans for immediate and future action. Other members of the committee are Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, Washington; George W. Perkins, secretary of the International Cigar Makers' union, Chicago; John Mitchell of the New York State Compensation commission, New York; Austin B. Garretson, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Dr. William Charles White, medical director of the Tuberculosis league of Pittsburgh, and Dr. David R. Lyman, superintendent of the Gaylord Farms sanatorium, Wallingford, Conn.

As the first step in the campaign a special health bulletin has been prepared for the labor papers and will be sent out monthly in co-operation with members of the International Labor Press association.

And Will Never Forget the Experience.

The coffee drinker who has suffered and then been completely relieved by changing from coffee to Postum knows something valuable. There's no doubt about it.

"I learned the truth about coffee in a peculiar way," says a California woman. "My husband who has, for years, been of a bilious temperament decided to leave off coffee and give Postum a trial, and as I did not want the trouble of making two beverages for meals I concluded to try Postum, too. The results have been that while my husband has been greatly benefited, I have myself received even greater benefit.

"When I began to drink Postum I was thin in flesh and very nervous. Now I actually weigh 16 pounds more than I did at that time and I am stronger physically and in my nerves, while husband is free from all his ills.

"We have learned our little lesson about coffee and we know something about Postum, too, for we have used Postum now steadily for the last three years and we shall continue to do so.

"We have no more use for coffee—the drug drink. We prefer Postum and health."

BATTLES OF LIFE

Struggles for the Right That Demand Highest Character and Courage.

Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, speaking of the social revolution which he believed was impending, said: "If the doctrines of Christianity could be applied to human society, I believe that the social problem could be got at."

There is no doubt that he was right. The early disciples were accused of preaching a doctrine which was "turning the world upside down." Wherever Christianity has been fearlessly and consistently applied, it has resulted in a revolution.

Preachers and laymen have sometimes made the mistake of supposing that the direct and immediate outcome of Christianity must always be peace. But Jesus also said, "I came not to bring peace, but a sword." There's a lot of fighting to be done—in the name of Christianity. Sometimes peace is more quickly secured through a straight-out fight than through a quiet and unresisting acceptance of evil. And there is evil in the world, some very eminent and cultured people to the contrary notwithstanding.

If Christianity is the red-blooded thing that we say it is, then those who profess to accept its philosophy and doctrine will stand up to meet the situation by which it is confronted.

War is always to be deplored, but sometimes war is necessary. It is inconceivable that a real man will stand idly by and see his children slaughtered, even though he is certain that he will be defeated in the struggle. Wars are bound to come, but there's a "woe" for those "through whom these offenses come."

World's Real Battles.

But we are not discussing, just now, wars between nations. There are other occasions that require red bloodedness and courage, and they are worthier of human sacrifice than are most of the wars between the races of men.

The advocates of war defend their position by saying that if all strife between nations were to cease it would result in a weak, cowardly people. They insist that the hardships of war and the fighting develop strong men of courage and character. But such slaughter of our fellowmen also develops the coarsest and most brutal instincts.

There are other battles to be fought which develop finer character and more courage than can possibly be the result of the wanton slaughter of men, women and children. These battles have to do with the giving of life, rather than death.

The fighting of these battles demands a cleancut manhood and womanhood, a bravery which is rarely found on the battlefield of slaughter. The soldier who goes to war is cheered by excited crowds, and when he returns he receives an ovation that stirs the blood. And this is well. I would not detract for a single moment from the honor accorded the man who is ready to give his life for his country, whether his country is right or wrong. But here is a man who is fighting for the lives of little children in industrial life, for sanitary conditions in factory and tenement, for clean government in our municipalities. What is his reward? Usually sneers and sarcasm, often defamation of character, always bitterness and persecution.

Where True Courage Is Required.

It requires more real grit to stand up under such a fire, year after year, than it does to face the bullets of the opposing army. There isn't much cheering on such a job. Often it means social ostracism. Soon you will become known as a "crank." Those who formerly were your friends will turn to you a cold shoulder. There will be a temptation on your part to become bitter in turn. Here is the social worker's peril. He may unintentionally turn away many who might otherwise be retained as friends.

It is in such a battle that one needs all the grace that comes through the possession of the spirit of Jesus. When he was reviled, he reviled not again. He fought his enemies in a straightforward fashion, but never with bitterness. He sometimes used force, as when he drove the money-changers from the temple, these men who were making of the temple "a den of thieves;" but Jesus, even when highly indignant, was never bitter.

He won through courage. He attracted through personality. His slogan was life more abundant. He so thoroughly believed in his great task that he was ready to surrender his life to accomplish it. All this was not easy.

And every worker for the people has his garden of Gethsemane—the hours that he spends alone, fighting for his very life. These are the times that try the soul more severely than the final crucifixion.

Follow Only God's Path.

The old shepherd who offered prayer in a Welsh revival meeting put it exactly right when he lamented his backsliding in these words: "Lord, I got among the thorns and briers, and was scratched and torn and bleeding; but, Lord, it is only fair to say that it was not on thy ground; I had wandered out of thy pasture." And there are many others whose scars were obtained in the devil's thickets outside the field where duty called them.

Oh, beware of your own way! Follow the Lord fully. Take no path that conscience tells you is doubtful. If God's smile is not on it, abandon it forever. Christians bring sorrow of heart upon themselves, darkness of soul and loss of peace, not so much by taking wrong paths as by taking doubtful ones.—Frederick Whitfield.

It is a fine thing that God makes work his gift and not money, and not fame, nor this thing nor that thing, but just living work, and that every day he gives to each of us a work for that day and offers to us the joy of conceiving it as a personal partnership with himself.—R. E. Speer.

Hat for a Formal Occasion

THERE is never a time when a hat, moderately broad of brim and with a crown which is so conservative as to escape attention, is out of style. A shape of this kind with a covering of velvet and a facing of crepe or satin, trimmed with plumes is about the most reliable of all millinery. It has no eccentricities that catch the attention, but its grace and elegance and general becomingness make it always pleasing.

The hat shown in the illustration is a superb piece of millinery made of velvet over a frame whose brim droops, in the gentlest of curving lines, just a little at the back and front. The facing, of crepe georgette, is a creamy white. Besides the beauty of rich material, that of exquisite workmanship adds its charm to the fine color-contrast of black and white and the pleasing lines of the shape. Very handsome ostrich feathers are used for the trimming. Such a composition results in a hat dignified and beautiful, which will harmonize with any color in the costume. Its wearer may face any formal occasion undismayed and very secure in the knowledge that her millinery is quite equal to the strictest requirements of the current mode.

Another hat which is in the same class with that pictured has a brim of equal width all around, a crown of medium size with soft top and a facing of the softest shade of coral pink. It depends for decoration upon an ostrich pompon from which springs a spray of long graceful bird of paradise feathers, all in shades and tints of the color in the facing. The brim droops a little on all sides and the pink of the lining is partially veiled by a border of black lace which manages to stray over the edge of the brim, where it seems to be in easy and irregular festoons.

To some complexions this facing of pink is much more becoming than a facing of white. One should experiment with color before using it. But if a doubt disturbs the mind, in selecting a dress hat, as to the best of shapes, it may be set at rest by choosing either of those described here, or others similar to them. They belong to the ancient and honorable order of "picture hats," and great artists have delighted to paint them even before Gainsborough's time.

Blouses of Chiffon for Dressy Wear

STANDING at the pinnacle of popularity, the pretty blouse of flowered chiffon hardly has a rival among blouses designed for dressy wear. It is not as fragile as it looks, but it is fragile enough, at that. The waists are usually made of chiffon having a light-colored ground over which rather large flowers are scattered in many beautiful colorings and shadings.

Besides these flowered patterns there are others, showing Persian designs in wonderful colors, and also some novelties rather difficult to describe. In any case, the chiffon is draped over a foundation of plain chiffon, very thin silk, plain or figured net, or thin lace.

By way of decoration the waists are more or less elaborated with garnishings of lace, small brilliant buttons, and especially with tiny flat bows made of satin folds or narrow velvet ribbon.

Destined for a less brief reign in favor are the plain blouses of crepe de chine made with sloping shoulders and long sleeves set into a regulation armhole. Narrow cuffs in bands of fine filet lace, or dainty collars and cuffs of organdie finish these elegant blouses. They are shown in light pink, maize, blue and sand color. Often a little vestee is worn with collar of plaited lace standing at the back, finished with a narrow band of black velvet ribbon which supports and holds the collar in place and ties in a bow at one side. Of course the throat looks very white by contrast and the little touch of black adds tone to the waist.

Waists of this kind are very practical, standing the washings that are necessary to keep them immaculate, quite as well as waists of fine cotton fabrics.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Filet Lace Lamp Shades.

Have you seen the new filet lace lamp shades?

They are beautiful. They are run with colored threads and edged with fringe of the same colors.

One for a large lamp is made of white filet run with various dull shades of blue. There is a pattern of griffins and somewhat conventionalized rose trees in pots and the edge is finished with shaded blue fringe. The shade is mounted over yellow silk, and the effect of the light shining through the yellow and then the blue is delightful. The shade costs about fifteen dollars.

India Rubber as Eraser.

India rubber, it is believed, was used for the first time as an eraser in 1770. It was, however, many years later before it was put in general use. Prior to this, pieces of bread were used for erasing purposes.

For the Bathroom.

A new bath mat, which is made of a material strongly suggesting the cotton velvet sold for suits, is now shown. It is made in a lovely shade of blue and is so thick and velvety that it is hard to believe dampness will not harm it. Another bath mat especially desirable on cool days in spring and summer is made of blue and white—or green, pink or yellow and white—blanketing, the sort of which blanket wrappers are made, in a checkered design. Either of these mats could be duplicated from material by the yard, the selvages left free, the ends turned under and stitched on the machine.

Plaited Skirt.

A good supplementary garment to add to the winter wardrobe is a plaited skirt. Plaited fabric is sold in skirt lengths for various prices, and some of the shops will have plaited any fabric which you choose. It is neatly stitched into bands, too, so that all you need do is to seam it and put on hooks and eyes.

"You Can't Do It."

Henry N. Spaan tells a story of John S. Duncan, illustrating how quickly Mr. Duncan took advantage of any unusual occurrence in the trial of a case. The witness was being cross-examined with all the vigor John S. Duncan possessed. Finally he protested.

"What are you trying to do to me?" the witness shouted at Mr. Duncan.

"I am simply trying to get you to tell the truth," replied Mr. Duncan, instantly.

"You can't do it, you can't do it!" exclaimed the witness exultantly.

That reply terminated the cross-examination.—Indianapolis News.

Coughs, Cold Stiff Neck Neuralgia

Especially in the piercing pain of neuralgia or the dull throb of headache is Sloan's Liniment wonderfully relieving. Laid lightly on the part where the pain is felt, it gives at once a feeling of comfort and ease that is most welcome to the overwrought sufferer.

Hear What Others Say:

"There are no Liniments that equal Sloan's. My husband has neuralgia very often, he rubs Sloan's on his face and that is the last of it."—Mrs. V. J. Brown, Route 1, Box 121, Halls, Tenn.

"I have used Sloan's Liniment for family use for years and would not be without it. We have raised a family of ten children and have used it for croup and all lung trouble; also, as an antiseptic for wounds, of which children have a great many, it can't be beat. My wife sprained her ankle last summer and it was in bad shape. Sloan's Liniment quickly helped her to be as good as ever in a week. I have used it several times for sprains and rheumatism."—John Newcomb, R. R. No. 6, Keokuk, Iowa.

GREAT BOYS' CONVENTION

One Hundred and Forty Boys of Lake County Present Perry Conference.

What proved to be the largest Boys' Conference ever held in Lake county, and the second largest in the state, this season, took place at Perry Monday afternoon and evening.

One hundred and forty boys representing every County Association, were present, and it was strictly a boys' conference. After the registration and get-acquainted period, the meeting was called to order by Councd while officers were elected for this by wes introduced as the chairman of the Conference last year. He presided while officers were electd for this year. Mr. Gail Luses of Perry, was elected Chairman and Mr. Lynn Carlton acted as secretary.

After the devotional exercises, led by Rev. B. P. Crawford, of Painesville, many splendid papers and talks were given by the boys representing the different groups. These papers were well prepared and were listened to with great interest by every boy present. Mr. T. B. Lanham, State County Work Secretary, gave a splendid address in the afternoon and at the close of his address he presented the County Y. M. C. A. work in India. An offering was then taken and the boys subscribed over thirty dollars to help carry on this splendid work among the boys in that foreign country. Mr. C. W. Searls of Madison, chairman of the County Y. M. C. A. Committee, gave a very effective address on the "Young Man's Jesus." He presented to the boys that this was a young man's age, and that Christ was the young man's friend, being a young man himself. He closed his address by urging every young man to take Jesus Christ as his personal friend.

The banquet at night was one of the greatest ever held in Lake county, there being 130 boys seated at the banquet table. Mr. C. W. Searls, acting as toastmaster, with a few well-chosen words, introduced Mr. Lanham as the speaker of the evening. The address given by Mr. Lanham was full of enthusiasm and very effective. He won a place in the hearts of all the boys that were present. After his remarks, Mr. Lincoln of the Nursery, one of the oldest men in Lake county, spoke to the boys and told them a little of his experience as a boy. The boys were very much impressed by his remarks. At the close of the meeting Mr. Searls introduced the members of the County Y. M. C. A. committee who were present and also a number of the group leaders.

The County Y. M. C. A. work under the present leadership is making splendid progress. The boys of the county are the biggest asset we have. If we want good men it is necessary to have good clean boys, for boys are what men are made of. The County Y. M. C. A. is developing leadership among the boys in every community and is worthy of the co-operation and support of every man and institution in Lake county. If you are not in touch with the work that this organization is doing it would pay you to investigate and see if this work is worth while. Much credit is due to the mothers of the Y. M. C. A. boys of Perry for the splendid banquet they served, also to the Brewster orchestra and to the quartet for the splendid music that they gave.

Mrs. Emma Caley Dies.

Mrs. Emma Caley of Little Mountain, who was badly injured by a fall a few weeks ago, passed away Sunday morning. Mrs. Caley was 63 years of age and was born on the farm where she died. She was the last of a family of four children and was the widow of Thomas Caley, who died several years ago.

Funeral services were held from the home at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"Fled."

Job 14:2

You have fled like the wind and the shadow, my friend—
Like the winds that blow where they list—
Like the shadow that hath neither substance nor end,
Like the rain, and the cloud and the mist—
Like the fragrance and hue of beautiful flowers
That the breezes and sunshine have kissed,
Like the seconds and minutes of fast flying hours,
That are flying no whither, I wist.

Calves Have Died

E. E. Lejner of LeRoy, has lost two valuable calves recently, and is at a loss to know the cause of death. The young animals were apparently in good health until a short time before their death, and some circumstances make it look as though a poisoner might be at work in that section.

The mouths of both calves had the appearance of being burned, and their stomachs bloated until death ended their sufferings. Mr. Lejner has taken the matter up with the state authorities.

MAY APPLY KNIFE

To Salaries of County Officials in This State.

A big cut in the salaries and fees to be paid to county officials is to be made in a bill that members of the general assembly expect will be introduced this week. The name of the author of the bill has not been made public.

Such a measure will bring to Columbus the wildest lobby in recent years, it is predicted. There is not a county official in the state who would be willing to have his emoluments reduced, and the fight would be aided by prospective candidates who hope to win office in future elections.

It is pointed out the salary cutting epidemic had about run its course, all state officials, lawmakers and judges having had a slash taken at their pay, with the bills pending, and that county officers were in line to get the next touch of the economy movement.

Fairs For This Year

Railroads have advised the Agricultural Commission that they will not grant free return shipment of exhibits at county and state fairs in 1915. For many years this favor has been granted to exhibitors. No reason is given by the railroads for such action. Many owners of pure bred live stock will decline to show animals for premiums this year on account of fear of the foot and mouth disease. This may cause Fair Boards to cancel exhibits in cattle, sheep, and hogs. Other departments of the fairs can be filled and the fairs held as usual.

Practically all county fairs will encourage the Junior Contest work, viz.: acre of corn, live stock judging, apple growing, potato growing, domestic science, pig growing and educational work.

The boy who grows most corn on one acre in each county, will get a free scholarship, good for the 8-year short course in the College of Agriculture at Columbus. Cash value of same, $60.

The three boys who get highest score in the livestock judging contest at the county fair, will get a free trip to Columbus, and a week's visit at the Ohio State University. After winning honors at home they will have the chance of coming to the state capital and enter the state-wide contest in live stock judging. Many Fair Boards will offer free trip to one boy and one girl to Washington.

More Car Robbers

Charles Fineus and John Sickers, two alleged robbers, were brought to Painesville Monday night by Nickel Plate detectives and given a hearing before Justice E. G. Huntington. Both men waived examination and were bound over to common pleas in the amount of $1,000 each. In default of bail the men were taken to the jail.

These men are said to be members of a gang that broke open a Nickel Plate car near Willoughby last Saturday.

Wonder Lemons

Down at Norton's greenhouse in Perry a reporter noticed a wonderful little tree known as the Ponderosa or American Wonder Lemon. The tree is about six years old and at the present time bears four large lemons and a large number of blossoms. The largest lemon is twelve inches around and all are of good size.

The fruit, according to Mr. Norton is a cross between a lemon and a grape fruit, and has a very pleasant taste, being neither sweet nor sour.

Leg Broken In Three Places

Carl Archut, a German, residing on the Dodge farm south of Madison, was seriously injured Friday. In driving down the river hill his wagon slewed on the ice and Archut was thrown to the ground and pinned between the wagon and the railing along the roadway. He was brought to Madison in a wagon and Dr. C. H. Quayle found that the left leg was broken three times between the ankle [illegible]

S. W. CALL KILLED

Perry Nurseryman Dies When Train Strikes Auto.

Solon Call, prominent nurseryman and life-long resident of Perry, was instantly killed Monday morning when a New York Central passenger train struck his automobile.

The accident occurred between 7 and 8 o'clock at the Maple avenue crossing, a short distance west of the Perry depot. Mr. Call was alone in the machine and was driving south. When the train struck the big Studebaker car it completely demolished it and Mr. Call's body was thrown many feet in the air. The track is clear in both directions and just how the accident occurred is a mystery.

Mr. Call had devoted many years of his life to the building up of Call's nurseries, and had also been active in the business and social life of the village and in the work of the Methodist church. His early education was obtained at the old Madison seminary, and he took great pleasure in attending the student reunion held each year. Mrs. Call and one daughter, Miss Ethel Call, survive.

New York—Leslie C. Wilder received a check for a $2250 legacy for which he had been fighting for thirteen years. The excitement was so great that he dropped dead with the check in his hand.

Allentown, Pa.—Because work was slack, Fransis D. Baer, grave digger committed suicide by taking gas.

Los Angeles—A complete skeleton of a cave bear that is said to be 200,000 years old was found recently in an excavation near here.

New York—On board the yacht with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G Vanderbilt, who, with their two sons, Alfred and George, are on an eight weeks' cruise to California, by way of the Panama canal, is a cow to furnish fresh milk for the party and especially for the two youngsters of the family.

Grayville, Ill.—A moral wave has struck here and as a result the girls in the high school basketball team no longer wear bloomers, but "make the baskets" in full skirts. The school board notified the girls they could not use the name of their school in their games so long as they wore bloomers.

Common Sense

Longfellow could take a worthless piece of paper and write a poem on it and make it worth $65,000—that's genius. There are some men who could write a few words on a piece of paper and make it worth $8,000,000—that's capital. The United States can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and make it worth $20—that's money. A mechanic can take material worth $5 and make it into watch springs worth $1,000—that's skill. There is a man in Chicago who can take a 50-cent piece of canvass, paint a picture on it, and make it worth $1,000—that's art. A Greek can take an article worth 75c and sell it for $1—that's business. A woman could purchase a hat for 75c but prefers one worth $27—that's foolishness. A ditch digger handles several tons of earth for $1.75 a day—that's labor. The author of this can write a check for $9,000,000, but it wouldn't be worth a dime—that tough. There are people who will tell you there are other papers as good as this—that's nerve. Take $1.00 and get a year's subscription to the Herald—that's common sense.

Crane Builders Dine

Employees of The Cleveland Crane & Engineering Co., of Wickliffe, held their second monthly dinner and educational meeting Thursday eve., Feb. 18th.

The members were delightfully entertained by the Shop Orchestra.

Mr. Weeks, Safety Engineer for the American Steel & Wire Co., gave an interesting and instructive lecture illustrated by the use of the stereopticon, showing the Safety-First and Welfare work of the Steel Corporation.

Among the pictures shown was one of particular interest to the men, illustrating two Cleveland cranes. The speaker said they are first cranes installed by the Corporation fully equipped with every modern safety feature possible.

Five prizes were awarded at this meeting to the workmen of the plant for suggestions made since the last meeting, that could be put to practical use by the company. This suggestion contest will be continued for the next six months.

BETTER SCHOOLS

Will Result from Meetings of County Board of Education

Thirteen boards of education were represented at the meeting held in Painesville Saturday and many interesting matters were discussed. The members present included: Madison township—C. W. Genung, V. F. Foster, Roy W. Cone. Madison Village—W. W. Waters, N. D. Bailey. Perry—D. P. Blackmore, George Childs, Mrs. Chas. Lucas, A. N. Champion. Painesville—C. W. Hadden, W. B. Cole, W. W. Trowbridge, J. M. Crofoot. Concord—W. R. Harrison, H. O. Adams, J. E. Caspell. Leroy—Lynn Quine, L. E. Pike, Frank Wiltshire. Fairport—K. W. Farley. Mentor Special—Frank Mather. Mentor Village—T. D. Morley. Mentor township—C. R. Mitchell, J. T. Winfield, F. A. Cole. Kirtland—F. P. Freshley, N. P. Crawford. Willoughby—S. D. Shankland. Willoughby township—F. N. Shankland, H. E. Talbot. C. W. Searls, county board president.

County Superintendent F. H. Kendall presided at the meeting and made the opening address, telling of the county schools and the improvements which have been made, the new buildings planned and in course of construction and the complete outfits to meet state requirements which have been installed in seven schools, etc.

D. P. Blackmore told of "Consolidation," how it permits grading, so that a teacher devotes her time to one or two grades and can do justice to her pupils, which is impossible when seven or eight grades were thrown together in the district school.

Superintendent J. R. Adams, father of the centralized schools of Lake county, contrasted the splendidly equipped schools of today in Madison township, housed in four modern buildings, to the 17 small schools scattered over that township 20 years ago. Twelve teachers instead of 17 are now employed, the enrollment is larger and a good high school has been added.

Mrs. Chas. Lucas of Perry talked on "Efficient Teachers and Teachers' Salaries," and advocated the payment of salaries that would secure the best class of teachers for rural school districts. The employment of so many inexperienced teachers is the main cause of the backward country school of today.

F. N. Shankland talked during the dinner hour and told of the "One Room School." He cited school No. 6 in Willoughby township as an excellent example of what can be done in bringing a one-room school up to the first grade.

After dinner occurred a short concert. Pupils from Painesville township schools, under the direction of Prof. R. W. Henderson, gave a number of songs in a manner that made a hit with the audience.

S. O. Shankland of Andrews Institute, talked on "Requirements of an Up-to-date High School," and C. W. Searls, president of the county board explained the new school code. He declared we are now getting a vision of what it means to educate for real life. He said the new school law, while not perfect, is filling a long-felt want; that adequate supervision is a necessity, and requires more than county supervision alone. He quoted from letters received from six county auditors who expressed a belief that the supervision feature was overdone in some counties by having too many small districts. He was in favor of giving the law a fair trial.

Supt. W. A. McCurdy, state rural supervisor, delivered a very vigorous and lucid address on the subject, "The Trend in Rural Education." From his wide knowledge of rural schools he told of the progress being made in the state, and paid a compliment to Lake county on the advance already made here.

Senator J. V. Winans and Representative Carl R. Kimball responded to calls for remarks. They explained the features of bills now in the legislature that affect schools. It was their idea that the code as a whole should stand, but thought there should be a limit to the number of supervision districts.

Before adjournment the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That this convention of members of boards of education of Lake county is convinced that it would be unwise to make radical changes in the school laws at this time. The best interests of the children demand that the present laws have a fair and impartial trial.

C. W. SEARLS,
S. D. SHANKLAND,
C. W. GENUNG,
Committee.

UNCLE JOSH

Takes His Pen in Hand and Writes of Schools of Other Days.

Centreville, O., Feb. 22.

Mr. Editor:

I learn from your paper that the boards of education of the county met at Painesville last Saturday and discussed many questions, among them being the one, "Should each rural rural school have a well of good drinking water on the premises?"

Now I don't know how the board members felt about the matter, but if I had been there I should have voted 'NO!' Perhaps I am a little old-fashioned, but I wouldn't want to go back to school here in Centerville and miss the fun of going after a pail of water. Now, honest, Mr. Editor, would you?

Remember how about the middle of the forenoon, when the advanced arithmetic class was at the blackboard struggling with problems and teacher was hearing the Second Reader children recite, some one would be seized with a violent thirst, and snapping his fingers loudly to attract teacher's attention would petition hopefully:

"Please c'n me and Denny fetch a pail of water?" Or perhaps it would be John instead of Denny, or maybe two of the girls would go.

Sometimes we went to Griswold's and sometimes to Brewster's—it depended on whether we were apple hungry or cooky hungry. When we went to Griswold's and stopped at the kitchen door to ask Mrs. Griswold for a tin cup to get a drink she would invite us in and before we left was almost sure to point to a round, corpolent basket that stood on a stool by the corner cupboard:

"That's pa's apple basket—pick what's good." They were all good—Rambos, Russets, Seek-no-furthers, Spitzenburghs, Bell Flowers, Greenings—what wouldn't we give for the privilege of helping ourselves from Pa Griswold's apple basket once more!

If we went to Brewster's and Denny was with us, we boldly invaded the kitchen. We would hang the pail on the pump and ask Mrs. Brewster if we might warm our hands by the kitchen stove. And while we were standing there and pretending to warm and trying to look as though cookies were the last thing in the world we were thinking about, she'd rub the flour from her hands and whisk a pan of cookies from the oven. And there never were such cookies as those, large as a saucer, and plump and soft and spicy, the center depressed by a big fat raisin. As soon as they cooled a little, she'd give us one; and when that had disappeared, she'd give us another, which we preserved carefully until we returned to the school room, so as to make the other pupils envious.

Of course the new Centerville school building has modern plumbing, and when a child wants a drink he turns a spigot instead of going to cedar pail for it. Likely as not, he'll use an individual drinking cup, or perhaps he'll drink from a sanitary fountain—there's no telling to what lengths a modern school board will go, once it's started.

Oh, I know I'm old-fashioned. They have best arguments in the world in favor of centralized schools and all such, but it does seem as though they were taking half the romance and poetry out of school life by abandoning the little red school house down at Centerville.

Yours truly,
UNCLE JOSH.

Mail Boxes.

There is now behind the bars of the Bexar county jail a young man from Guadalupe county who is waiting trial on a charge of injuring a letter box. The case will be tried in the federal court. The bond in this case was $750, which is as much as a state court fixes in a minor homicide case.

Uncle Sam is rather sensitive about his mail boxes. People in the city know that because mail boxes and mail chutes frequently have signs on them telling just what will happen to the unfortunate person who damages them.

Probably the real purpose of this law is to prevent persons from breaking into mail boxes or attempting to do so. But as a matter of fact the person who shoots holes through a country roadside mail box is just as much a criminal as the man who tries to break into a city mail box. The country mail box frequently receives not only letters but small parcel post packages containing such things as seeds. It is important that everything going into this box be protected from the weather. That is the reason most of the boxes are of galvanized iron and fairly well constructed. One bullet hole will destroy the effectiveness of a metal mail box. After that the mail, letters and morning paper may be found soaking wet and seeds may be found damp.

Next time you have a temptation to do anything so utterly silly as to shoot a hole through a mail box think of the inconvenience you will cause. And contemplate the fact that [illegible]

A MONTH'S WAGES

Is What a Madison Man Will Pay For One Skunk Hide

A young man living near Madison, was arrested on a warrant charging him with having in his possession one skunk hide, complaint having been made by F. W. Clark, deputy Fish and Game Commissioner.

At the hearing before Justice E. G. Huntington on Monday afternoon, the young man entered a plea of guilty, stating at the time that he was not well posted on the game laws of the state. A fine of $25 and costs, the lowest amount allowed by the statute, was assessed.

As the skunk hunter is employed on a farm at $25 a month, his little experience will cost him something more than a full month's wages.

Death of W. S. Ackley

W. S. Ackley, former resident of Mentor and Geneva, died at Eustis, Florida, Monday night. Mr. Ackley went south to spend the winter with his daughter and her husband, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Lowe of Mentor. Another daughter, Mrs. V. J. Fitzsimmons, resides at Geneva.

The remains will be shipped to Mentor for burial.

Dies After Short Illness

Charles Sperry, 69, died at his home on Walnut avenue, Painesville, Tuesday morning, after an illness of three weeks. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Miss Helen Sperry.

Funeral services were held at noon Thursday and the remains were taken to Mentor for burial.

Spring Garden Notes

This is an ideal time to dig your garden, not because it does the garden so much good as because digging frozen ground will give you plenty of exercise.

Do not plant seed in the packages in which they are sold.

It is a good plan to plant pumpkins close to tomatoes. Looking at the pumpkins ambitious young tomatoes will be urged to emulating their size.

Greenbacks should be planted in a bank.

Hope thrives best in glass.

The night hath a thousand eyes, but a potato only has five or six.

Hog Cholera Danger

Ohio has just got a good start in its experimental work in dealing with the eradication of hog cholera. This disease is the ghost of the corn belt, middle west country. The U. S. government has just commenced to appropriate money to help the states fight this plague. Indications now are that the Ohio legislature may not make appropriations to continue this work. In the judgment of the Agricultural Commission this is a serious mistake. Other states will continue to co-operate with the federal government. Dr. Fischer as state veterinarian, has accomplished more satisfactory results in Ohio than have been obtained in any other state. Ohio farmers should not consent to have this fight on the swine plague dropped. They should lose no time in consulting with their senators and representatives. Do it now. Advise this newspaper how you feel about this matter. The first appropriation bill, as introduced, has omitted any money for this experimental work.

If You Want to be Loved

Don't contradict people, even if you're sure you are right.

Don't be inquisitive about the affairs of even your most intimate friend.

Don't underrate anything because you don't possess it.

Don't believe that everybody else is happier than you.

Don't conclude that you never had any opportunities in life.

Don't believe all the evils you hear.

Don't repeat gossip, even if it does interest a crowd.

Don't jeer at anybody's religious belief.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. Few care whether you have an earache, headache or rheumatism.

Learn to attend to your own business—a very important point.

Do not try to be anything else but a gentleman or a gentlewoman, and that means one who has consideration for the whole world, and whose life is governed by the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would be done by."—Christian Work.

BIG EXPOSITION OPEN TO PUBLIC

President Wilson Flashes a Signal From Washington to San Francisco.

GALA EVENT IN WESTERN COAST CITY

Elaborate Ceremonies Mark the Inauguration of the Magnificent Panama-Pacific World's Fair, Which Cost $50,000,000.

Washington, D. C.—Standing amid a group of California's "native sons," President Wilson pressed an electric button placed exactly in the center of the Capitol rotunda Feb. 20 and thus sent a telegraphic flash to the Golden Gate which formally opened the Panama-Pacific International exposition.

Besides the president many diplomatists, legislators and other prominent men were guests of the Californians. By an ingenious plan the flash which the president sent to the exposition at the same time lighted up in electric flame the message, "The exposition is now open," in many cities throughout the country, and this message was also sent to all the territories and possessions of the United States, including Alaska, the Philippines, Porto Rico, Hawaii, Guam and the Panama Canal zone.

Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, was in San Francisco at the opening ceremonies as the personal representative of the president.

London, Eng.—While the captain of the American cotton steamship Evelyn, the Dutch pilot and 13 members of the crew were rescued by a German patrol boat, 14 others of the crew are missing. Owing to the fact that a very dense fog prevailed Sunday and Monday along the Holland and German coast grave fears are entertained for the missing men. While Berlin reported the missing men were landed in Holland, a dispatch from The Hague says that inquiries of the coast guard stations in North Holland have brought the reply that nothing has been seen or heard of that part of the crew who were reported to have proceeded for Holland after the steamer was blown up.

The official head of State Librarian John Henry Newman fell into the administration basket the other day when the board of library commissioners, recently reorganized by Gov. Willis and which has charge of the library, elected Charles Burleigh Galbreath to succeed Mr. Newman as librarian. In choosing Mr. Galbreath the board restores him to a position he held for nearly 15 years. Three years ago last summer, after the Democrats secured control of the library, Mr. Galbreath was displaced to make room for Mr. Newman. The salary of the position is $3,000 a year. Mr. Newman was the Democratic candidate for secretary of state the year that Judson Harmon was elected governor, and he was appointed librarian at Harmon's request during his second term as governor. The librarian is not appointed for any specified term, serving during the pleasure of the board. Mr. Galbreath was first appointed librarian during the administration of the late Gov. Asa S. Bushnell and served continuously in that office until Mr. Newman was appointed.

KINGDOM OF GOD

Today We See Just What Was Meant in This Gospel of the Nazarene.

No change in religious thought is more remarkable than that which has taken place in our interpretation of Jesus' oft-repeated phrase, the "Kingdom of God." That the whole Gospel of the Nazarene is contained in his idea of the "kingdom" and the whole purpose of his life summed up in his prayer, "Thy kingdom come," has long been understood, but not until our own day have we come to see just what was meant by this idea and this purpose.

In the past men have assumed that the "kingdom of God" referred to a certain inward attitude of mind or condition of spirit. The word "kingdom," it has been agreed, was used by the master in a figurative sense and was intended to apply to the inner and not the outer world, to [illegible]

THE HOME MERCHANTS

The home merchant. Who is he?

He is the chap who gives you credit when you are financially broke, and carries your account until you are able to pay.

He is the chap who gives you back your money or makes exchanges when you are not satisfied with what you have bought.

He is the chap who stands behind the door with a handshake, and lets of all losses that you mey sustain on the goods you buy.

He is the chap who meets you at the door with a hanshake, and lets you out with a message to the "kids," and a real come-again good-bye.

He is the chap who meets and greets you on the street every day in the year, and takes a neighborly interest in your family and your affairs.

He is the chap whose clerks, bookkeepers and other employes live in Painesville, and spend their money with you and other Painesville people.

He is the chap who pays heavy taxes to support Painesville schools, and build Painesville streets and maintain the Painesville fire department and park and police system.

He is the chap who helps support Painesville churches and the hospital and charity organizations and Painesville lodges and clubs and talks for Painesville every day in the year.

He is the chap who visits you when you are sick, sends flowers to your family when you die, and follows your body out among the trees and tombs, as far as human feet may travel with the dead.

He is the home merchant your neighbor—your friend—your helper in times of need.

Don't you think that you ought to trade with him and be his friend and his helper in the time of his need?

Don't you know that every dollar you spend out of Painesville for merchandise is sent to strangers—to men who never spend a dollar in Painesville; to men who would not trust you for a box of matches; to men who would turn you over to the police if you should enter their offices?

You don't save much, frequently nothing, when you send your money out of Painesville, and you take all the risk yourself of short weight or measure and of getting damaged or inferior goods. And don't you know that the prosperity and growth of Painesville depends very largely upon the success and prosperity of the home merchant? Out-of-town people judge our city by the appearance of our stores and the degree of enterprise shown by our merchants; and our home merchants cannot succeed unless Painesville people give them loyal support.

THE MARKETING END

The national farmers' organization which is asking that congress and state legislatures pay more heed to the problem of marketing agricultural products points out a real need. It is not one, however, that statesmen have been ignorant of all these years. Perhaps they need prodding.

In general more attention has been paid to the problem of production than to that of marketing. The country has been told that we do not raise enough; that consumers multiply faster than those who produce. All of which is true, of course.

Yet the fact remains that annually thousands of bushels of fruit and other food products are lost because marketing facilities are so inadequate that no sufficient incentive exists to get the stuff to those who need it. It is common knowledge likely to lose its significance because people are so familiar with it.

The problem is for widespread consideration. Congress and the legislatures to whom this latest appeal is made, might accomplish something.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

[illegible]

Regarding the Peck's Bad Boy stage of Washington's life little is known [illegible] concerning this, there is a wide variance of opinion, the muckrakers declaring it is all piffle, while the ordinary mortals consider it a priceless heritage of history.

Washington married Martha Curtis out of a possible choice of Betsy Ross, Molly Pitcher, Janice Meridith, and the Goddess of Liberty. Shortly after this he took up his military career, fighting many battles outside of his own hearth at home. The closing years of his life were spent in declining the Presidency the Kingship of America and similar jobs.

Washington was the founder of a city of magnificent deficits and was the only man ineligible to membership in the Annanias Club or the Press Agents' Association. It is to be regretted that the tendency of the times is to name bull pups, selections of triplets, and fourth-class postoffices for the immortal George, while the more creditable honors go to Hans Wagner, Ty Cobb, and other rounders.

Newspaper men, more than any other class, emulate the veracity of Washington. With the possible exception of obituaries, weddings, and when speaking of their circulation, most publishers adhere to the straight and narrow about as closely as we imagine George did.

It was Thomas Carlyle who invented the "unspeakable Turk" phrase. Tammas would be gratified could he know how frequently the quotation is used—without credit.

There was a time when a Yankee ship hardly needed to carry a flag; a glimpse of her tall, slim spars was enough. But in those days there were no submarines.

American exports may be expected to diminish in volume in case the British navy establishes an effective blockade of the German coast and the German submarine war around the British isles produces even a psychological effect upon ship and cargo owners. The blockade of the ports of Hamburg and Bremen would probably affect cotton exports from the afflicted South, which in recent months have materially increased. But a check on exports of foodstuffs from this country would afford compensating benet to our own people in a lower price of wheat and flower.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

It Isn't Your Town, Its You

If you want to live in the kind of a town
Like the kind of a town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.

You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new;
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town,
It isn't the town—it's you!

Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody gets ahead;
When every one works and nobody shirks,
You can raise a town from the dead.

And if, while you make your personal stake,
Your neighbor makes one, too,
Your town will be what you want to see—
It isn't your town—it's YOU!

Child's Pretty Idea.

"Oh, mother!" cried a delighted urchin, watching the sun break from behind heavy clouds. "Oh, mamma, do look! God opened his door."

ORDINANCE NO. 1011

An ordinance determining to proceed with the improvement of Charlotte Avenue from Liberty Street in an easterly direction to the end of said Charlotte Avenue and at a point on the line between tracts 2 and 3, township 10, by constructing in said street a sanitary sewer of vitrified pipe.

Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, three-fourths of the whole number elected thereto being present and concurring.

Section 1. That it is hereby determined to proceed with the improvement of Charlotte Avenue from Liberty Street in an easterly direction to the end of said Charlotte Avenue and at a point on the line between tracts 2 and 3, township 10, by constructing in said Avenue a sanitary sewer of vitrified pipe in accordance with Resolution No. 431, passed December 7th, 1914, and in accordance with the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles of the proposed improvement heretofore approved and now on file in the office of the Director of Public Service.

Section 2. That the grade of said street as improved shall be the existing grade.

Section 3. That all claims for damages resulting therefrom shall be judicially inquired into after the completion of the proposed improvement.

Section 4. That the entire cost of said improvement, less one-fiftieth thereof and the cost of intersections shall be assessed in proportion to the benefits which may result from the improvement upon the following described lots and land, to-wit: All lots and lands bounding and abutting upon said proposed improvement, which said lots and lands are hereby determined to be especially benefited by said improvement, and the cost of said improvement shall include the expense of preliminary and other surveys, of printing and of publishing the notices, resolutions and ordinances required, the serving of said notices, the cost of construction, together with the interest on bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of deferred assessments, and all other necessary expenditures.

Section 5. That the assessments so to be levied shall be paid in five (5) annual installments, with interest on deferred payments at five (5) per cent per annum, provided that the owner of any property assessed may at his option pay such assessment in cash within sixty (60) days from and after the passage of the assessing ordinance, in which case said cash assessment shall not include any item of interest upon bonds to be issued in anticipation of the collection of deferred installments of assessments.

Section 6. That bonds of the City of Painesville shall be issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments and in an amount equal thereto.

Section 7. That the remainder of the entire cost of said improvement not specially assessed, including the cost of intersections, shall be paid by the issuance of bonds as provided by law and the faith and the credit of the City of Painesville are hereby pledged for the payment of both principal and interest of said bonds at maturity in accordance with the laws and constitution of the State of Ohio, reference in particular hereby being had to Section 11 of Article 13 of "Amendments to the Constitution of Ohio" as adopted on September 3, 1912.

Section 8. That the Director of Public Service be and he hereby is authorized and directed to make and execute a contract for said improvement with the lowest and best bidder after due advertisement according to law.

Section 9. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and legal publication.

Passed February 15, 1915.

E. D. MAYHEW, President of the Council.

Attest: FRANK L. KELLY, Clerk.

Approved Feb. 15, 1915.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT

[illegible]

LEGAL NOTICE

George Philpott, Elizabeth Philpott, Dail Philpott and Judson Philpott, all residing [illegible] Michigan, will take notice that on [illegible] day of January, 1915, Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, filed their petition in the Common Pleas Court of Lake County, Ohio, in case No. 4833, against the above named parties and others, heirs at law and devisees of Joseph Philpott, deceased, praying for the reformation of a deed to the following described premises:

Parcel 1. Situated in Willoughby, in the County of Lake and State of Ohio, to-wit and known as part of Lot No. 1 in tract No. 1 in said Township and described as follows: Beginning at a stone set on the tract Line between tract No. 1 and tract No. 2 and on the north Line of Lot No. 2 and on the North line of Land owned by F. B. Squires. Thence North 3 degrees 30 minutes East on said tract line 677 feet to a Stake. Thence South 88 degrees 30 minutes East on the South line of Land this day deeded by the above Grantor to Florence Clark and Jennie Kitchen 1347 feet to the westerly line of land owned by [illegible] Covert. Thence South 2 degrees 40 minutes West on said Covert westerly Line 677 feet to a stake. Thence North 86 degrees 30 minutes West 1351 feet to the place of beginning—a piece of land 24 feet square in the Southwest corner of the above described parcel of land is not conveyed by this deed, containing without said 24 feet square of Land 20 95-100 Twenty and ninety-five one Hundredths acres of land.

Parcel 2. Also another piece of land in tract No 2 beginning at the center of the road at the S. W. corner of land deeded to Florence Clark and her heirs, thence in the center of the road to the N. W. corner of land owned by Elmer Clark, thence on Clark's N. line to tract No. 1, thence N. on tract line No. 1 to Clark's S line, thence W. on Clark's S line to the place of beginning, containing 2 33-100 acres of land.

Said petition alleges that on the 5th day of October, 1906, said Joseph Philpott executed and delivered to said plaintiffs his Warranty Deed, whereby he intended and attempted to convey the title to the above described real estate, to said plaintiffs, and that said plaintiffs paid the full purchase price of the same, to-wit, the sum of $1200.00; that by the mistake of the person who drew the deed, the granting clause in said deed was written 'do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, my heirs and assigns forever.' Said petition asks that said deed may be reformed so that the granting clause will read 'do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, their heirs and assigns forever.'

Said defendants are required to answer on or before the 13th day of March, 1915, or judgment may be taken against them.

SYNOPSIS.

—2—

In a California valley an old man, one of the few survivors of a world-wide plague that has destroyed civilization, tells the story of the Scarlet Plague to his grandsons.

CHAPTER 1—Continued.

The boys were overwhelmed with delight at sight of the tears of senile disappointment that dribbled down the old man's cheeks. Then, unnoticed, Hoo-Hoo replaced the empty shell with a fresh cooked crab. Already dismembered from the cracked legs the white meat sent forth a small cloud of savory steam. This attracted the old man's nostrils, and he looked down in amazement. The change of his mood to one of joy was immediate. He snuffled and muttered and mumbled, making almost a croon of delight, as he began to eat. Of this the boys took little notice, for it was an accustomed spectacle. Nor did they notice his occasional exclamations and utterances of phrases which meant nothing to them, as, for instance, when he smacked his lips and champed his gums while muttering: "Mayonnaise! Just think—mayonnaise! And it's sixty years since the last was ever made! Two generations and never a smell of it! Why, in those days it was served in every restaurant with crab."

When he could eat no more, the old man sighed, wiped his hands on his naked legs, and gazed out over the sea. With the content of a full stomach, he waxed reminiscent.

"To think of it! I've seen this beach alive with men, women and children on a pleasant Sunday. And there weren't any bears to eat them up, either. And right up there on the cliff was a big restaurant where you could get anything you wanted to eat. Four million people lived in San Francisco then. And now, in the whole city and county there aren't forty all told. And out there on the sea were ships and ships always to be seen, going in for the Golden Gate or coming out. And airships in the air—dirigibles and flying machines. They could travel two hundred miles an hour. Mail contracts with the New York and San Francisco Limited demanded that for the minimum. There was a chap, a Frenchman, I forget his name, who succeeded in making three hundred; but the thing was too risky for conservative persons. But he was on the right clue and he would have managed it if it hadn't been for the great plague. When I was a boy there were men who remembered the coming of the first aeroplanes, and now I have lived to see the last of them, and that sixty years ago."

"But there weren't many crabs in those days," the old man wandered on. "They were fished out, and they were great delicacies. The open season was only a month long, too. And now crabs are accessible the whole year around. Think of it—catching all the crabs you want, any time you want, in the surf of the Cliff house beach!"

A sudden commotion among the goats brought the boys to their feet. The dogs about the fire rushed to join their snarling fellow who guarded the goats, while the goats themselves stampeded in the direction of their human protectors. A half dozen forms, lean and gray, glided about on the sand hillocks or faced the bristling dogs. Edwin arched an arrow that fell short. But Hare-Lip, with a sling, such as David carried into battle against Goliath, hurled a stone through the air that whistled from the speed of its flight. It fell squarely among the wolves and caused them to slink away toward the dark depths of the eucalyptus forest.

The boys laughed and lay down again in the sand, while Granser sighed ponderously. He had eaten too much, and with hands clasped on his paunch, the fingers interlaced, he resumed his maunderings.

"'The fleeting systems lapse like foam,'" he mumbled what was evidently a quotation. "That's it—foam, and fleeting. All man's toil upon the planet was just so much foam. He domesticated the serviceable animals, destroyed the hostile ones, and cleared the land of its wild vegetation. And then he passed, the flood of primordial life rolled back again, sweeping his handiwork away—the weeds and the forest inundated his fields, the beasts of prey swept over his flocks, and now there are wolves on the Cliff house beach." He was appalled by the thought. "Where four million people disported themselves, the wild wolves roam today, and the savage progeny of our loins, with prehistoric weapons, defend themselves against the fanged despoilers. Think of it! And all because of the Scarlet Death—"

The adjective had caught Hare-Lip's ear.

"He's always saying that," he said to Edwin. "What is scarlet?"

"'The scarlet of the maples can shake me like the cry of bugles going by,'" the old man quoted.

"It's red," Edwin answered the question. "And you don't know it because you come from the Chauffeur tribe. They never did know nothing, none of them. Scarlet is red—I know that."

"Red is red, ain't it?" Hare-Lip grumbled. "Then what's the good of gettin' cocky and calling it scarlet?"

"Red is not the right word," was the reply. "The plague was scarlet. The whole face and body turned scarlet in an hour's time. Don't I know? Didn't I see enough of it? And I am telling you it was scarlet because—well, because it was scarlet. There is no other word for it."

"Red is good enough for me," Hare-Lip muttered obstinately. "My dad called it red, and he ought to know. ... [illegible]

In a California valley an old man one of the few survivors of a world wide plague that has destroyed civilization, tells the story of the Scarlet Plague to his grandsons.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

"Like sand on the beach here, like sand on the beach, each grain of sand a man, or woman, or child. Yes, my boy, all those people lived right here in San Francisco. And at one time or another all those people came out on this very beach—more people than there are grains of sand. More—more—more. And San Francisco was a noble city. And across the bay—where we camped last year, even more people lived, clear from Point Richmond, on the level ground and on the hills, all the way around to San Leandro—one great city of seven million people. Seven teeth . . . there, that's it, seven millions."

Again the boys' eyes ranged up and down from Edwin's fingers to the teeth on the log.

"The world was full of people. The census of 2010 gave eight billion for the whole world—eight crab shells, yes, eight billions. It was not like today. Mankind knew a great deal more about getting food. And the more food there was, the more people there were. In the year 1800, there were of sand, Hoo-Hoo—one hundred and seventy millions in Europe alone. One hundred years later—a grain of sand, Hoo-Hoo—one hundred years later, in 1900, there were five hundred millions in Europe—five grains of sand, Hoo-Hoo, and this one tooth. This shows how easy was the getting of food, and how men increased. And in the year 2000 there were fifteen hundred millions in Europe. And it was the same all over the rest of the world. Eight crab shells there, yes, eight bil...

You do not know what soap is, and I shall not tell you, for I am telling the story of the Scarlet Death. You know what sickness is. We called it a disease. Very many of the diseases came from what we called germs. Remember that word—germs. A germ is a very small thing. It is like a woodtick, such as you find on the dogs in the spring of the year when they run in the forest. Only the germ is very small. It is so small that you cannot see it—"

Hoo-Hoo began to laugh.

"You're a queer un, Granser, talking about things you can't see. If you can't see 'em, how do you know they are? That's what I want to know. How do you know anything you can't see?"

"A good question, a very good question, Hoo-Hoo. But we did see—some of them. We had what we called microscopes and ultramicroscopes, and we put them to our eyes and looked through them, so that we saw things larger than they really were, and many things we could not see without the microscopes at all. Our best ultramicroscopes could make a germ look forty thousand times larger. A mussel shell is a thousand times larger. A mussel shell is a thousand fingers like Edwin's. Take forty mussel shells, and by as many times larger was the germ when we looked at it through a microscope. And after that, we had other ways, by using what we called moving pictures, of making the forty thousand times larger ... many thousand times larger still. And thus we saw all these things which our eyes of themselves could not see. Take a grain of sand. Break it into ten pieces. Break one of those pieces into ten, and one of those into ten, and one of those into ten, and one of those into ten, and do it all day and maybe, by sunset, you will have a piece as small as one of the germs...

"That's What I Want to Know. How Do You Know Anything You Can't See?"

PRUNE ANY TIME FROM LATE FALL TO MAY

If a Ladder Must Be Used to Work On in the Orchard It Should Be a Stepladder.

(By SYLVANUS VAN AKEN.)

A system of pruning which has received some favor is to cut back the young growth in June. It is difficult to say what the ultimate results of such a system of pruning will be, but from one year's experience the results seem satisfactory. The long growth is stopped and many short twigs are forced out among the limbs.

With such scraggly, scrawny growers as the Burbank plum, the results will indicate that more compact and symmetrical trees will be formed by the summer pruning.

Orchard trees may be pruned any time from late fall to May, depending somewhat on latitude. The most common time of doing it is on a pleasant day in February, March or April.

A fine, sharp saw, knife or pair of small pruning shears are the only implements usually required, but I use a long-handled pruning shear and also a good saw hung on an eight-foot pole. This does away with all ladder work.

For small trees up to twelve feet high, such as pear and plum, pruning shears will be found the quickest. If a ladder must be used to work on, it should be a stepladder as the limbs are not strong enough to bear the weight of man in the center of the tree without the possibility of breaking or peeling the bark.

Set the ladder close to the tree at one side and begin pruning from the bottom, going up step by step and drawing toward you all branches you can reach.

Before setting the ladder one should ...

... great helpers in teaching one how and what to prune. A novice is apt to err in pruning either too much or too little.

The statement that it is not natural to prune is not borne out by facts, as nature prunes more severely than does a practical fruit grower. She not only prunes out limbs which interfere with each other, but smothers entire trees.

LIME SULPHUR ON THE APPLE TREES

Heavy Drenching While Spraying Is Common Cause of Injury to Foliage.

The great question among fruit growers everywhere is: Shall bordeaux be replaced by lime sulphur as a summer spray?

Observations indicate that heavy drenching is a common cause of injury to foliage. Experiments proved that much injury by the burning of apple foliage following the application, just after the blossoms fell, was due to previous scab infection of the leaves.

It has been found that arsenate of lead is the only insecticide known which may be used in the lime sulphur with safety. It not only decreases the burning but actually increases fungicidal value of the mixture ...

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

OVERWORK and KIDNEY TROUBLE

To Decorate Dancing Coiffures

SINCE dancing has come to be indulged in by everyone from grandmamma down to the baby any number of hair ornaments and dancing caps have come to the light of day, or more probably, to the twinkling lights of night. Here are two of them, one for the carefully coifed lady and one for the curly-haired little girl.

In those made for young women caps to hold the hair in place have ... but, with the introduction of less strenuous dancing bands of all kinds encircling the head and holding the hair about the face in place have come to the fore. Nearly all these bands are more or less elaborately set. Rhinestones with silver filagree form the background to their alluring brilliance.

The band shown in the picture employs both rhinestones and tiny velvet flowers in its composition. Small sprays of velvet forget-me-nots reminding one of branches of coral because they are coral colored and set in short, straight spikes of the blossoms, are mounted on a strand of rhinestones. This ornament encircles the head, the ends fastening in with short hairpins. A more secure fastening is managed by a small hook at one end of the band which grasps a loop at the other end, the fastening concealed under a strand of hair. A fine hair net helped out with a close-fitting band of this kind will keep the coiffure unspoiled for many a gay hour.

Purely for ornament and by way of being unusual, the fragile butterfly made of threads worked into a lace stitch, is mounted on a plain narrow band of ribbon, for the head of a little girl. Her dancing curls will take care of themselves; the band of ribbon will restrain them from falling over her face. The lacy butterfly is outlined with the very finest of silk covered wire which supports the more than gauzy wings.

The gay and buoyant bows of ribbon which are set at pert angles on the heads of little girls, are like butterflies in shape and seem to lie poised ready to fly. Just a little more airy the butterfly of needlework in the very simplest of stitches is pretty for the little girl who is herself like a dancing butterfly.

THE HOE CAKE

The honor of having chosen old-fashioned corn pone as the subject of rapturous but deserving praise in the halls of congress belongs to Colonel Livingston of Georgia. It was he who caused corn pone to be introduced in the restaurant of the House of Representatives, with the result that it soon became the popular "staff of life" for many congressmen, who had not known its splendid and palatable qualities.

"The famous corn pone and hoe cake of the South," said the Georgia colonel, "will never be put on the top shelf for any other breads by the people who know and appreciate them; they will hold first place as long as time lasts and Indian corn is grown. I know there are few families outside the Southern States who habitually use corn meal, and yet no one who has ever tasted the many delicious dishes that can be made of it will ever sneer at it. Good old appetizing corn bread makes the working body and the thinking mind; it fills the soul with proud energy; it satisfies the cravings and pleases the whole inner man. I am now and always a friend of Indian corn—the sweetest and best breadstuff ever produced."

The colonel might have gone further and shown that corn is a universal crop in the United States and that it is time we were all getting better acquainted with it as a breadstuff. The bread made from corn meal is not only more palatable when properly prepared, but is easy of digestion and as healthful as it is economical. "Eat more corn bread" is good advice for everybody.

MARCH

We used to say that if March came in like a lion it would go out like a lamb.

Revised version: If March approaches like a suffragette it will die as calmly as the husband of one.

But, taking her by and large, March is some month. She is just like a wild, gleeful girl scampering hither and yon, with no one ever imagining what to expect of her next.

Among important events credited to the month was the invention of the circular saw in 1780, since which time the number of fingers have decreased prorata with the increase of population. A circular saw probably is as reckless and inconsiderate an apparatus as was ever placed before a trusted workman. Feed anything into it and it will wade through with a song of wild delight. They seem, however, to be especially fond of nipping the loose ends of one's anatomy.

Stenography, too, was invented in March—1817. We have seen stenographers who looked as though they might have been invented before their machines, but of course we didn't mention it to them. Stenography is a wonderful thing, as it gives a man a chance to dictate to a woman.

The possession of Alaska was another worth-while event credited to March. Uncle Sam bought Alaska for a paltry seven million dollars, and now anyone can go up there and kick that much gold out of any mountain side. The great drawback about going to Alaska to accumulate wealth is that you cannot bring it back with you. It costs more gold than any man can carry to buy a ticket back to the United States. And, since there are no base ball games or movies in Alaska, one cannot spend his wealth while abiding there; so for the present it probably will be just as well to remain at home and see how much money you can accumulate for the tax collector.

OHIO'S MAPLES

Very early in the season sap has been running freely in hundreds of maple groves in Ohio. The syrup and the sugar made already are of fine quality. The maple trees are [illegible]

For many Ohio farmers, especially in the Western Reserve, the sugar and syrup [illegible] is [illegible] in the year's business. It is a direct money crop, in that respect unlike the hay that dairy cows turn into money and the corn that goes to market in the form of fat swine. And since the maple harvest comes at a time when there is comparatively little work to be done on farms, its proceeds are nearly all clear profit.

And aside from the money value of the maple syrup and the maple sugar there is a great deal of satisfaction for Ohioans who like such sweets in knowing that about the best maple products in the country or in the world come from Ohio trees and are harvested by Ohio methods and Ohio machinery. What the Western Reserve does not know about maple sugar and maple syrup of the finest quality is not worth trying to learn.

After the sugar and syrup harvest the maples of the Reserve remain one of the most beautiful features of the landscape. They give welcome shade to many herds of fine cows through the heat of the summer. In autumn they take on their most splendid colors and their greatest glory. It is not easy to overpraise the maples of Ohio.

THE TIME FOR PEACE

When Theodore Roosevelt offered to be mediator in the Russian-Japanese war Russia was hopelessly beaten and Japan was exhausted. Both belligerents eagerly desired peace. About all that President Roosevelt did was to suggest peace and supply a place for the meeting of the commissioners. For this he was given a Nobel prize, and hailed as the great peacemaker.

The honor was won easily, but praise is none the less due Mr. Roosevelt for having made his offer at precisely the right moment. The fighters could not stop fighting till someone offered to separate them. Both were glad of any excuse to end a carnage which had become worse than useless, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When the time comes President Wilson, if he still occupies the position of American president, will doubtless make the offer of peace. To offer peace now, and to keep offering it, would be merely irritating. Neither side is worsted, and neither side is willing to admit the hopelessness of its cause. Moreover, neither side is anywhere near exhaustion. The fighting has scarcely passed its preliminary stage; the climax seems far distant.

The American republic, by abstaining from useless and premature offers, will be in a position to offer help at a time when help will be welcomed. The Dutch government, instructing Queen Wilhelmina to offer to settle the war at this time, presents a fine example of futility. But the offer of the little kingdom is no more futile than would be a similar offer from the great republic.

The war will go on. If, when the time for good offices arrives, the United States can shorten the conflict by a month or even by a week the republic will have done its duty, and will have proved more useful than it could have been by a course of persistent meddling.

One reason why idle men won't go on farms is that an idle man can't live on a farm.

Europe is sowing mines; America is sowing grain. Consider the harvests.

The estate left by the late Alfred Henry Lewis of New York and Painesville, is reported to be about $500. The enduring rewards of active literary labor continue to be painfully meager.

The Court of Last Resort.

Around the stove of the cross roads grocery is the real court of last resort, for it finally over-rules all others. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been brought before this court in almost every cross roads grocery in this country, and has always received a favorable verdict. It is in the country where man expects to receive full value for his money that this remedy is most appreciated. Obtainable everywhere.

LEGAL NOTICE

George Philpott, Elizabeth Philpott, Dall Philpott and Judson Philpott, all residing at Detroit, Michigan, will take notice that on the 29th day of Jan., 1915 Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans filed their petition in the Common Pleas Court of Lake County, Ohio, in case No. 4836, against the above named parties and others, heirs at law and devisees of Joseph Philpott, deceased, praying for the reformation of a deed to the following described premises:

Parcel 1. Situated in Willoughby, in the County of Lake and State of Ohio, to-wit and known as part of Lot No. 1 in tract No. 1 in said Township and described as follows: Beginning at a stone set on the tract Line between tract No. 1 and tract No. 2 and on the north Line of Lot No. 6 and on the North line of Land owned by F. B. Squires. Thence North 3 degrees 06 minutes East on said tract line 677 feet to a Stake. Thence South 86 degrees 30 minutes East on the South line of Land this day deeded by the above Grantor to Florence Clark and Jennie Kitchen 1347 feet to the westerly line of land owned by Covert. Thence South 2 degrees 40 minutes West on said Covert westerly Line 677 feet to a stake. Thence North 88 degrees 30 minutes West 1351 feet to the place of beginning—a piece of land 24 feet square in the Southwest corner of the above described parcel of land is not conveyed by this deed, containing without said 24 feet square of Land 20 95-100 Twenty and ninety-five one Hundredths acres of land.

Parcel 2. Also another piece of land in tract No. 2 beginning at the center of the road at the S. W. corner of land deeded to Florence Clark and her heirs, thence in the center of the road to the N. W. corner of land owned by Elmer Clark, thence on Clark's N. line to tract No. 1, thence N. on tract line No. 1 to Clark's S. line, thence W. on Clark's S. line to the place of beginning, containing 2 33-100 acres of land.

Said petition alleges that on the 5th day of October 1905, said Joseph Philpott executed and delivered to said plaintiffs his Warranty Deed, whereby he intended and attempted to convey the title to the above described real estate to said plaintiffs, and that said plaintiffs paid the full purchase price of the same to-wit, the sum of $1200.00, that by the mistake of the person who drew the deed, the granting clause in said deed was written "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, any heirs and assigns forever." Said petition asks that said deed may be reformed so that the granting clause will read "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, their heirs and assigns forever."

Said defendants are required to answer on or before the 19th day of March, 1915 or judgment may be taken against them.

ORDINANCE NO. 1014

An ordinance to levy special assessments to pay the assessment portion of the cost of improving Liberty Street from the southwesterly corner of the Park in a southerly direction to the southerly corporation line by paving, and to provide for any deficiency in such assessments by general tax levy.

Whereas, Council heretofore by Resolution No. 354, duly passed December 1, 1913 declared it necessary to improve Liberty Street as aforesaid, and

Whereas, Council by Ordinance No. 998 duly passed November 5th, 1914 determined to proceed with said improvement as aforesaid, and

Whereas, Council heretofore by Ordinance No. 1004 duly passed January 4th, 1915, duly issued bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments levied for said street improvement as aforesaid in the sum of Forty-One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($41,500.00); and

Whereas, it is deemed necessary at this time to levy special assessments for said improvement.

Now, therefore, be it ordained by the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, three-fourths of the whole number elected thereto being present and concurring:

Section 1. That to pay the portion of the cost and expense heretofore determined to be specially assessed for the improvements hereinabove described there be and there hereby is levied and assessed the sum of Four and 05-100 Dollars ($4.05) per foot front upon the following described lots and lands, to-wit: all lots and lands bounding and abutting upon the proposed improvement, namely all lots and lands bounding and abutting on Liberty Street from the southwesterly corner of the Park in a southerly direction to the southerly corporation line of said City, which said lots and lands hereby are determined to be specially benefited by said improvement.

Section 2. That said assessments so levied shall be paid in Twenty (20) semi-annual installments, with interest on deferred payments at Five (5) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, provided that the owner of any property assessed may, at his option, pay such assessment, or any part thereof, in cash within thirty (30) days from the passing of this assessing ordinance.

Section 3. That if during any year before the maturity of said bonds the income from said assessments as levied is not sufficient to set aside the necessary sum to meet both the interest on said bonds and the principal of such of said bonds as shall mature in any one year, that there be and there hereby is levied on all of the taxable property of the City of Painesville [illegible] to all other [illegible] duce an amount [illegible] between the [illegible] of special [illegible] necessary [illegible] the interest [illegible] cipal of such [illegible] year.

Kirtland

Ezra Thompson, who spent the winter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, left last Friday to return to Washington, where he has a fine apple orchard.

Mrs. A. P. Squires, who entered the hospital in Salem for treatment more than a week ago, is convalescing. Her two daughters, Adelaide and Marcella, are in Salem also.

Miss Lucinda Carroll is spending several weeks with cousin, Mrs. A. Carroll, in Painesville.

Mrs. Wm. Martin will entertain the W. C. T. U. Tuesday, March 9th. It will be an all day meeting with a light picnic lunch. Everyone invited.

Stevie Johnson, who has been quite ill most of the winter, has been gaining during the past two weeks and the doctors now think that they can give him permanent help.

Master Lawrence Hunkin has been ill for a week past, but is now able to be out again.

Mrs. C. C. Markell was the guest of Cleveland friends several days last week.

After several weeks spent with her sister and brothers, Mrs. Ray Bechtol returned to the city last Sunday.

A. E. Bechtol who is to move onto a farm near Little Mountain soon, will dispose of his stock, farm tools, etc. at a sale to be held Thursday, March 11th.

Mr. Payson Clapp has been confined to the house with rheumatism for five or six weeks and is still unable to do any work.

Clyde Allen is to begin the seasons work on his boat some time this week.

Erla Huntington has left town for a few days to attend the funeral of his cousin, Mr. Critchat, in Huntsburg.

After spending a few weeks with her parents at Riverside, Miss Olive Eville left Sunday to stay a while with her friend Mrs. West of Perry.

Two foxes were seen on the Halle farm one day last week.

The old Metcalf house now occupied by the Baker family and Mrs. Gill and two children, caught fire from the chimney last Sunday, and considerable damage was done before the blaze could be extinguished. The contents of the house were all saved.

Mrs. Perry Johnson spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Sanborn, and Mr. Johnson was a Sunday guest, both returning to the city Sunday evening.

Mrs. Althea Sanborn and Mrs. Wm. Thompson were the guests of Mrs. L. B. Sanborn last Thursday.

Dan Sanborn, who has been in poor health all winter, received little help from the new doctor who is endeavoring to take up the work of Dr. Reese, in Youngstown.

It is to be regretted that so few availed themselves of the opportunity to hear Miss Rutledge, who gave an interesting address at the Town Hall last Saturday. Dr. Russell, presiding officer, was also listened to with much pleasure and Mrs. Whitmore and Mrs. Hess furnished excellent music.

During the past month Kirtland has been in the grip of the "grippe." Probably half of the population could be grouped in three classes, convalescents, worst stages and just coming down with it. Mr. and Mrs. F. Millard, Mrs. E. Eville, Mrs. Ada Markell, Jay Kingsley, and O. Chapman have been promoted to the first class, while A. P. Squires, Miss Jennie Eville, Ed Eville, Herbert Chapman and others are present sufferers. We hope that there are not many in the third class and that during the reign of gentle (?) March, winter ailments will be forgotten and grippe will become a back number.

John Sperry was not able to attend his brother's funeral but is improving at this writing.

Rev. Bosworth is failing slowly but surely.

Maynard Squires 9c sale was so popular that most of the goods purchased for a week's sale were disposed of in two days, and he has been obliged to duplicate his orders for 9c merchandise.

The Sunday School convention at the Little Mountain Church last Sunday was largely attended by workers from the neighboring schools as well as members of the Mountain church. After a brief but interesting address by Rev. Crawford, Miss Becker, Miss Harrison and other speakers gave helpful talks on some of the important Sunday School problems.

Earl Logan of Pittsburg, who has been with his parents for the past two weeks, was joined by his wife and children last Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Logan intend to make their home in Lake County.

Mrs. F. S. Allen was confined to her bed all last week but is improving and hopes to be up in her wheel chair soon.

Max Allen is recovering from a severe attack of sore throat which required the attendance of Dr. Ingersoll twice last week.

Proper Treatment for Biliousness.

For a long time Miss Lula Skelton, Churchville, N. Y., was bilious and had sick headache and dizzy spells. Chamberlain's Tablets were the only thing that gave her permanent relief. Obtainable everywhere.

ALLIES DECLARE A GENERAL BLOCKADE

British Britain and France Retaliate for Germany's Submarine Warfare.

NEUTRAL UNITED STATES IS THEIR ACTION

Protest Note Says They Would Hold Themselves at Liberty to Seize All Shipping Destined To or Originating With Germany.

Washington, O. C.—Notification by Great Britain and France of a general maritime blockade of Germany occurred tonight the United States government and American industries been in force with one of the gravest crises in the history of the nation. The authorities of the five allied nations handed to ambassador Page a note in which they declare they hold themselves at liberty to seize all shipping destined to or originating with Germany and to inform. The consumption nothing necessary of cargoes on the part of the allies for the subsequent warfare against the commerce of Germany was delivered to Secretary Bryan by the French and British ambassadors here.

Statement of Allies' Position

The statement of the allies' position follows:

Germany has declared that the English channel, the north and west coasts of Ireland and the entire area around the British Isles are a war zone and has officially notified that all merchant ships found in that zone will be destroyed and that neutral vessels will be exposed to danger.

This is to effect, a violation of rights without regard to the safety of the crew or passengers, any merchant vessel under any flag. As it is held in the power of the belligerent all liberty to maintain any enemy crew and passengers, and property to be delivered by otherwise upon.

The law and custom of nations in regard to effective and legitimate blockades presumed that the first duty of the captor of a merchant vessel is to bring it before a prize court, where it may be tried by the ordinary courts. Its cargoes may be delivered only where neutrals may recover their property.

The abolition of prizes is in itself a concession to be accepted by neutrals in extraordinary circumstances and after provision has been made for the safety of all the crew or passengers.

If there are passengers on board the responsibility for discontinuance between neutral and enemy vessels and neutral property on board an enemy vessel, with the exception of ships, where dirt it is in verity, the crew and character of the vessel and cargo and to preserve all papers on board are essential, especially in relation to the legitimate duty of searching for and seizing contraband of war, that vessels, whether neutral or enemy, an obligation upon neutral ships.

Order to Retaliation Measures

"It is upon this basis that all prize cases discussion of the law by neutrals and belligerents has been proceeded. A German submarine, however, failing none of these obligations, has declared the local commander of the waters in which she operates; she does not take her capture within the jurisdiction of a prize court, she sorties as prize crew, she does not take the crew of the prize, she sees an effective means of discriminating between a neutral and an enemy vessel; she does not resolve on board for safety the crew and passengers of the vessels she sinks, but methods of warfare are therefore contrary to the recognized rules of international customs requiring operations against commerce in time of war. The German defense also defies international destruction for military purposes of neutral property, including neutral public property, neutral and non-combatant crews with the avowed aims of preventing commerce illicit of all kinds, including food for the civil population, from reaching or leaving the British Isles or northern France.

The opponents are therefore driven to invoke retaliatory measures against the enemy's navigation, and the measures of why first from reasonings or necessity.

"Where necessary will, British and French governments, or other nations, to be forced to take such measures, to enforce or to control or non-commercial and to enter observance of the rules of blockade of towards.

"Great Britain and French governments with the assurance, not intended to deviate and take into part also provide the rights of personal property, Berlinism, ownership or crisis.

"Great Britain and France, neutral and enemy, to be, and the neutral observance in time to endeavor to be, the. The interests of neutral commerce which have suffered from the war, and the effect."

Lands Death Crew to U. S.

New York, Feb. 11.—The American bag which flew over the incendiary bombs employed by a French cruiser yet taken into Brest, has been hauled down and the crew of the vessel, which arrived in another port, has been landed in New York, according to information received here today. A message from Capt. McDougal of the Dacia to Edward N. Breitung, the ship's agent, says the crew of the vessel, which left Brest, "arrived safely at Falmouth, England, and will be landed in New York this week and back after interview."

Three Die at Crossing.

Ashtabula, O., Feb. 11.—Three people were killed in Jefferson, a village about twenty miles south of Ashtabula, when an interurban car of the Ashtabula, Jefferson and Pennsylvania railroad was struck by a Pennsylvania passenger train at a crossing in the village. The dead are Mrs. William C. Storey, Miss Elizabeth Kolb and Indicts Steamship Line and Five Men.

Miss Ruth Hayes has a position in the Willoughby library.

Mrs. Laura Grover and granddaughter, Cordia, of Akron, have been visiting Mrs. Emma Nott.

ONE ON CODE

Out Mentor way they're telling a pretty good one on Tom Code, the genial East Mentor P. M. Code decided on Thursday to attend a "public sale" south of Mentor and with one of the men on his form, started out in a rig. Code knew the general location of the sale but was not informed as to tha exact place. The two men drove along until they reached a four corners. Here they inquired and found that the sale was "up to the next corner and turn to your left and drive along that road." They drove as directed and finally reached a house where a dozen or more rigs were hitched. The two man got out of the buggy, took the bridle off their horse, put on a halter, blanketed the animal and started towards the house. Before they reached the door they met another man in the yard. The man knew Coda. "Quite a number going to the sale today," said tha man, "I've seen several rigs go by." "Isn't this where the sale is?" asked Coda. "No," replied the man, "this is a funeral."

Our good looking post master seems to be in the lime light lately. We notice he was the champion shot at clay pigeons at Willoughby Monday, and he also attends sales. The following is taken from the "Mixer". We noticed tha same in the Cleveland Press too last night with a picture of Mr. Code that would keep the crows away.

The Mother's Club of Mentor Special District gave an entertainment for the community of the said district last Friday night. The Mentor M. E. Church orchestra was secured for the evening and they rendered some splendid music. The speaker for the evening being Prosecuting Attorney Geo. von Beseler, of Painesville, one may be certain that all the audience heard some very fine speaking. Mr. von Beseler is very enthusiastic over anything pertaining to school work having himself been a teacher many years. "Cooperation" seemed to he his text. Between teachers and parents, both of schools, Sunday Schools and Churches, all gave the closest attention. This was followed by songs from the primary grades and a little drama by them, a duet by Louis Markell and Chas. Cottrell, of the second grade, was much enjoyed. After this a fine supper was served by the Mother's Club. About one hundred and fifty people were present, showing the community are interested in their school and its work.

ORNAMENTAL LIGHTING SYSTEM AND CHANGE OF STREET LAMPS

In addition to the extraordinary expenditures above stated, a bond issue of $5,000.00 was provided by Council, the proceeds of which were used in the installation of the Ornamental Lighting System and in the purchase of 400 C. P. Nitrogen Filled Lamps to replace the street arcs which had been in use for several years. The cost of the Ornamental Lighting System cannot be stated exactly from last years figures, as some bills were unpaid on Jan. 1st. It was however approximately $4200.00 aside from the lamps themselves. The cost of the Nitrogen Filled Lamps to replace the arcs as above stated, was $4.94 each.

The total investment in the plant, as stated above, is based upon bonds issued for its construction and for additions and improvements made to it; but some other improvements and extensions to the distributing system have been made from the receipts from sale of current.

The foregoing financial statement shows the transactions of the Electric Light Department for the year 1914. In connection therewith, it is worthy of note that the city paid for the lighting of the City Hall, the Fire Engine House and the Police Station. All lighting of streets and parks was furnished to the city by the Electric Light Department without payment, aside from the amount indirectly paid through the Sinking Fund. Estimated at prices generally charged for such service, the Electric Light Plant furnished to the city $4747.28 more service than it was paid for. This is not just to the Electric Light Plant, or to its consumers, but it makes us wonder how the city would light the streets, if it did not own the plant. In connection with this matter, I wish also to call your attention to the fact that there are now in service on the streets and alleys, 222 street lights of various capacities, including the ornamental Lighting System. This is more than twice the number of lights in use previous to the construction of the present electric light plant. Yet there are calls for quite a number of additional lights. In all probability, it will be wiser in the future to use lamps of smaller capacity, and to place them nearer together on the streets, thereby making the illumination more uniform.

Before closing this report, we must bring to your attention the fact that more power will soon be much needed for the operation of tha Electric Light Plant. During the year just closed, the number of consumers has increased from 612 to 910, an increase of almost 50%. There are now in service at the Electric Light Plant, two power units, the smaller one consists of 200 H. P. Engine direct connected to a 100 K. W. Generator. The larger power unit consists of a 386 H. P. Engine direct connected to a 225 K. W. Generator. There are three 150 H. P. Boilers in service. Some months ago our connected load reached the point where the larger power unit could not pull it. During the period of long dark hours, both power units were needed to handle the peak load. This situation makes it necessary that we should consider the installation of another power unit in the near future. In our judgment, this should be provided and ready to operate before the next November when the long dark hours will again tax the plant to its full capacity. We recommend to the council that this question receive early and careful consideration at your hands.

Respectfully submitted,

CHESTER HARD,
Superintendent of the Electric Light Department.

MARTIN A. TUTTLE,
Director of Service.

Bill's In Trouble

I've got a letter, parson, from my son away out west, an my ol' heart is heavy as an anvil in my breast. To think the boy whose future I had once so proudly planned, should wander from the path of right and come to such an end! I told him when he left us only three short years ago, he'd find himself a-plowin' in a mighty crooked row—he'd miss his father's counsel, an' his mother's prayers, too, but he said the farm was hateful an' he guessed he'd have to go. [illegible]

ster in the West, but I believed that our Billy had the courage to resist; an' when he left I warned him of the ever-waitin' snares, that lie like hidden sarpents in life's pathway everywheres. But Bill he promised faithful to be keerful, an' allowed he'd build a reputation that 'd make us mighty proud; but it seems as if my counsel sort of faded from his mind, and now the boy's in trouble of the very wust kind. His letters come so seldom that I somehow sorter knowed that Billy was a-trampin' on a mighty [illegible]

[illegible] Denver, an' the story's mighty short. I just can't tell his mother, it 'd break her poor ol' heart; an' so I reckon, parson, you might break the news to her— Bill's in the legislature; but he doesn't say what fur.

Have You Named Your Farm?

The movement to have every American farmer select a name for his farm and use the name as a trade mark, is meeting with great success in some parts of the country. Many of our exchanges have published lists of the names selected for the farms of their neighborhoods, the publication acting as a sort of a patent or copyright. It has been said by some unthinking persons that the plan is not American, but a little reflection will convince anyone that the point is not well taken. Washington called his home "Mt. Vernon," Jefferson, Jefferson, the great democrat, named his place "Monticello" and any schoolboy can give you a dozen other instances.

So name your farm and put the name out where everyone can see it. Make it a Trade Mark. A well known, advertised trade mark is worth thousands of dollars to the owner. Your farm and its products are your stock in trade. Name them and you have added reel hard cash value to everything you sell. Choose a name well suited to surroundings, a name that will tell in its very sound some of the characteristics of your business home; then come to us and have letterheads made for your correspondence with the name of your form on them and your name and your wife's name and your postoffice address beneath. Of course you want your wife's name on your stationery. She is your partner and the best and the truest, and the hardest working, and the most interested party in the whole concern.

Will Flush the Streets

At Monday night's council meeting an ordinance was passed to appropriate funds to convert one of the sprinkling wagons into a street flusher.

This flusher will cost only a small amount and will more than pay for itself the first year in the saving of labor in cleaning. The sweeper will be used only in the spring when the streets are very dirty and at other times the flusher will remove not only the dirt but the dust as well.

Keep Off The Bridges

Persons caught walking across the C. P. & A. and C. P. & E. bridges will be arrested. There has been little trouble about trespassing at the Painesville bridge but at Willoughby a number of people have been using the trolley bridge as a foot bridge. As this is a violation of the company's rules and a menace to the lives of those who do the walking, the company is planning to put a stop to the dangerous practice. This is in

To The Fruit Growers in This Section

The wide-awake growers in this section, and in fact all sections of the fruit-growing country are realizing the fact that something must be done to exterminate the White Grub, and to stamp out all Fungus diseases, Ulcers and Sour Sap caused by the inoculation of the poisoned bark tissues.

What does this mean to you and your fine orchard? It means just this. Money, Time and Labor gone. And your land depreciates in value, and all hope gone.

Mr Grower we must be up and doing! The time has come. Get out of the old RUT; get down to real Bark Culture. Learn how to treat your trees, give them the care they deserve. They will reimburse you ten-fold for your trouble. Put forth every effort available to clean up your trees; study the necessary wants in Bark Culture. Your success depends greatly on this solution.

We have formulated a preparation known as "KILO-GRUB," a carbolized-pine-tar compound. Insecticide and Fungicide for ALL bark troubles, Grubs, etc.; we are introducing this solution to our brother fruit growers this season in demonstrating quantities. Since we have complied with all the Insecticide and Fungicide laws of the State of Ohio, and we have been granted a license to manufacture and to offer for sale to all growers, we are asking co-operation in this work. Give this solution a fair trial and report on same this fall.

A BIG ATHLETIC EVENT IS PLANNED AT FAIRPORT

A championship wrestling match will be held at Fairport Thursday evening, March 11, at which time Art Stange, idol of Painesville and Fairport will go onto the mat with George Garrin of Cleveland.

These two whirlwinds are matched to wrestle to a finish at 145 pounds, catch-as-catch-can style, best two in three, winner to take 30 per cent and loser 20 per cent of the total receipts of the evening.

Stange is without doubt the best grappler in this part of the country, and Garrin is one of the cleverest wrestlers the Sixth City has ever produced, and the match promises to be a humdinger from start to finish.

There will be two other good matches and music will be furnished by the Fairport Military Band, under the leadership of Jacob Schwarm.

KILLED BY STREET CAR

Arthur Weed of Mentor, Fatally Injured Saturday Night.

Arthur Weed, 40, employed at Mentor, died in Painesville Hospital Sunday morning as the result of injuries received by being struck by the limited car which arrives at Painesville at 7 p. m.

The accident occurred near the home of H. W. Shulters, east of Mentor. The car rounded the curve at this point and a man was seen walking east in the center of the tracks. Motorman Ed. Reed applied the brakes and blew his whistle but the man paid no attention, the car striking him with great force and hurling him to the side of the track.

Motorman Reed and Conductor Fitzsimmons placed the injured man on the car and at Painesville he was removed to the hospital. Physicians were hastily summoned but Weed had been injured internally besides receiving several broken bones and died without regaining consciousness.

Weed was single and made his home at Corry, Pa., to which place his body was shipped. A sister, Mrs. Fred Charman, resides at Stop 69 and another sister in Mentor.

Why the Needof 88 Counties?

As a result of the growing agitation for reduced public expenditures, an interesting suggestion has been made of a proposed re-grouping of Ohio counties, with possibly a consolidation of various counties. It is pointed out that for operating expenses alone, 85 counties in Ohio spent $19,500,000 in 1913. None of this amount, so far as can be ascertained, went for public improvements all was for administration.

It is asked: "Why 85 counties?" and suggested that 44 counties might answer. Furthermore, it was suggested that 25 counties might do as well. Further more, it was suggested that there was nothing sacred about the boundary lines of the 88 counties; that the old motives, political, racial, and those relating to business rivalries, religious sects and topography, as well, had out-lived their usefulness over a generation ago.

It is shown that there is no uniformity in the counties now existing; they all differ in population, area and wealth.

That the present 88 county seats should all be retained because of their view of the fact that only a few of the seats are centrally located—ten of them are on boundry lines—and furthermore, that with almost any three four or five counties grouped into one new county with a government seat near its center, that seat would be much more accessible to the population of the entire five-county groups in this day of rapid transportation and communication than was the county seat of any one of the five counties to the parts of its own county years ago, when boundary lines were laid out, and there were no steam or electric railways, telephones, telegraphs and fast mails.

The consolidation of counties, it appears from the constitution, is possible through action of the legislature, followed by a vote of the people from operation expense, "needlessly duplicated non-productive labor in court houses." This money, it is pointed out, could well be devoted to stimulating agriculture, flood protection, education or other causes.

Although all the present counties differ in wealth, area and property values, all maintain the same office organization; all have the same number of elected officials. Although millions of dollars have been spent in municipal research, designed to bring about business-like government in cities, little or nothing has been done toward reform or even change in county government.

No propoganda ever has been advanced looking toward the elimination of a fraction of the partisanship which prevails in county government.

While the proposition, or rather suggestion, is new and perhaps seems ultra-radical at first thought, it is well worthy the time for consideration by citizens of the state generally, in that it appears to point the way to genuine and great economy.

Honor the Flag.

Superintendents of schools have received a letter from J. A. Stamhaugh of Alliance, department patriotic instructor of the Grand Army of the Republic, of which the following is a copy:

"Some of the schools in your county do not display the United States flag, as required by the school laws of Ohio. It is my duty as the department patriotic instructor of the Grand Army of the Republic to call the attention of these school authorities to such matters. May I ask that you see that a United States flag is displayed on or near all school houses in your county on suitable days during all school sessions?

"Love of country and respect for our flag is a very important lesson to teach to the boys and girls of America."

Stole Bones Worth Ten Bones

According to an affidavit filed by A. W. Barnes, "John Doe" and "Richard Roe" visited his place on March 3rd and carried away a load of bones which he valued at $10.

Barnes did not know the right names of the men but the officers succeeded in locating two Painesville fellows who answered the descriptions and they were arrested and taken before Justice Lloyd Wyman. The case was continued for a few days and the young fellows may escape a jail sentence by paying for the property taken besides settling a fine and costs.

It is claimed the bones were disposed of to a Painesville business man.

Ready for Ready

Efforts are being made by attorneys in St. John, New Brunswick, to locate Hugh J. Ready, 50, and his brother, James T. Ready, 40, sole heirs to a big estate left to them upon the death of their father. Mayors of various cities in Ohio have been asked for information about the brothers, who are thought to be in this state.

Died at Geneva

Edward J. Rankin former clerk at the Cowles House in Painesville, passed away Sunday at the home of his sister, Mrs. F. J. Hoffner in Geneva. Mr. Rankin was 56 years of age and has been connected with a number of hotels in northern Ohio. The cause of death was paralysis.

Damages for Injury

Fannie Pandi, who sued the C. P. & E. for $25,000 damages, has received a judgment for $800. The plaintiff was injured on December 26 when she was thrown from the steps of one of the company's cars.

Six Die in One Day

Geneva, with a population of about 2,500, had six deaths within the short space of fourteen hours. Mrs. George Cone, John Hazelton and Mrs. Philip Locke died as the result of operation. Asa Fifield, well known in Painesville, died of hardening of the arteries; Mrs. Mary Wire, 92, of senility; E. J. Rankin of paralysis.

Car Starts Two Ways.

Pat Lynch's Fairport "Jitney" played a joke on him Tuesday morning when it split the switch at Main and St. Clair streets. The front end of the car was headed for the Nickel Plate while the rear trucks were on their way to the "Hump." The car did not leave the rails and the accident tied up traffic only a short time.

VULCAN CREDITORS TO MEET IN CLEVELAND

Liabilities Considerably Exceed Assets, but Company Hopes to Continue.

Creditors of the Vulcan Car Company have received notice that on March 6 the company filed schedules and a list of creditors, preliminary to making an offer of compensation to creditors.

Referee A. F. Ingersoll could not be reached by phone Wednesday but from another source it was learned that the assets of the company amount to $44,048.77, while the liabilities total $156,619.59.

A meeting of the creditors will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning, March 19, at the offices of Referee Ingersoll in Cleveland at which place and time the creditors may attend, prove their claims, examine the bankrupt's officers, consider the offer of compensation and transact other business.

Officials of the Vulcan Company state that they are preparing a letter showing in full all matters pertaining to the concern and that this will be sent out to the creditors during the coming week.

FIRST CLASS POSTOFFICE

After July 1 Painesville will be Advanced to Highest Class

Painesville has had a first-class postmaster for a number of months and now is to have a first class office. The next logical move will be to have a first class federal building to correspond.

In spite of war, business depression and all "them things" the receipts of the Painesville postoffice have crept steadily upward during the past year until they have reached a point where the office passes from the second into the first class. It takes $40,000 worth of business a year to give an office this rating and Painesville will run close to $43,000 in the official year which closes March 31.

July 1 is the date the official change takes place but Postmaster Carroll and his associates are already receiving congratulations. There will be a little advance in salary for all employes under the new rating and a first class office is always in line for a government building.

Painesville postoffice for the past eight years has shown an annual gain of from two to three thousand dollars a year.

Nothing New in Hoof and Mouth.

Recent developements in the new outbreak of disease among cattle, its close proximity and the fact that it is considered the worst outbreak in the United States, creates new and intensive interest among cattle owners around here.

Many questions have been asked and have remained unanswered, among interested stock owners. Some of the information not generally given out may be found here.

When stock is found infected with the disease and ordered slaughtered one appraiser is appointed by the owner of the stock and one by the state inspector, both local men and familiar with stock's value, and these two men value the stock as soon after they are condemned as possible. If the two men cannot agree, the owner may choose the third appraiser and the appraisal of these three is final.

This would seem to be absolutely fair to the owner. The appraised value is paid half by the state and half by the Federal authorities.

A good round value is expected to be allowed owners of condemned cattle, but pedigrees are not paid for; cows are valued as dairy cattle as a rule, but the inspectors do not take into account the registry of stock. All expense of slaughtering, digging the trench for burial and all material or property used or destroyed on a farm in quarantining it, is paid for by the state; the labor of teams and men furnished by the farmer in this work is paid for.

After infected stock has been slaughtered, the barns and sheds must be thoroughly disinfected.

A farmer or stock owner cannot begin re-stocking for 60 days. At the end of that period he can put 4 cows and 4 hogs on his premises—and no more.

These will be inspected once a week for three weeks, and if at the end of these three weeks the disease does not re-appear, the owner of the premises can again stock up as he pleases.

The "Jitney" Invasion.

All that is required to be a transportation magnate now is to own a Ford car. In nearly all of the large and many of the small cities the "jitney" bus is cutting into the profits of the street car companies and making owners of autos rich. When it was at first suggested that owners of machines could make any money carrying passengers for a five cent fare it was thought to be impossible. A few, wiser than the rest, started "jitney" lines with their machines. It has been demonstrated in San Francisco that the owner of a car can clear from six to ten dollars a day by carrying passengers at the "jitney" rate. In most of the cities these busses follow the routes of the regular street cars and are making trips on regular schedules. A "jitney," by the way, is a nickle. [illegible]

A HORSE THIEF CAUGHT

An Incident of the Long Ago, With a Bit of History of the Paine Clan.

By A. G. Smith

Hendrick E. Paine was an early settler in the township of Leroy (once called Chestarfield) at a place that has since been known as "Paine's Hollow" through which flows a stream of considerable importance at least in the early days when water-powers were esteemed valuable assets. Close by the roadside Paine Creek here leaps over the rocky ledge and rapidly takes its way down a deep and narrow defile and discharges its flood into Grand River at a point just below Indian Point.

Mr. Paine was a man of energy and recognizing the value of a good and safe water privilege—built a sawmill at the falls and later on he erected a forge—equipped with power blast and heavy power hammers for the welding and shaping of great irons which otherwise could not be handled. Of the output of this enterprise we may easily suppose that much of it was consumed in the building of vessels, schooners, scows and other sailing craft in course of construction at the various harbors and inlets along the south shore of Lake Erie—for be it remembered this was long before the day of steamboats and monster steel freighters.

Here then in this sweet and picturesque valley surrounded by lofty hills and towering trees, Col. Paine established a home and reared his family of four boys and one girl all of whom I have known, and I now write from memory save and except a few unimportant dates.

Living in old Militia days Col. Hendrick and at least two of his sons greatly enjoyed military display and attained to official distinction taking prominent part in local drills and general training.

Eleazer A. Paine a graduate of West Point became General of our local militia and in 1837 took part in quelling a murderous outbreak of the Seminole Indians under the instigation and leadership of the famous Chief Osceola.

Returning from the arduous campaign in the Everglades he opened a law office in Painesville and later on, in those exceeding dull and moneyless days, taught a term at the "Little Red School House" near Wilson's Corners in Concord township—a modest temple of high academic grade and which long ago disappeared together with all the ambitious boys and girls (saving a possible quartet including myself) who in "the Forties" sat within its narrow walls, wrestled with the higher mathematics and solemnly sought to resurrect some dismal verbs and nouns from the crypts of ancient Greece and Rome. Previous to 1860 Col. Hendrick Paine and nearly all his family became residents of Illinois—and both General Eleazer and Captain Ellsworth took part in the war of '61, and some years after the close of the war Capt. Ellsworth emigrated westward and became Chief of Police at Omaha, Nebraska.

It is well to remember that at this date the town was not far beyond the inhabited area of the great and growing west.

In the fall of 1866 General J. S. Casement signed a contract to do certain grading and the laying of rails for the Union Pacific R. R. and under his vigorous and systematic prosecution the roadbed soon stretched rapidly away from its eastern terminal.

In the meantime, the late James H. Paine, who was at headquarters in a clerical capacity sent word to his cousin, Captain Paine, that on a certain day he would appear at the home of the latter for a short visit.

So one weary day "Jimmy" as he was familiarly called took seat in a car which was expected to reach Omaha before dark, but for some cause it was quite late in the evening before reaching its destination—and he decided to spend the night at the Hotel and call at the house of his relative in the morning. The Chief suspecting the intent of his prospective guest quietly entered the noisy hotel lobby and seeing his cousin in a distant corner deeply absorbed in the daily news and approaching him unobserved grabbed him firmly by the collar with "Now sir you may consider yourself under arrest—come along!" said the Chief in firm peremptory voice. Jimmy strengthening for release gained his feet and for a minute or two the affair looked quite serious and warlike, commanding attention of all the hotel guests present. Then came a truce for lack of breath and Jimmy capitulated and being permitted by his captor to step up to his room for his handbag, disappeared, closing the door after him. "Who was that feller and what's been doin'?" called the Landlord across the lobby. "A d——d horse thief sir, and a bad one," replied the Chief. "I thought he looked like one of them fellers," remarked the Landlord, anxious to exploit his skill in reading strange faces at sight. "He won't get away from me this time continued the Chief as he strode anxiously past and through the door as if to keep an eye on his slippery prisoner. Presently the cousins reappeared arm in arm and halting at the office the Chief assuming the dignity of a diplomat was heard to say "Landlord allow me to present my cousin Captain James H. Paine late head of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., now with Gen. J. S. Casement out on the Road."

Then the storm broke and with shouts and loud guffaw the uproar began—and the noisy crowd by a common impulse armed with suggestive smiles and left-handed compliments drifted toward the cigar stand at the right-hand of the blushing victim of an indiscreet, utterance of patronizing import. In the midst of the loud hilarity the host with his guest left for home, each with a chuckle in his throat that would not down.

In reciting this little episode several years before his death (1910) he strongly intimated a beggarly account of empty boxes wherein had lain a regiment of good "ten-centers" adding that never before had he suspected that "he looked like one of them fellers."

Wants Good Roads.

Thompson has made a move for good roads. At a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of citizens held there on Tuesday evening of last week, it was decided to build an improved road from Thompson Center north to Madison township line this year. Bonds will be issued.

The Holiday.

Come let us hike away,
Leaving work behind.
Rocks, and stumps and muddy clay
Hedgerows, briars, win-rowed hay
We will greet them all today
With a grateful mind.
Sweet the raindrops in the face
Sweet the rough wind's lack grace.
Dear each unfrequented place
Which our feet may find.
Underneath a lonely pine
We'll not tarry here to dine
Just a moment to unpack
And devour a little snack;
Then tramping on again
Thro' wet wood and soggy lane
Here's where shank's horses gain.
You can call it hike or pike
It's the kind of thing we like,
We are men.
Homeward plodding through the storm,
Splashed and weery, wet and warm.
How we've verified the plan
Nature laid out for a man.
That's to hope to be content
And struggle with each element.

Legislature Threatens All Municipal Lighting Plants

Again, it is the municipal electric light plants! A bill has been introduced into the legislature which it is claimed will prevent municipal light plants from selling current at low rates. This bill requires that in addition to all other expenses which are enumerated, the plants must pay a five per cent dividend on the investment, otherwise they shall not be allowed to run. That is, if a city plant were selling current at a rate paying the four per cent interest bonds represented by the investment and the city wished not to make any profit but merely to pay this four per cent interest it could not do so, but would be compelled to [illegible]

Fish Ponds on Every Farm to Cut the Cost of Food

One-acre fish ponds on every farm big enough to hold one is the way members of the American Fisheries Society think that part of the problem of the high cost of living could be solved.

This is a project which many fish culturists would like to see advanced as a tribute to the memory of the late Professor L. L. Dyche.

Although little known to the general public, Professor Dyche, who was connected with the University of Kansas, did much in his lifetime to introduce food fish and to increase the supply in all parts of the United States.

The one-acre fish pond, which was his favorite scheme, is usually six to seven feet deep. It is furnished with certain vegetation, stocked with various kinds of life and with fish of the kinds which would [illegible] under the reigning conditions of climate and environment. The economy is due to the fact that no food is required for the fish, because the pond is so balanced that all denizens find their appropriate diet.

The experimental pond which the professor had at the University of Kansas was started in 1910. The 10,000 yearling fish with which the pond began business consisted of black bass, blue gill, sunfish, bullhead catfish, hickory shad and German carp. About 6,000 more were placed in this pond in 1911 and 1912.

In getting the pond in commission there was some feeding of chopped liver and of cornmeal. The taking out of the fish began in 1913. The 10,000 originally placed there [illegible]

Vessels Suffer No Serious Damage From Shots—Russians and Germans Engage in New Battle on Bank of Vistula.

London, England.—The batteries in three forts—Dardanus, Roumeli Medjidieh Tabia and Hamidieh I Tabia—defending the narrows of the Dardanelles have been silenced. The reduction came as a climax of two days' bombardment by some of the most powerful ships of the Franco-British fleet. Official announcement of this fact was made by the British admiralty Monday night. Five of the ships of the allied fleet were struck by Turkish shells during the attack, but no serious damage was done to any of them. One of the ships struck was the superdreadnought Queen Elizabeth.

New Battle in the East.

The bombardment of the Dardanelles by the allies, which is primarily responsible for the present situation in Greece, has had its effect also on other nations. London dispatches say the Bulgarian premier has promised a statement concerning his government's position. Public opinion in Italy also is aroused, although there are no indications that this nation will change its policy of armed neutrality at this time.

The center of interest on the eastern battle front again has shifted with the announcement from Petrograd that a great battle is developing on the left bank of the River Vistula at a point to the east and also to the southwest of Warsaw.

It is not yet clear, judging from messages reaching London, which side has taken the offensive, but inspired sources both in Berlin and Petrograd have been hinting lately that vital operations might well be expected in this region.

Messages from the Russian capital have declared the old field of action in the direction of Posen and Silesia alone could serve as the decisive battle ground, while Berlin has been predicting another brilliant action in the direction of Warsaw by Field Marshal von Hindenburg.

Efficiency Engineer Urges State Lawmakers to Cut Salaries of Many Employes Laboring in the Department

Columbus, O.—Complete organization of the force employed by the state public utilities commission, the removal of ten employes of the commission and a reduction in salaries for several more was recommended to the Howard legislative investigating committee by K. McKinley, efficiency engineer.

McKinley reported the commission has 79 salaried employes and one per diem employe, the total expense being $157,610 a year. He found fault with the rooms the commission occupied, the way its staff works, and the results accomplished. He has in mind a plan of reorganization, which, if adopted, will save the state about $25,000 a year.

Senators Howard and Moore, who constituted the committee, took the suggestion seriously, decided to call members of the utilities commission in and ask them to co-operate with McKinley.

The commission occupies quarters in the new First National Bank building in this city, taking up most of three floors. McKinley says the quarters are not properly designed. He suggested all clerical help be brought together. Reading from his elaborate blue print Mr. McKinley recommended the elimination of the following employes: Railroad expert, who receives $6 a day when he works; railroad appraisal clerk, $1,800 a year; one telephone attendant, $600; one legal department clerk, $1,500; tariff clerk of the rates and service department, $2,000; one assistant telephone expert, $2,100; passenger train service inspector, $3,000; two stenographers, $1,200; electrical engineer, $2,500; railroad inspector, $1,500.

Then he asked for the following reductions in salaries: Docket and index clerk from $1,500 to $1,200; journal clerk, $1,300 to $1,200; stenographer, $1,200 to $900; telephone expert, ...

Senate May Pass Beitler Bill.

Abolition of district tax assessors and the turning over of their duties to county auditors seems now fairly well assured. Although it is true that the Beitler bill, which provides this change, has gone only through the lower house of the general assembly, the indications are that the senate majority is ready to accept the proposal. The fact that the lower branch was able to attach to the Beitler measure an emergency clause which will make it immediately operative, if the senate does the same, indicates that up to the present time the Republican forces have not been divided, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The threatened split of the Hamilton county delegation has not come, and unless it does it looks as if the Republicans will be able to do almost anything they desire. The Beitler measure is the first blow of the Republicans at the so-called Coe-Warnes law, which gave the state tax commission its present authority to name district or county tax assessors. The Beitler bill plans to substitute the county auditors for these district assessors until the big tax decentralizing bill shall have become operative next year.

Salaries of State Employes Overdue.

There is keen financial distress among countless scores of state employes, the direct result of the fact that "the ghost" is now more than a week overdue in its semi-monthly walking among the public servants. And the inability of the welcome spirit to promenade is due to the delay of the assembly in getting through the short period appropriation bill. If the house had had a quorum the other day the state officials, attaches and employes would be all smiles, but the house didn't have a quorum and had to adjourn, leaving the finance bill in mid-air. In mid-air it still is, for the senate had put on amendments to the bill ...

Charge That President Is a Despot Is Futile.

Republican Press Unable to Point to a Single Instance of Intimidation of a Legislator by the Chief Executive.

Many presidents have purchased support in the house or the senate by the use of patronage. Mr. Wilson's bitterest opponent makes no such charge against him.

Certain presidents have sought to coerce recalcitrant members of congress by publicly attacking them. Mr. Wilson has done nothing like that.

Other presidents have tried to bring hostile senators and representatives into line by holding over their heads the power of the national organization and threatening them with defeat. No such indictment has been brought against Mr. Wilson.

More than one president has been accused of making deals with congressmen by which their support was obtained in consideration of executive approval of legislation in which they were interested. No accusation of that kind has been lodged against Mr. Wilson.

We are assured by a partisan Republican press that the president is a despot who rules the house with an iron hand, and that the senate has been engaged in desperate battle to maintain its independence against usurpation. But when? And how? And where?

What influence has President Wilson ever exerted upon congress except the influence of advice and counsel? What command does he exercise over ...

The situation with respect to the measure reached an acute stage during the afternoon session, when Senator E. O. Lloyd, of Franklin county, moved that the committee be relieved of further consideration. The matter was made a special order by a declaration by Lieut.-Gov. John H. Arnold that a secondary motion to defer by Senator John L. McDermott, of Trumbull, had been carried. Lines were immediately drawn for a battle royal on the floor.

WHAT CONGRESS DID FOR OHIO

Made Appropriation to Continue River Improvements and Gave Buckeye State a New Governor.

Washington, D. C.—What this congress did for Ohio:

Included some three and a quarter million dollars in the sundry civil appropriation bill for continuing improvements now in course of construction to the Ohio river.

Made Alfred G. Allen, of Cincinnati, a member of the ways and means committee.

Gave Stanley E. Bowdle, of Cincinnati a chance to court fame by an anti-suffrage speech and by introduction of a bill to tax fortunes of American heiresses who marry titled foreigners.

Did nothing on the Pomerene bill authorizing the governor of Ohio to give no longer serviceable national guard uniforms to the destitute striking miners of the state.

Gave Ohio a new governor—F. B. Willis resigning his seat in congress to accept the more conspicuous post.

Also gave Ohio a new judge, appointed by Gov. Cox, Congressman T. H. Ansberry quickly surrendering his seat to accept judicial honors.

Gave to Ohio its share of the $2,500,000 appropriation to reimburse owners of cattle slaughtered to check the spread of the hoof and mouth disease.

Made favorable report in the house on the bill by Congressman Fess, of Ohio, to establish a national university in the city of Washington.

APPLICATION OF LIME-SULPHUR MIXTURE

Timely Spraying Saves the First Crop.

Lime-sulphur wash is mainly a winter remedy, and the later in the winter the treatment is given the better, just so the work is finished before the buds open. It is injurious to young foliage and blossoms. If one is unavoidably delayed in using it and finds that he must treat the trees after the buds have opened, the application should be directed merely to the trunk and branches, and care should be used to touch as little as possible of the flowers, foliage or young fruit with it. When this care is used, it may be used as a remedy for San Jose scale even in summer.

Lime-sulphur wash is now the me... the late-winter application of bordeaux mixture. An excellent feature of the lime-sulphur wash is its general effect on the trees in removing moss, dead bark, etc. This will check the scale, if it should get started at any time, and would entirely prevent the scale from killing dozens or hundreds of valuable trees before it is discovered, as it often does.

Lime-sulphur has some disadvantages. It is somewhat troublesome to prepare and is destructive to spray pumps by reason of its corrosive action. This latter point should be provided against by purchasing pumps with all working parts, or all parts ...

TWO YEARS OF WILSON.

On the 5th anniversary of Lincoln's second inaugural, Woodrow Wilson complete half his presidential term.

Those two years of the Wilson administration have helped to make more history than any other two years since Lincoln. The coming two years of the Wilson administration must inevitably be the most momentous period that this country has known since the civil war.

It is of the greatest importance that this nation should elect to the White House a president who completely master of himself. Better master of himself, he is master of his party and of the administration.

There is no kitchen cabinet. There are no back-stairs advisers. There are no secret influences that pull and sway the policies of his executive. An underground wires run from the White House into Wall street or into the headquarters of any political committee. Men agree with Wilson or Wilson disagrees with him. They may like him or they may dislike him, but everybody knows that his and he alone is personally responsible. Never did during the remaining two years of his term he and he alone will be president.

A very unusual man, most so perhaps a very unusual situation in the affairs of mankind—a president who is all but without relations dangerous rather vastly our resentment, or anger nor personal antipathies. If he has friends, their friendship counts for nothing in the affairs of state. If he has enemies, their enmity weighs nothing in the affairs of government. He rests neither in reward the one nor in punish the other.

At this period in their first term such presidents have been carefully calculating their chances of renomination and reelection. Nobody knows whether Mr. Wilson intends to be a candidate for renomination and reelection or whether he will, as a member of Congress, can say of his knowledge that the president decline a reelection if he be would not refuse a renomination. We feel that he would not refuse a renomination if he thinks that the president would not stoop from principle to seek either a renomination or a reelection. That is where his great strength lies. That is where its great usefulness lies in the days ahead. It is easy to settle the other. It is easy to make the switch ring. It is easy to be spectacular and sensational and popular. It is easy to be a demagogue. It is easy to jingle with the Lodge of a nation. It is easy to be furious with the and day will blow forth. But it is not easy to be calm and restrained and judicial. It is not easy to face every responsibility without prejudice and without partisan. It is not easy to have strength in the line of first principles, regardless of applause or censure or praise or denunciation. It is not easy to be one when the world has given itself over to madness.

The enormous good fortune of the people of the United States in the times and scene of these moving days is that they have a president who is one—the cannot and today that is infuriated with the sensational and of government conflicts in civilization.—New York World.

WAR AND WHEAT

Joseph Leiter, on the witness stand the other day, said that the price of wheat was influenced by war and by the farmers. He held that the farmers were the greatest speculators in wheat, while war created a natural demand for its commodity. The farmers have certainly been holding wheat for higher prices, while war has been creating a demand for it. If, now, war upon the Dardanelles and shows ills parts of Germany and Austria, the farmer increasing supply and the latter curtailing the market. Mr. Leiter's comments may find support, besides Great Britain and France certainly cannot use all of Canada's wheat, and the supply exceeding the demand, the price must fall. It is a sure rule that does not work both ways.

The SCARLET PLAGUE by JACK LONDON

SYNOPSIS.

In a California valley an old man, age about 70, tells his story to a young man, who has come for therapeutic relaxation, in the story of the Scarlet Plague.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

Off down, Edwin continued gazing at Granser's all right. He's just settle in the Scarlet Death, don't you, Granser? Here you had just told us about it right now. He down. Here, Granser, take a pill.

Granser Cosgrove shaped the pills in his gritty knuckles and took up the tale in a tremulous, piping voice that was strengthened as he got the hang of his narrative.

"It was in the summer of 1918 that the plague came. I was sixty-seven years old, and will do I remember it, as though it happened yesterday.

"I was living near Beaverton, and Granser hoistered to me a month.

"We talked through the air in those days, thousands and thousands of miles. And the word came of a plague in Asia, and of a plague in Africa. There were millions and millions of people living then in the world, and they died by millions. Nobody thought anything about the news. It was only a newspaper story. There had been only a few deaths in America. The first case in America had died two days before I received the letter from my daughter-in-law, telling me of the disease was the turning out of the leaves of a book—a book of twenty-four leaves among the copper of the Rockefeller Institute. The man who died was a bacteriologist, and he was killed by his own germs. Nobody knew anything about the germs. It was only a month before that. There had been only a few deaths. It seemed, from what I read in the newspapers, that one of the first signs

Old Egypt Had Rag Dolls.

Strange discoveries were made by Prof. T. A. Whittemore of Tufts college while excavating in ancient Antinoe, Egypt, says the Boston Globe. A portion of his collection, just arrived, contains a scrubbing brush, a rag doll, a baby sock and over a hundred pairs of shoes, socks, boots, sandals, and other forms of footwear which show an almost incredible resemblance to present day styles.

He shows the first and oldest boot with eyelets ever discovered in Egypt. A party slipper is made of a fine grade of leather, ornamented with gold, red and black thread. It has a very elaborately carved piece of leather on the instep. The scrubbing brush which was discovered had a wooden base and bristles on both sides.

There is a rag doll with movable arms and a head of wood. And there is a toy horse, made of wood, and a toy spade, with a bone ornament attached.

Earth's Diameter.

What is the greatest diameter of the earth? "At the equator," is the common answer; this is not strictly true, for the actual diameter is modified by conditions on the surfaces. According to the eminent Professor Henkey, the greatest diameter is that taken from the summit of Mount Chimborazo, in Ecuador, 20,136 feet above sea level. The line drawn about the earth from this point emerges on the opposite side on a high point on the coast of Sumatra, giving a diameter of 7,929 miles.

Truly a Grasping Man.

"The graspin'est man I' ever knowed," said Uncle Jerry Peebles, "was an old chap named Snoopine. Somebody told him once that when he breathed he took in oxygen and gave out carbon. He spent a whole day tryin' to find out which of them two gases cost the most if you had to buy 'em. He wanted to know whether he was makin' or losin' money when he breathed."

To The Fruit Growers in This Section

The wide-awake growers in this section, and, in fact, all sections of the fruit-growing country are realizing the fact that something must be done to exterminate the White Grub, and to stamp out all Fungus diseases, Ulcers and Sour Sap caused by the inoculation of the poisoned bark tissues.

What does this mean to you and your fine orchard? It means just this: Money, Time and Labor gone. And your land depreciates in value, and all hope gone.

Mr. Grower, we must be up and doing! The time has come. Get out of the old RUT, get down to real Bark Culture. Learn how to treat your trees; give them the care they deserve. They will reimburse you ten-fold for your trouble. Put forth every effort available to clean up your trees, study the necessary wants in Bark Culture. Your success depends greatly on this solution.

We have formulated a preparation known as "KILO-GRUB," a carbolized-pine-tar compound, Insecticide and Fungicide for ALL bark troubles, Grubs, etc., we are introducing this solution to our brother fruit growers this season in demonstrating quantities. Since we have complied with all the Insecticide and Fungicide laws of the State of Ohio, and we have been granted a license to manufacture and to offer for sale to all growers, we are asking co-operation in this work. Give this solution a fair trial and report on same this fall.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY

Explains Official Attitude Toward Boxing Contests

It is my purpose from time to time, as occasion requires, to make clear my position on any matter which may arise in reference to law enforcement.

I might or I might not personally like to see a sparring contest. I might be of the opinion personally that it is or it is not in keeping with or conducive to good morals for such events to take place. My personal feelings in the matter have nothing at all to do with it.

Section 12802 of the General Code of Ohio is as follows:

"Whoever agrees to fight and wilfully fights or boxes at fisticuffs or engages in a public sparring or boxing exhibition without gloves or with gloves, or aids, assists or attends such boxing exhibition or glove fight, or being an owner or lessee of grounds, or a lot, building, hall or structure, permits it to be used for such exhibition or purpose, shall be fined not more than two hundred and fifty dollars or imprisoned not more than three months, or both."

It is not one of the duties of my office to make laws or to seek to change them, but I have a solemn oath, registered in the Court House, to enforce them as I find them. My only conception of public office is that it gives one an opportunity to be of service to one's community, and the first duty of the office of the prosecuting attorney is to see that the laws are reasonably and fairly obeyed.

There might be another reason perhaps, why the bout at Fairport was stopped. It was gotten up under the subterfuge of a wrestling match. This goes to show that the promoters themselves knew they were about to violate the law.

Some one says, however, that a wrestling contest is less to be desired than a sparring contest. Even if that be true, so far as I know there is no law making wrestling a misdemeanor. As to a wrestling contest therefore, the prosecuting attorney has no concern.

Some one else says, you are discriminating against Fairport because a short while ago, you permitted a sparring contest at Willoughby-on-the-Lake. I must confess that although perhaps I should have known about it, yet it was over before I had any knowledge of it. It is true, the promoters could then have been prosecuted, but I can not see that any great good would result from that.

Section 12803 of the General Code of Ohio is as follows:

"The next preceding section shall not apply to a public gymnasium or athletic club, or any of the exercises therein, if written permission for the specific purpose has been obtained from the sheriff of the county, or, if the exercises or exhibition are within the limits of a municipal corporation, from the mayor of such corporation."

This section clearly excepts contests held in a public gymnasium or an athletic club.

Whenever sparring contests, therefore, shall be promoted in Lake County legitimately and under the auspices of a bona fide athletic club, a permit first having been obtained from the sheriff, if without, and from the mayor, if within, a municipality, there will be no disposition on the part of the officers to interfere, because there no law will be violated.

Hereafter, therefore, until the law is changed, there can not be held anywhere in Lake County any sparring contest, with the consent of the prosecuting attorney and of the sheriff, unless in accordance with the law.

Respectfully submitted,
Prosecuting Attorney.

Contest Work for 1915

At a recent meeting of the County District School Superintendents it was decided to give credit in the agricultural work of the schools for satisfactory work done in the Boys' and Girls' Contests conducted by the Lake County Y. M. C. A. A committee was appointed to confer with Secretary Donnan regarding the number of credits to be given. It is hoped that this will create much interest on the part of the boys and girls in this work.

Contests this year will be held in the following: Poultry, Canned Fruit and Vegetables, Jellies, Potatoes, Onions, Corn, and Flowers. Many cash and valuable prizes will be given. Any one who does not receive an announcement from their school in the next few days write to County and Rural Secretary Ralph L. Dannan, Painesville, and you will receive the information, and enrollment blanks.

SAFETY FIRST TEACHER

Is Killed When He Fails to Heed Warning Signal

Railroad men saw fate's irony in the death Sunday of Eugene B. Cook, New York Central superintendent, who was fatally injured by a Belt line train at the foot of Cedar-rd hill, Cleveland.

Mr. Cook was known as an advocate of the safety first movement and often urged its principles upon the men of his division. But when he alighted from a train and started across tracks, he failed to notice the warning signal of a brakeman or the approach of another train, a precaution he had always taught others to take.

Mr. Cook was 46 years of age and formerly resided at Perry, being a son of the late Colonel Cook of that place. He had been with the Lake Shore for many years and was well known throughout Lake county. A wife and four sons survive.

Death of Kirtland Resident

Mrs. Harriett Foster, widow of the late Lucian Foster, passed away at her home in Kirtland, Friday afternoon. Mrs. Foster was eighty-four years of age and had been a highly respected resident of Kirtland for the past thirty years. She is survived by three sons, C. L. Wellar and F. A. Churchill of Kirtland and W. C. Wellar of Cleveland.

The funeral was held from the residence in East Kirtland Sunday afternoon and interment was made in Mentor cemetery.

More Money for School

Township Board of Education has passed resolutions for an additional bond issue of $4,000, the money to be used in the construction of the Nursery district school. Contracts for the construction of the building will be let early in May and it is expected that the building will be completed and ready for occupancy by the time the fall term of school opens.

Class Has Perfect Record

The seventh grade of Mentor Village schools has completed two consecutive months of perfect attendance, no absence nor tardiness.

The members of the class are: Raymond Lynch, Dana Church, Elsie Eddie, Margaret Horn, Agnes Eyer, Margaret Maloney and Florence Royer. Edith E. Shields, teacher.

Annual report of Painesville Public Library was read at council meeting Monday night. Affairs are in better shape than in the past, with a small working balance on hand in the treasury.

Total Liabilities	$156,244.61

The Vulcan management sent a copy of this report to the creditors accompanied by a letter which explains some of the items as follows:

The bond issue covers the real estate, buildings and fixtures, and the only available assets which can be utilized to satisfy general Creditors (whose claims aggregate $100,533.57) is the cash in the bank, $6,764.68, and the items of merchandise and bills receivable aggregating $12,447.59, a total of $19,212.27, barely sufficient to satisfy the expense of administration thus far in the proceeding in bankruptcy, and the preferred claims of $15,923.16, leaving, as will be seen at a glance, but little if anything, (under no circumstances to exceed 5%) for creditors, if an adjudication and liquidation is had finally in bankruptcy.

It is the desire of the stockholders of the Company, if possible, to perfect an arrangement by which we shall be able to offer to our creditors, payment in full of preferred claims and to general un-secured creditors a cash settlement of 15%. This amount will have to be furnished personally by the stockholders, in the hope that by so doing the business can be rehabilitated and by changed conditions and methods of operating, made a profitable one. With this in view, in the event of, a composition being effected, an effort will be made to reorganize the business and obtain new and sufficient capital to assure its success.

We are desirous of effecting the proposed composition with our creditors, thus making it possible for us to continue in business, and inasmuch as the amount which we are able to offer is much more than creditors could possibly realize from our assets, we hope for your co-operation, which be assured we shall appreciate.

COUNCIL HAS LONG MEETING

Paving Resolutions Passed and Other Legislation Started

Council decided Monday evening to pave Lusard street during the coming summer. A few property owners filed a protest against the improvement but the councilmen knew from past experience that if they waited until everyone was ready to improve the specifications would have to call for streets paved with gold instead of brick on a concrete foundation.

The C. P. & E. asked to be relieved from living up to its franchise on St. Clair street, claiming that half hour service does not pay and then asked the city to enter into another contract with the company for electric current. The street car matter was placed in the hands of the safety committee while the current project went over for future consideration.

Richmond street is to be paved from Erie to Prospect and three short lines of sewers are to be put in. The actual work on Richmond street will not be done until another year but the house connections, sewers, etc. will all be in this summer and the street given a chance to settle—the property owners having the same chance.

The second reading of the ordinance to issue bonds for improving the light plant brought forth no discussion and an ordinance defining the conditions under which electric wiring shall be done received its first reading.

City Engineer Downer had a plumbing code ready but when the members saw the size of the book they voted to adjourn and beat a hasty retreat.

Steal Bread and Cheese

Burglars entered H. M. Rand's store at Madison Sunday night after nearly destroying the front door and carried away four loaves of bread, some cheese, candy, figs, meat and cigars.

Two auger holes were bored in the front door to the postoffice, but the robbers failed to force an entrance. The job is believed to be the work of tramps.

PERRY AFTER SCHOOLS

Would Spend Forty Thousand for More and Better Buildings

The board of education of Perry, at a meeting held March 4, passed a resolution to submit to the voters of the district on March 24, the issue of bonds to the amount of $40.000 for the improvement of the schools.

Many of the present buildings are in poor condition, and within a very short time will need the expenditure of considerable money to put them in proper repair. The board of education feels that it is not good business to expend much money on old, poorly lighted and poorly ventilated buildings; and that they are only doing their duty to the citizens of Perry in giving them the privilege of voting on this matter.

The plan for improvement, in brief, is this. To construct a four-room building in the north end, at a place most suitable to bring together the four one-room schools of that section, the building and grounds to cost about $20,000; to erect a building at the center to replace the present one-room primary structures, and to give much needed additional room to the high school and upper grammar grades at a cost of about $10,000; to construct a building somewhere on the South Ridge to take care of the three one-room schools located south of the railroad tracks, to cost approximately $10,000.

These improvements would give to our children educational advantages that are demanded by the times in which we live, and which are in line with the recommendations of the new school code. We could have enlarged school grounds for better physical training, better play facilities and school gardening. It would mean modern attractive buildings, heated by furnace, properly ventilated, correctly lighted and adequately equipped for the work of the school, and in all three schools would be given opportunities for teaching domestic science, manual training and practical agriculture.

The plan provides for closing all present one-room schools requiring many grades for one teacher, a condition that makes it impossible to do the best kind of school work, and will give to Perry a complete system of graded schools with a limited number of grades for each teacher.

The many and decided advantages of graded over ungraded schools are well known. A livelier interest and greater enthusiasm on the part of pupils; as a rule, better qualified teachers available; more time and attention allotted to the individual pupil; better opportunity for teaching the special branches; better equipment possible for the consolidated school that is prohibited the small school because of the cost; most of all, a reasonable length of time for each class.

The plan provides a school easily accessible to each section of the township, and, as near as the board can determine, is what the majority of the people desire.

Alvord Makes Hit

Attorney George W. Alvord of this place made a hit—in fact several of them—at the annual love-feast of the Geauga county Democrats. The Record refers to his address as eloquent and humorous and quotes many sections, including the following:

The Republican legislature is a body working for extinction. After having discussed so great a measure as for public utility and benefit, we find the Republican legislature imposing a bounty on hogs. Then after wrestling with the enormities of the Smith one-per-cent law, the Republican legislature regulates that minnows must be six inches long.

"To Washington society Wilson is an enigma. The magazines refer to him as academic. In the hearts of patriots of his country, irrespective of name, we find that he fills a niche in public life not exceeded by any other modern president, save, perhaps Lincoln.

"Washington society don't understand him. He minds his own business. He makes Old Glory more respected and seeks to relieve the burden from the people. The enigma I speak of is a man whose very life is devoted unstintingly to the welfare of ourselves. He has not many intimate friends, because he attends to his own business. Scarcely was he introduced into office when the dawn of a new day for Democracy was seen; new freedom glorying the eastern sky with rosy finger tips. Out from the shadows into which political life had fallen came a strong man to lead them. 'By their works ye shall know them.' He is sincere. His indomitable will brooks no defeat for liberty and justice irrespective of party. He stands for cooperation. He has kept the simple, Jeffersonian methods. He stands for government that comes down to the work-a-day walks of life. We work for him and join hands with him for a greater country."

Spaller Can't Come Back

Civil Service Commission, after a delay of a week, sustained the findings of Director of Safety Elmer Murphy, in the case of former Police Lieutenant E. W. Spaller. The following is a copy of the findings, which was addressed to Spaller and signed by the members of the commission, Dr. A. P. Brady, Harry Post and L. A. Thorp:

"The civil service commission of the city of Painesville, Lake county, Ohio, begs to inform you that at a meeting of said commission on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1915, all members being present, all papers certified to this body by the director of public safety and as well all the evidence submitted at your recent hearing before this commission was very carefully gone over. After a review of all the evidence and careful consideration of all of the facts the civil service commission finds that the director of public safety was justified in reaching the conclusion to which he came as set forth in his opinion to you at the time of your hearing before him. The commission unanimously upholds the findings of the director of public safety and affirms his action in discharging you as a member of the police force of the City of Painesville."

Seventy More Homes

Seventy new houses were erected in Willoughby last week. Yes, that's right, s-e-v-e-n-t-y.

It should be explained, however, that these were bird houses and were erected on the Andrews estate on the east side of Chagrin river, where a veritable bird paradise is to be established.

Four general types of box bird houses were erected. An open structure was made for robins; an almost air-tight box with a single hole in the side for downy woodpeckers; a similar one with a very large hole for sparrow hawks and certain owls, and an elaborate house-like box for songsters.

Willoughby's new military band will have new uniforms for Decoration day.

"A Silo With Every Barn" is Slogan For the Farmers

The great agricultural subject of the day is the silo. Statistics from every state in the Central West show that the silo is increasing in numbers far more rapidly than even its most enthusiastic supporters predicted a few years ago.

The last report from the Department of Agriculture shows for the first time in years that there was an increase in the number of stock on the farms of this country. This can be largely attributed to the general use of the silo.

Spring building on hundreds of farms will mean silo building. A slogan that has been generally adopted by the farming states of the Middle West is "A Silo With Every Barn." What kind of silo is best has been widely discussed. There really is no best kind—all are good. It depends upon conditions what kind of a silo should be built. However, a study of the action of bacteria and air on silage shows the importance of proper construction.

First of all the silo must be permanently airtight with the walls so smooth that the silage will settle [illegible] chemical action of any sort—rusting, crumbling or decaying due to the acids of the silage or weathering. Doors should be of nonwarping wood or other material so that they will fit perfectly at all times.

The great strain upon the silo from the settling of the silage and the wind pressure demands a strongly built silo. It receives hard usage at filling time and in fact, everyday from the pitching out of silage. Make sure that there is plenty of room under the roof when the silo is nearly filled. There isn't a farmer who doesn't take pride in a well-built silo and rightly so, for it is one of the most attractive buildings on the farm.

Now that farmers realize that the silo is here to stay and since it has proved to be the most important structure on a dairy or stock farm all types are being built for absolute permanency. The wooden silos are made of the most durable woods, cement silos with nonporous walls and stronger reinforcing, the silo ones of better glazed or vitrified material. Whatever the initial cost of the silo, it is an investment which will pay for itself the first year [illegible]

Onions Have Failed to Bring Average Price This Spring

Farmers who kept their onions all winter, expecting a sharp advance in price, seem doomed to disappointment, and many are now disposing of their holdings for less money than they could have received last fall.

The onion holds third place among the truck crops grown in the United States. In 1908 about 14,000,000 bushels, valued at $10,000,000, were produced, practically all of which were consumed in this country. In addition we annually import about 1,400,000 bushels from Spain, Egypt, Bermuda, and the South Sea Islands. The onion is one of the more common crops of our home vegetable gardens, and it is well adapted to growing commercially on a small scale, very little capital being required for a beginning. The market for onions includes practically the entire commercial world, and the demand for a good article continues throughout the entire year.

As a general average, onions will cost in the neighborhood of $80 when ready to market. This does not include the crates or bags in which to market them.

An acre of onions will produce on an average 300 bushels, although large tracts are made to yield an average of 500 bushels an acre, at a cost for growing not exceeding $75. The price paid the grower to the field is sometimes as low as 35 cents a bushel, although 45 cents is about the ruling price, taking one year with another. A yield of 300 bushels, at 45 cents a bushel, gives a gross return of $135 an acre, or about $55 with the cost of growing deducted. The more successful onion growers, and they are many, count upon a net profit equal to the cost of growing the crop.

Rest Room Project Rests

Councilman Sam Kohankie took up the rest room project at Monday night's council meeting, telling in strong and vigorous language just why the room was needed and what for. No action was taken.

Mr. Kohankie suggested that if the council did not get busy on the proposition soon he would have the newspapers of the county take the matter up and see if the room could not be built by public subscription. He stated that the council seemed to have plenty of money for [illegible]

MOTHERS! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take medicine from a stranger. Mothers know, bless them, tongue is a sure guide.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once.

When your child is cross, feverish, irritable, has stomach ache, gets pale, loses appetite, has bad breath, sleeps restlessly, or has occasional attacks of stomach troubles, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs." Then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours this entire poisonous mass of undigested fermenting waste will gently move on out of the bowels. Then your child's sweet, playful spirit returns, sleep "bubble clamoring" is stilled and the little one's appetite, health and happiness in the first treatment given to any sickness. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

PROUD OF OUR SENATOR

People of this district should feel proud of Senator J. V. Vincent for having introduced, fought for and carried through the Senate one of the most important bills the lawmakers have had under consideration, and one which directly affects every voter, every parent. The senator stipulates that the burden of proof will be upon the utilities for increases in their rates. It affects railroads, telephone, gas, electric light and all kinds of public service concerns. It makes it necessary for them to prove the extraordinary needs that an increase in rates is a necessity. They will also have to give 30 days notice of an intended increase. The public authority will have the privilege of suspending the proposed raise 120 days, during which time a thorough investigation can be made of the claims of the petitioning company.

Senator Vincent has had a hard struggle in his efforts for the people of Ohio. All kinds of pressure was put upon opposition to at first knock out the bill and when this could not be accomplished, attempts were made to amend it that it would be shorn of much of its usefulness. When they were not successful, there were efforts to raise changes which would make the measure less stringent for the public utilities.

This measure does not appear to place a hardship upon the corporations which it affects. If these concerns have a just right to an increase in rates, the public utility commission is bound to recognize it and to act accordingly. If they cannot prove their case in order to make a fair return on their investment a case is necessary, then to no reason may they complain be privileged to put an additional burden upon those who must patronize them.

The measure is merely a check and safeguard for the people and it deserves passage by the House and the signature of the governor.

WHEN GOOD ROADS COUNT

There are summer months when dirt roads are often so comfortable for ordinary use as really good roads adapted to all seasons. The dirt roads are dustier in dry weather and muddier after heavy rains, but for most purposes they serve well during the favorable parts of the year.

It is the some when deep snow covers the country. Then winter roads may be almost as good if there is only dirt under the snow as they are when the bottom is of the best macadam or a smooth hard pavement. But such conditions do not often last long in this section of the United States.

Spring and late autumn are the seasons when good roads count most. It is then that they put a premium upon every acre of land, every little village lot, which front upon really dependable highways, available for any kind of traffic, in any weather.

Go out into the country and note the difference between well-made and neglect roads and the other kind. There is an end of arguing the case for road improvement. The roads tell their own story. It is perfectly plain to all who ride over them or even see them from a distance.

There is no great public improvement more certain of steady expenditure and increasing favor than good roads movement. It goes to the roots of comfort and success in life for millions of American families. It is based upon fundamental ideas of modern civilization.

ARBOR DAY

Arbor day will soon be here. This day is set apart by proclamation of the governor of the various states, for the planting of trees. We are reminded of the importance of this day by the fact that the Ohio legislature has passed a bill providing that the governor shall issue a proclamation and designate an Ohio Arbor day, which will be observed annually thereafter.

Let Arbor day be remembered as more than an observance, that happens annually and only for a day or two. Let the spirit of Arbor day extend through the year. Make the day a jubilee and so full of interest and pleasure that the children will look forward to it as they do to Christmas New Years, the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving. This will develop culture and tree cultivation should be a number of years.

Children love flowers and trees naturally. If their love can be strengthen as they grow older, it will increase their love for nature, for listening and examining it. But the planting of a large growth on our always unbearable summer days forward preservation and true planting. It is not for shade and beauty alone that trees should be preserved and cultivated. The planting of a single row of trees has often had a paragraphic favorable influence upon the health fulness of the community in further ways than in conversation the past week with a local physician was informed that belts of trees planted in the vicinity of pestiferous marshes have rendered them no longer noxious to those living near them.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Tradition says that St. Patrick's chief characteristic was an intense fervency and a great zeal for Christian religion. He used often to pray a hundred times a day, say the old chronicles.

It is indeed remarkable that a figure of this type, known only of the dim ways of a millennium and a half ago, should still be a popular hero. He did not have the military prowess that usually accompanies hero worship. Ed somehow his name suggests a certain genial good humor even in those who have no affiliation with the Irish race. But everyone who was a green sackcloth on March 17 demonstrated from the "Gold Belt."

The race of the Irish people from the early and storied immigrants who came to the Colonies, through the present enormous portion in the United States, indeed, throughout the and social life of America is one of remarkable interest. It is the great reserve for this advance has been the spirit of enthusiasm, which history shows to be a characteristic of the Irish nationality. It is a great race herself.

A POTATO ROMANCE

"If I were a farmer boy or a boy without capital, and wanted an early competency, I'd start right out growing Potatoes," said Henry Schroeder, the Potato king of the Red River Valley, whose story in the John A. Salzer Seed Co.'s Catalogue reads stranger than a romance.

That advice of Mr. Schroeder's, the self made Potato king, comes from a warm heart, a level head, an active hand, and above all, a successful Potato grower!

Do You Know, Mr. Farmer,

there is more money in five acres of Potatoes year in and year out than in anything you can grow on your farm, and the growing of Potatoes now, with present machinery, etc., is easy. It's regular Fourth of July fun!

Salzer's Creations in Seed Corn put Wisconsin on the Corn Map with its astonishing yields!

Prof. Aug. F. W. Schmitz, Thomas, Okla., writes: "I was troubled with Backache for about twenty-five years. When told I had Bright's Disease in its last stages, I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes I was somewhat relieved and I stopped the treatment. In the spring of the next year I had another attack. I went for Dodd's Kidney Pills and they relieved me again. I used three boxes. That is now three years ago and my Backache has not returned in its severity, and by using another two boxes a little later on, the pain left altogether and I have had no trouble since. THE SCARLET PLAGUE

By JACK LONDON

COPYRIGHT 1914 BY McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE

"But I am ahead of my story. When the great exodus from the cities around San Francisco bay began, and while the telephones were still working, I talked with my brother. I told him this flight from the cities was insanity, that there were no symptoms of the plague in me, and that the thing for us to do was to isolate ourselves and our relatives in some safe place. We decided on the Chemistry building, at the university, and we planned to lay in a supply of provisions, and by force of arms to prevent any other persons from forcing their presence upon us after we had retired to our refuge.

All this being arranged, my brother begged me to stay in my own house for at least twenty-four hours more, on the chance of the plague developing in me. To this I agreed, and he promised to come for me next day. We talked over the details of the provisioning and the defending of the Chemistry building until the telephone died. It died in the midst of our conversation. That evening there were no electric lights, and I was alone in my house in the darkness. No more newspapers were being printed, so I had no knowledge of what was taking place outside. I heard sounds of rioting and of pistol shots, and from my windows I could see the glare on the sky of some conflagration in the direction of Oakland. It was a night of terror. I did not sleep a wink. A man—why and how I do not know—was killed on the sidewalk in front of the house. I heard the rapid reports of an automatic pistol, and a few minutes later the wounded wretch crawled up to my door, moaning and crying out for help. Arming myself with two automatics, I went to him. By the light of a match I ascertained that while he was dying of the bullet wounds, at the same time the plague was on him. I fled indoors, whence I heard him moan and cry out for half an hour longer.

"In the morning my brother came to me. I had gathered into a hand bag what things of value I proposed taking, but when I saw his face I knew that he would never accompany me to the Chemistry building. The plague was on him. He intended shaking my hand, but I went back hurriedly before him.

"Look at yourself in the mirror," I commanded.

"My God!" he said. "I've got it. Don't come near me. I'm a dead man."

"Then the convulsions seized him. He was two hours in dying, and was conscious to the last, complaining about the coldness and loss of sensation in his feet, his calves, his thighs, until at last it was his heart and he was dead.

"That was the way the Scarlet Death slew. I caught up my handbag and fled. The sights in the streets were terrible. One stumbled on bodies everywhere. Some were not yet dead. And even as you looked you saw men sink down with the death fastened upon them. There were numerous fires burning in Berkeley, while Oakland and San Francisco were apparently being swept by vast conflagrations. The smoke from the burning filled the heavens, so that the midday was a gloomy twilight, and, in the shifts of wind, sometimes the sun shone through dimly, a dull red orb. Truly, my grandsons, it was like the last days of the end of the world.

"There were numerous stalled motor cars, showing that the gasoline and the engine supplies of the garages had given out. I remember one such car. A man and a woman lay back dead in the seats, and on the pavement near it were two more women and a child. Strange and terrible sights there were on every hand. People slipped by silently, furtively, like ghosts—white-faced women carrying infants in their arms; fathers leading children by the hand; singly, and in couples, and in families—all fleeing out of the city of death. Some carried supplies of food, others blankets and valuables, and there were many who carried nothing.

"There was a grocery store—a place where food was sold. The man to whom it belonged—I knew him well—a quiet, sober, but stupid and obstinate fellow, was defending it. The windows and doors had been broken in, but he, inside, hiding behind a counter, was discharging his pistol at a number of men on the sidewalk who were breaking in. In the entrance were several bodies—of men, I decided, whom he had killed earlier in the day. Even as I looked on from a distance, I saw one of the robbers break the windows of an adjoining store, a place where shoes were sold, and deliberately set fire to it. I did not go to the groceryman's assistance. The time for such acts had already passed. Civilization was crumbling, and it was each for himself.

"I went away hastily, down a cross street, and at the first corner I saw another tragedy. Two men of the working class had caught a man and a woman with two children, and were robbing them. I knew the man by sight, though I had not been introduced to him. He was a poet whose verses I had long admired. Yet I did not go to his help, for at the moment I came upon the scene there was a pistol shot, and I saw him sinking to the ground. The woman screamed, and she was felled by a fist blow by one of the brutes. I cried out threateningly, whereupon they discharged their pistols at me and I ran away around the corner. Here I was blocked by an advancing conflagration. The buildings on both sides were burning, and the street was filled with smoke and flame. From somewhere in that murk came a woman's voice calling shrilly for help. But I did not go to her. A man's heart turned to iron amid such scenes, and one heard all too many appeals for help.

"Returning to the corner, I found the two robbers were gone. The poet and his wife lay dead on the pavement. It was a shocking sight. The two children had vanished—whither I could not tell. And I knew, now, why it was that the fleeing persons I encountered slipped along so furtively and with such white faces. In the midst of our civilization, down in our slums and labor ghettos, we had bred a race of barbarians, of savages; and now, in the time of our calamity, they turned upon us like the wild beasts they were and destroyed us. And they destroyed themselves as well. They inflamed themselves with strong drink and committed a thousand atrocities, quarreling and killing one another in the general madness. One group of workingmen I saw, of the better sort, who had banded together, and, with their women and children in their midst, the sick and aged in litters and being carried, and with a number of horses pulling a truckload of provisions, they were fighting their way out of the city. They made a fine spectacle as they came down the street through the drifting smoke, though they nearly shot me when I first appeared in their path. As they went by, one of their leaders shouted out to me in apologetic explanation. He said they were killing the robbers and looters on sight, and that they had thus banded together as the only means by which to escape the prowlers.

All Fleeing Out of the City of Death.

"It was here that I saw for the first time what I was soon to see so often. One of the marching men had suddenly shown the unmistakable mark of the plague. Immediately those about him drew away, and he, without a remonstrance, stepped out of his place to let them pass on. A woman, most probably his wife, attempted to follow him. She was leading a little boy by the hand. But the husband commanded her sternly to go on, while others laid hands on her and restrained her from following him. This I saw, and I saw the man also, with his scarlet blaze of face, step into a doorway on the opposite side of the street. I heard the report of his pistol, and saw him sink lifeless to the ground.

"After being turned aside twice again by advancing fires, I succeeded in getting through to the university. On the edge of the campus I came upon a party of university folk who were going in the direction of the Chemistry building. They were all family men, and their families were with them, including the nurses and the servants. Professor Badminton greeted me, and I had difficulty in recognizing him. Somewhere he had gone through flames, and his beard was singed off. About his head was a bloody bandage, and his clothes were filthy. He told me he had been cruelly beaten by prowlers, and that his brother had been killed the previous night, in the defense of their dwelling.

"Midway across the campus, he pointed suddenly to Mrs. Swinton's face. The unmistakable scarlet was there. Immediately all the other women set up a screaming and began to run away from her. Her two children were with a nurse, and these also ran with the women. But her husband, Doctor Swinton, remained with her.

"'Go on, Smith,' he told me. 'Keep an eye on the children. As for me, I shall stay with my wife. I know she is as already dead, but I can't leave her. Afterward, if I escape, I shall come to the Chemistry building, and do you watch for me and let me in.'

"I left him bending over his wife and soothing her last moments, while I ran to overtake the party. We were the last to be admitted to the Chemistry building. After that, with our automatic rifles we maintained our isolation. By our plan, we had arranged for a company of sixty to be in this refuge. Instead, every one of the number originally planned had added relatives and friends and whole families until there were over four hundred souls. But the Chemistry building was large, and, standing by itself, was in no danger of being burned by the great fires that raged everywhere in the city.

"A large quantity of provisions had been gathered, and a food committee took charge of it, issuing rations daily to the various families and groups that arranged themselves into messes. A number of committees were appointed, and we developed a very efficient organization. I was on the committee of defense, though for the first day no prowlers came near. We could see them in the distance, however, and by the smoke of their fires knew that several camps of them were occupying the far edge of the campus. Drunkenness was rife, and often we heard them singing ribald songs or insanely shouting. While the world crashed to ruin about them and all the air was filled with the smoke of its burning, these low creatures gave rein to their bestiality and fought and drank and died. And after all, what did it matter? Everybody died anyway, the good and the bad, the efficient and the weak, those that loved to live and those that scorned to live. They passed. Everything passed.

"When twenty-four hours had gone by and no signs of the plague were apparent, we congratulated ourselves and set about digging a well. You have seen the great iron pipes which in those days carried water to all the city dwellers. We feared that the fires in the city would burst the pipes and empty the reservoirs. So we tore up the cement floor of the central court of the Chemistry building and dug a well. There were many young men, undergraduates, with us, and we worked night and day on the well. And our fears were confirmed. Three hours before we reached water the pipes went dry.

"A second twenty-four hours passed and still the plague did not appear among us. We thought we were saved. But we did not know what I afterward decided to be true, namely that the period of the incubation of the plague germs in a human body was a matter of a number of days. It slew so swiftly when once it manifested itself that we were led to believe that the period of incubation was equally swift. So, when two days had left us unscathed, we were elated with the idea that we were free of the contagion.

"But the third day disillusioned us. I can never forget the night preceding it. I had charge of the night guards from eight to twelve, and from the roof of the building I watched the passing of all man's glorious works. So terrible were the local conflagrations that all the sky was lighted up. One could read the finest print in the red glare. All the world seemed wrapped in flames. San Francisco spouted smoke and fire from a score of vast conflagrations that were like so many active volcanoes. Oakland, San Leandro, Haywards—all were burning, and to the northward, clear to Point Richmond, other fires were at work. It was an awe-inspiring spectacle. Civilization, my grandsons, civilization was passing in a sheet of flame and a breath of death. At ten o'clock that night, the great powder magazines at Point Pinole exploded in rapid succession. So terrific were the concussions that the strong building rocked as in an earthquake, while every pane of glass was broken. It was then that I left the roof and went down the long corridors, from room to room, quieting the alarmed women and telling them what had happened.

EXPERT WITH ROLLER SKATES

How Two New York Youngsters Got Enjoyment With Limited Amount of Material.

Two roller skates for one boy is the customary demand for complete satisfaction in sidewalk skating. But passers-by on Fifth avenue near Thirty-fourth street the other day saw two boys and one roller skate in thorough working co-operation. They were sliding down the slope of Murray hill, as happily as might be, and with a maintenance of balance truly wonderful to behold.

One boy wore one skate on his foot in conventional fashion. The other foot he held slightly aloft, and on the foot that held the skate sat the other boy—a good-sized youngster of ten or twelve, who ought to grow up to be a tight-rope walker or an acrobat. He sat astride of his friend's foot as if it had been a rocking-horse; his own sturdy legs he stuck straight out in front of him, and with both hands he clung valiantly to his friend's knee.

How the other lad balanced himself it is impossible to guess. But balance himself he did—with one hand thrown out just a trifle. He pushed himself along when necessary with the skateless foot, and with that, too, he guided himself and his load. And there, in the busy part of the day—it was about eleven in the morning—on the busiest stretch of Fifth avenue, the two of them slid merrily along down the slope of the hill, and along the flat stretch toward Madison square.—New York Times.

Remembered Toast.

In the '50s I was in Washington at a dinner given by Senator Dawson of Georgia, writes a correspondent of the New York Sun. A number of guests were present, among them being the noted actor, James A. Murdoch. Toasts were given, and the host requested that Murdoch recite Richard Brinsley Sheridan's toast, viz.:

The World.

We came into it, naked and bare;
We go through it with sorrow and care;
When we die, we go, God knows where;
If we are thoroughbreds here,
We'll be thoroughbreds there;
If we are scoundrels here,
We'll be scoundrels there.

This toast was recited with his unsurpassed elocutionary power and graceful manner, and left a memory that has been with me for years.

TOWHEE KILLS BEETLES IN EARLY SPRING

"Towhee"—The Upper Part of Body Is Black; the Under White and the Sides Chestnut.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

After snow has disappeared in the early spring an investigation among the leaves near a fence or in a thicket will often disclose the little bird known as the towhee, chewink, or ground robin, scratching for his dinner like a hen. This dinner will consist of beetles and larvae of insects harmful to crops, which have been spending the winter under old leaves.

The good which the towhee does in this way can hardly be overestimated, since the death of a single insect at this time, before it has had no opportunity to deposit its eggs, is equivalent to the destruction of a host later in the year. The towhee has also been credited with visiting potato fields and feeding upon the potato beetle. Its vegetable food consists of seeds and small wild fruits, but no complaint on this score is known to have been made. So far as observation goes the bird never touches either cultivated fruit or grain, in fact, it is too shy and retiring even to stay about gardens for any length of time.

The towhee breeds from the middle states northward and winters in the southern half of the country. Naturally associated with catbird and brown thrasher, it lives in much the same places, though it is more given to haunting hedgerows along roads and fences.

"Some Common Birds Useful to the Farmer" is the title of Farmers' Bulletin No. 630 of the United States department of agriculture which describes other useful birds. The pamphlet may be had by applying to the department.

Management of the Sow During Pregnancy.

The breeding season for spring litters has just passed and the time for the sow to give birth to her young is at hand.

During pregnancy two facts must be borne in mind. The first is that the sow is doing double duty. Not only is she keeping up her own bodily functions but the development of the litter is an increasing drain on her system. Feeding at this time should be liberal, although it need not be so heavy as after the pigs are farrowed. The sow's condition should be "good," neither too fat nor too lean. A very fat sow is apt to be clumsy with her pigs, and some times her pigs are lacking in vitality. The very thin sow will either not do justice to her pigs, or will become a mere wreck herself during the time she is nursing her litter and the chances are that both these things will happen. The necessity of exercise must not under any circumstances be overlooked. This may be provided by a large lot or even driving the hogs slowly for a short distance each day.

In the second place, the main demands upon the sow are those for the building of new tissue. Therefore, the kind of feed is important. The nitrogenous or protein bearing feeds are needed at this time. These are bran, oil meal, peas, beans, oats and barley. The clovers, alfalfa, peas, beans, vetches, etc., are also of much value to the brood sow. Special emphasis should be laid on the condition of the bowels during pregnancy and particularly at farrowing, the special danger to be avoided being constipation. The grain ration should be given as slop and toward the close of the period of gestation, oil meal, or a small amount of flax meal should be introduced into the ration.

Corn should not be fed in large amounts to breeding stock, because it does not furnish enough bone-and-muscle-forming constituents to properly develop the unborn pigs. If possible, corn should not be fed at all to any but fattening animals.

Hog Craves Green Feed.

During the winter more care will be needed to keep the sow in good condition on account of the absence of pasture. Not only does the hog's system crave green feed, but more or less bulk is demanded. To offset the lack of green feed, nothing surpasses roots. These may be sliced or pulped and mixed with the grain or may be given whole as a noon feed. Care must be used in feeding roots, as they are laxative in effect, and if fed in excessive amounts, may bring about profuse action of the bowels. Some eastern farmers recommend the use of silage, clover, alfalfa, hay, sheaf oats or corn fodder to supply the bulky requirement of the ration. Charcoal, ashes, lime, and salt should be accessible at all times. These act as a vermifuge and preventive of disease and meet the hog's craving for mineral matter in the feed. During the entire period care should be taken to keep the system well toned. The sow should become accustomed to being handled and should look upon her attendant as a friend.

The brood sows may run together up to within two weeks of farrowing time; then it is well to separate them, placing each sow by herself in a yard with a small house, which should be dry, airy, and clean. A great deal of exercise will not now be necessary. The feed should be reduced somewhat and if there is any tendency to constipation, a slight change of feed may be necessary.

The farrowing pen should be provided with fenders around at least three sides about six to eight inches from the floor and as many inches from the wall. These should be strong enough to support the weight of the sow should she lie on them. They are constructed to protect the pigs from being lain upon during the first few days of their lives. This will go far to prevent a very fruitful cause of loss among young pigs for the little fellows will soon learn to creep under these fenders when the sow lies down.

COMFORT FOR YOUNG CHICKS

Essential Requirements Are Normal Heat, Clean Quarters, Fresh Air and Proper Exercise.

The care of the young chick, from the time it is hatched until it is sold, is bound up in the one word "comfort." The normal amount of heat, clean quarters good, fresh air with plenty of room and exercise—these are the essential requirements, and they must be supplied. Good breeding has more to do with healthy chicks and normal growth than good incubation. Many persons can hatch large numbers of chicks, but comparatively few can raise them successfully. The experienced breeder begins long before the hatching season to prepare for the management of his growing stock, by the careful selection of breeders.

Labor and feed will avail little or nothing if the chicks do not inherit a strong, vigorous constitution. This quality is entirely dependent upon the age and condition of the breeding stock. Discouragement and failure are sure to follow where immature pullets, diseased hens, or hens of low vitality are used as breeders. Only strong, vigorous hens which have passed their first year as layers should go into the breeding pens. The eggs from such hens which have been mated to large, healthy cockerels, should be gathered carefully and kept in a temperature of not more than 60 degrees, and 50 will not do any harm. The sooner the eggs are incubated after being laid the better.

CLOVER UPON WINTER WHEAT

Practice Found to Have Number of Advantages—Firm, Compact Seed Bed Is Required.

(By H. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Many farmers make a practice of sowing their clover seed upon the winter wheat early in the spring, depending upon the alternate freezing and thawing of the ground to work the seed down into the crevices.

I have made it a practice to sow my clover seed on winter wheat in the spring for a number of years and find that it has a number of advantages. Grass and clover seed require a firm, compact seed bed.

In my own practice I prefer to delay the sowing of the clover seed until the ground is dry enough to harrow and apply the seed with a wheelbarrow seeder and give the wheat a harrowing with a light smoothing harrow with the teeth set well aslant. This covers the clover seeds and proves very beneficial to the wheat crop, especially during the dry seasons. Either method is preferable in sowing seed with spring grain crops.

SUPERIOR RATIONS FOR COW

Combinations Worked Out by Nebraska Agricultural College—Alfalfa Forms Big Part.

The best rations for the dairy cow, according to the most recent investigations of the Nebraska College of Agriculture, are as follows for a 1,200-pound dairy cow of the proper sort and producing 30 pounds of milk daily:

Ration No. 1—Twelve pounds of alfalfa, 36 pounds of corn silage, 4 pounds of ground corn and 5 pounds of bran.

Ration No. 2—Where silage is not available. Fifteen pounds of alfalfa, 6 pounds of ground corn, 8 pounds of corn stover and 2 pounds of gluten meal.

Ration No. 3—Where neither silage nor alfalfa are available. Twelve pounds of millet, 12 pounds of sorghum hay, 2 pounds of ground corn and 3 pounds of oil meal.

SEED AN IMPORTANT MATTER

Article of Highest Quality Means Several Dollars More to the Acre in Net Returns.

(By LE ROY CADY, Associate Horticulturist, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Good seed is an important matter with the gardener as well as the farmer. It never pays to buy cheap seed. Experiments were carried on a year or two ago by the Pennsylvania experiment station with some ten or more strains of cabbage seed of the same varieties from different firms. They found variations of yield from 5 to 10 or 15 tons an acre, according to the strain of seed.

The seed of the highest quality meant several dollars more to the acre in net returns, even if it did cost a few cents more a pound.

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray, also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. KIDNEYS CLOG UP FROM EATING TOO MUCH MEAT

Take Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

Settling Old Scores.

Our local football team had taken on a scratch eleven of the veterans of the village. The fifteen-year-old goalkeeper of the former was observed pacing excitedly to and fro between the goalposts.

At last, during an interval in the game, he approached his captain, who was playing center forward.

"I say, Jack, you might come into goal for a bit, and let me have your place," he said eagerly.

"Whatever for?" demanded the surprised center forward.

"Well," confessed the goalie reluctantly, "I want to get a kick or two in at father!"—Dundee (Scotland) Courier.

CHILDREN SHOWED IT

Effect of Their Warm Drink in the Morning.

"A year ago I was a wreck from coffee drinking and was on the point of giving up my position in the school room because of nervousness.

"I was telling a friend about it and she said, 'We drink nothing at meal time but Postum, and it is such a comfort to have something we can enjoy drinking with the children.'

"I was astonished that she would allow the children to drink any kind of coffee, but she said Postum was not coffee, but a most healthful drink for children as well as for older ones, and that the condition of both the children and adults showed that to be a fact.

"I was in despair and determined to give Postum a trial, following the directions carefully. It was a decided success and I was completely won by its rich delicious flavor.

"In a short time I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and kept growing better month after month, until now I am healthy, and do my work in the school room with ease and pleasure. I would not return to nerve-destroying coffee for any money."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

COOKING GREENS AND ONIONS

Particularly in the Spring Should Greens Be an Important Part of the Diet—Some Ways of Serving Onions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Notwithstanding the low fuel value of the leaves and stalks of plants that are commonly served under the name "greens" the thrifty housewife recognizes the necessity of supplying her family with this type of food. Particularly in the early spring will she supply her family bountifully with them, as they are very welcome after the winter diet of canned goods, dried vegetables and root vegetables stored in the cellar. A double purpose may be accomplished in the country home by the use of wild greens, namely freeing the ground from weeds and providing food. The common dandelion may be used in this way.

The dandelion is cut close to the ground before the flower bud has expanded. When it is desired to root out the plant from a lawn, the entire root must be dug up; if simply the top is cut off, the dandelion grows again and in a larger head. The slightly bitter flavor of the leaves is not disagreeable. The roots furnish a bitter extract often used medicinally, particularly in the domestic medicine of early times. When cultivated, the dandelion is milder and more tender, and may be used as salad, as may the very young wild plants.

Asparagus is a long-lived, easily cultivated delicacy and it is strange that any form should lack it. Many an asparagus bed does good service to the second and third generation of owners. It can be cooked in many ways. As is the case with most green vegetables its delicate flavor is spoiled by overcooking. It should be cooked only long enough to make it tender.

Spinach is a favorite form of greens and is seen in city markets most of the year. It can be grown easily in any garden. A French proverb calls it the "broom of the stomach," and it appears to be richer in iron than most common foods. The tenderest leaves may be served raw as a salad.

Lettuce makes an excellent "green" for cooking, although American housewives seldom realize this. In Europe the tougher or outer leaves of the lettuce are used in particular in this way. Care should be taken to see that such lettuce is not overcooked.

Rhubarb is another plant in which the leafstalks are the useful portion, though it may from its use be classed as a fruit rather than as a vegetable. The various acids and other flavors it contains are acceptable in the early spring when it is at its best. Later in the season when the stalks are tough and fibrous, the juice may be extracted for jelly making. Because it contains some oxalic acid the use of rhubarb is frequently forbidden to persons of gouty tendencies, or with certain other diseases.

The Useful Onion Tribe.

Onions owe their flavor to a volatile, oil-like compound containing sulphur. They are very succulent, but nevertheless supply some nutritive material. Many varieties are grown by American farmers and gardeners, and the crop is a very important one. The tiny pearl and button onions are convenient for salads or pickles or for the bit of flavor wanted where a large onion would be far too much. The white-skinned Egyptian onions are usually a satisfactory variety. There are many onions in the market which are strong in flavor and tough, and justify the prejudice which the undiscriminating have against all onions. In general, the greenish yellow and red types of onions, owing to their texture and flavor, are less satisfactory for cooking as a vegetable than those of lighter hue.

Onion tops, like the stalks of wild leeks and chives, can also be used for flavoring, especially the sprouts that start when the bulbs have been kept in a warm room.

Preparation of Onions.

To prepare onions, peel under water so that the volatile bodies which affect the eyes may remain in the water and be kept from scattering. Where the onions are especially strong or liable to prove indigestible to anyone, they may be put, after peeling, into boiling water, to each quart of which one-fourth teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda has been added. After letting them stand in this water half an hour, drain and boil in plenty of salted water from one half to two hours, according to the nature of the variety in hand, changing the water if desirable.

Often it is wise to take off one or two of the coarser layers next the outside skin and reserve them for flavoring soups while a part of the tender succulent center may be reserved for a salad. In cutting up an onion for seasoning hold it with a fork so that the onion odor will not get on the hands.

Methods of Cooking.

The water in which onions are boiled will contain much flavor, and some of it may be reserved to flavor soups, either milk or stock.

Any strong variety of onion is much improved for the table in spite of loss of nutritive value if the water is changed several times during the cooking process. Milk may be used as the medium for final cooking.

Fried Onions.

Fried onions may be prepared in either of two ways: (1) Saute sliced onion in olive oil, butter, or other fat until golden brown and tender, or (2) drop a few pieces at a time in deep fat; let them remain in the hot fat until they are crisp like Saratoga potatoes, but do not let them become too brown. Use to garnish meats or add to soups, or combine with potatoes, stewed beans, or other vegetables.

Stuffed Onions.

Parboil large onions, remove centers without breaking other layers, and stuff with seasoned crumbs or meat, and bake until tender.

Onion Custard.

Cook onions until tender; drain thoroughly; pour over them a custard mixture made of one egg, one-half cupful milk, salt and pepper to taste, for each half pint of onions. Bake gently and serve as a vegetable. In southern Europe this dish is popular cooked in a crust, like small custard pies.

Onion Souffle.

Chop cooked onion fine or rub through a coarse strainer; combine with equal quantity soft bread crumbs or half as many dry ones; season with butter, salt, and pepper. For each half pint, beat in one egg yolk and fold in one stiffly beaten white. Put in small dishes or in onion cases and bake gently until firm.

POTTERY WORK IS A PUZZLE

Immense Bowls Made by Indians of the Amazon Valley Cannot Be Duplicated.

An expert has declared there is no kiln or oven in this country, probably none in the world, large enough to bake the largest of the big pots discovered in the Amazon valley, samples of which are now on exhibition at the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania. The clay used also has aroused much curiosity. When a piece of the edge was clipped from one of the big bowls the material was shown to be a black, flinty substance. Undeniably it is clay, but of a kind never seen before by archeologists. Potters are astonished at its remarkable strength. The large bowls are less than half an inch thick, while some of the smaller ones, a foot or fourteen inches high, are as thin as a sheet of newspaper. An idea of their strength may be gained from the knowledge that they were transported about ten thousand miles before reaching the museum and only a few of them were broken, though all were packed under difficulties in villages that knew nothing of packing breakables.

The Indians who made these wonderful pots are as mysterious as their work. Doctor Farrabee wrote that they were absolutely devoid of any traditions and had no idea of where they came from. It is known, however, that they cannot have been in Peru more than about five hundred years. The larger bowls give out a metallic sound when rapped. One not seeing the substance would say at first they were made of painted copper. Each of the two big pots would hold four or five tons.

Schools for All Tastes.

The folk schools of Finland are particularly fine, with their cooking departments, gymnasiums, manual training and needlework. Every school has excellent bathing facilities, and the poorest children are fed at the schools. There are little zoological museums in most of the schools. There are so many varieties of schools, besides the folk schools, elementary and higher, there are lyceums, schools of forestry, of agriculture and of navigation, schools for training teachers, commercial schools, technical, music and art schools, etc., says the Christian Herald. There are three little garden schools in Finland, where boys as well as girls are taught cooking. "They must learn to cook what they grow," said one of the teachers. The dairy schools are particularly interesting, dairying comes second among the industries of Finland. The pupil must have worked for one year at a butter factory before he or she will be admitted to the school.

Customs of the Bedouins.

Such pride has the Bedouin in his weapon that even in his leisure hours he sits fully armed, examining and cleaning each piece in turn, making himself accustomed to carrying their weight.

From the time that he is eighteen years of age until he dies of old age he is more or less looking out for new wives.

By law Mohammedans are never allowed to have more than four at the same time, but they easily evade this regulation by divorcing one, which means sending her back to her parents.

This is often because she has borne him no sons, and it happens that the old sheiks almost always have young wives.

Just as it is allowable with them to steal camels, so the young men help one another to steal wives from other tribes.

War Telephone.

Unlike Germany, France does not believe in strewing the ground in the rear of her armies with a mass of telegraph and cable lines, but prefers to organize a few essential main lines of communication, and trusts to automobiles, wireless and other means for the interchange of comparatively unimportant messages.

The German army, on the other hand, is obsessed by a "wire" mania, and every little detachment must have a telephone connecting it with every other detachment, force, column or staff officer within the country.

Horses and Mules in Demand.

Export dealers figure that 60,000 American horses have been exported to Europe and about ten thousand mules, since the war began. Orders are being filled and other orders going begging which demand about sixty thousand more. Greece has recently come into the market with France, England and Italy bidding for American horses, and if Germany, Austria and Turkey had a free path of the sea the demand from that source would also be enormous.

Gowns of American Design

IF the new spring styles in gowns are strictly of American design, there is every reason to congratulate their creators. After a study of them one might be pardoned for quoting from the song which tells so heartily of rejoicing in the strength of our salvation and adding "from foreign made modes" thereto.

The new models are cleverly shaped, comfortable, and clean cut. Their tailoring is a thing of faultless beauty. Skirts are short and just wide enough to permit comfort in walking and for style. Jackets and coats are easy and smart, improving the figure which wears them properly. One may have a choice as to length, as they are shown in both long and short models.

Materials are durable and favorites being to the fore in the smartest garments. Decorations are few and elegant, buttons and straps and the introduction of outside pockets providing most of them. But it is in amazing cleverness in cutting both skirts and coats that this season has distinguished itself above others.

In party gowns skirts are more ample, but made of the silken fabrics over satin foundations. Bodices are modestly high and satin bindings are used to finish the flounces and overdresses of net or crepe or chiffon. With all this daintiness there is a little touch of the austere in the bodice usually.

In the picture given here a street suit of small shepherd's plaid is shown. Plaits at the sides of both front and back produce slightly flaring panels, the skirt being made up of four of these.

The jacket opens in a "V" at the front with revers terminating at the belt line and an inlay of velvet which is carried to the high turnover collar.

A strap at each side of the back is finished with a simulated buttonhole and set, with a lone button, to the narrow, shaped belt which defines the slightly high waist line. The cuffs are odd, with the sleeve turned back from a band of velvet and fastened down with a button. The front of the jacket is almost straight, and cut with a dip.

The Motor Bonnet of Silk

THE motor bonnet of silk continues to stand at the head of the list as the most practical of things designed for the headwear of autoists. From the standpoint of comfort, service, low cost, becomingness, and the ease with which it can be made, the silk motor bonnet has no rival possessing all of its advantages.

There are, however, many bonnets that combine the soft millinery braids, like those of hemp or silk fiber with silk in their construction, that are just as durable and becoming. By means of the braid the element of novelty in design enters into their composition, but they are less simple to make than the silk bonnets. The latter will not tax the ingenuity of the home milliner at all.

Taffeta silk is the most satisfactory weave to use. Its body gives the bonnet a chance to remain shapely. It sheds the dust easily and it is made in most appropriate and pleasing colors. Patterns by which to cut the body of bonnets are furnished by any of the standard pattern companies. Usually only about a yard of taffeta and a small strip of crinoline are needed, except when plaitings of the silk are used for trimming. An extra allowance must be made for this. Machine stitching, with silk thread, helps out in the finish and decoration of the all-silk bonnets.

The veil of washable chiffon holds its own with the silk bonnet as the best friend of the motorist. Chiffon veils are so essential that they form a part of the design in most bonnets and are always reckoned with, either as a part of the decoration or an accessory.

Several special kinds of hats appear among the spring showings of motor headwear, among them exquisite crocheted hats of silk fiber braid, and patent leather hats. The last are wholly rainproof. But the crocheted hats, and silk bonnets like those pictured here are not much damaged by rain. When the silk bonnet has served its day it can be replaced for so little money and is altogether so attractive that it is likely to remain a favorite.

Velvets for Little Girls.

Girls from twelve to sixteen are following the example of their elders for afternoon in the wearing of velvet frocks. These usually have over-blouses or long-waisted effects, with the top skirt of velvet and the short underskirt of satin or plaited chiffon. A collar of real lace and a satin belt or sash completes a very smart little costume which can be worn without a coat as warmer weather approaches.

Rice in Pincushion.

Rice makes an excellent filling for a pincushion. Take a yard of five-inch dresden ribbon, double and sew into a bag, stitching a quarter of an inch back from the edge along the sides, to leave for a finish. Fill it snugly with rice grains and you will find it keeps its place; even heavy hatpins do not turn it over.

Clean white will cover a multitude of faults in style and material, but soiled white on a woman is quite as inexcusable as on a man.

Draperies Soften a Room.

To soften and tone down a room the touch of drapery is essential, especially window drapery, which, if skillfully arranged, can add to the width and height of any window. Fashionably speaking, window draperies tend to run clear to the floor. The delicate translucent mesh of madras, figured and in stained glass effect, some of the open weave cotton draperies, and the open work machine embroideries are more and more being used in household decoration. Figured stuffs such as cretonnes and prints from Holland and Japan, range from the demurest effects to all the warmth and color needed to brighten the dark walls of the bungalow.

Daily Thought.

Much of the charm of life is ruined by exacting demands of confidence. Those who wish to destroy all mystery in those they love, to have everything revealed, are unconsciously killing their own happiness.—Stopford Brooke.

A Message To Women

Those of Middle Age Especially.

When you have found no remedy for the horrors that oppress you during change of life, when through the long hours of the day it seems as though your back would break, when your head aches constantly, you are nervous, depressed and suffer from those dreadful bearing down pains, don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the safest and surest remedy, and has carried hundreds of women safely through this critical period.

Read what these three women say:

From Mrs. Hornung, Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—"I am writing to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I failed terribly during the last winter and summer and every one remarked about my appearance. I suffered from a female trouble and always had pains in my back, no appetite and at times was very weak.

"I was visiting at a friend's house one day and she thought I needed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and have gained eight pounds, have a good appetite and am feeling better every day. Everybody is asking me what I am doing and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may publish this letter if you wish and I hope others who have the same complaint will see it and get health from your medicine as I did."—Mrs. A. HORNUNG, 91 Stanton St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Made Me Well and Strong.

MACEDON, N.Y.—"I was all run down and very thin in flesh, nervous, no appetite, could not sleep and was weak, and felt badly all the time. The doctors said I had poor blood and what I had was turning to water. I took different medicines which did not help me, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong, and I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. FRED CHACE, R. No. 2, Macedon, N.Y.

The Change of Life.

BELTSVILLE, MD.—"By the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I have successfully passed through a most trying time, the Change of Life. I suffered with a weakness, and had to stay in bed three days at a time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to perfect health, and I am praising it for the benefit of other women who suffer as I did."—Mrs. W. S. DUVALL, Route No. 1, Beltsville, Md.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

That Latin Americans insist on having just the kind of article that suits their taste is illustrated by an incident in Guatemala. An old gentleman in the interior, a large ranch owner, had always been used to a certain kind of necktie, and asked a local house to buy a number of them for him. The house ordered several from an American concern, but the latter wrote back that that kind of necktie had been out of date for 20 years, and sent several of the latest design. These were refused, however, the old kind was obtained from Europe, and the American house lost what might have been an opening wedge to a good trade.

The Way It Goes.

Judging from the way that man talks, he must be fairly hard up. Do you suppose he's hungry?

"Oh, no. He's been keeping six motor cars and has had to dispose of one. The man who's consoling him gets a salary of $2,000 a year."

Easily Explained.

"That man seems to be making a great deal of money."

"Yet in the nature of his business he is always up against it."

"How is that?"

"He is a wall decorator."

WAITING FOR YOU

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Yes, waiting for every farmer or farmer's son — any industrious American who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is higher but her farm land just as cheap and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

160 Acre Homesteads are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land at From $15 to $20 per Acre

The people of European countries as well as the American continent must be fed—thus an even greater demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Any farmer who can buy land at $15.00 to $30.00 per acre—get a dollar for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre is bound to make money—that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service in the war. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to

AGENT FOR LAKE COUNTY

To The Fruit Growers in This Section

The wide-awake growers in this section, and, in fact, all sections of the fruit-growing country are realizing the fact that something must be done to exterminate the White Grub, and to stamp out all Fungus diseases, Ulcers and Sour Sap caused by the inoculation of the poisoned bark tissues.

What does this mean to you and your fine orchard? It means just this: Money, Time and Labor gone. And your land depreciates in value, and all hope gone.

Mr. Grower, we must be up and doing! The time has come. Get out of the old RUT; get down to real Bark Culture. Learn how to treat your trees; give them the care they deserve. They will reimburse you ten-fold for your trouble. Put forth every effort available to clean up your trees; study the necessary wants in Bark Culture. Your success depends greatly on this solution.

We have formulated a preparation known as "KILO-GRUB," a carbolized-pine-tar compound; Insecticide and Fungicide for ALL bark troubles, Grubs, etc.; we are introducing this solution to our brother fruit growers this season in demonstrating quantities. Since we have complied with all the Insecticide and Fungicide laws of the State of Ohio, and we have been granted a license to manufacture and to offer for sale to all growers, we are asking co-operation in this work. Give this solution a fair trial and report on same this fall.

Perry Nurserymen Expect Good Season and Are Well Prepared

A Herald representative made a flying trip through Perry township Saturday and while he was unable to visit all the nurseries he saw enough to convince him that the nurserymen down there are wide awake, have their plans for the spring and summer well laid out and are in position to take care of any reasonable demands which may be made on them.

The Call nursery will be continued for this season at least under the management of Mrs. Call and her daughter, Miss Ethel Call. The sudden death of Mr. Call was of course a severe blow but the business was so well organized that all orders will be filled and the business conducted in the same manner as in the past. The Call trees and plants have an excellent reputation both at home and abroad.

At Willow Bend nursery, Mrs. E. M. Brewster stated that forty acres had been purchased from the Rand farm and was already under the plow and would be set to nursery stock, making sixty acres in all. They specialize in strawberries, peaches, grapes and roses.

H. J. Champion of the Champion nursery, who is an authority on fruit trees, ornamentals, roses, etc. stated that he expected a prosperous season, but that in some kinds of fruit trees the demand might fall a little below that of 1913 and 1914. For the past few years people have been "fruit crazy" and it has taxed the nurseries to supply all demands for trees.

T. B. West of Maple Bend nursery was not at home but his neat office presented a busy scene and a glance over the place showed that modern, up-to-date buildings were the rule there instead of the exception. Mr. West has many acres devoted to choice nursery stock and, judging from his attractive price lists and printing, he is ready to take care of all orders that come his way.

Fifteen Years Ago

Henry Ford, the automobile manufacturer, was engineer in an electric light plant in Detroit. Charles Murphy, the base ball millionaire, was a reporter on the Cincinnati Enquirer. Thomas H. Ince, the motion picture magnate, was a comic-opera comedian, glad to get $50 a week. Charlie Weeghman, owner of the Chicago Federal base ball team and a string of restaurants, was a waiter in a quick-lunch room. And so it goes. The list could be strung out to a column's length. Therefore, when you hear a boy or a young man complain that he has no chance, take him by the arm and tell him a few things. There never was a time in the world's history when there were more opportunities for a young man to push to the front. There never was a time when a little intelligence and determination would provide a man with a competence in a few years. This is particularly true in the farming business—for farming is a business. The young man of today who will take hold of a farm with the idea of making it the best farm in the county and who will work intelligently for ten years, with that idea always before him, will not have to work for the remainder of his life.

Fishermen Are Ready

Down at Richmond or Grand River the fishermen are anxiously awaiting the coming of spring. For weeks and weeks work has been going on down there. Old nets have been carefully gone over and repaired; miles of new twine purchased and made ready, ropes tarred and poles secured; while other men have been putting the fleet of small boats in sea-worthy condition.

It will be ten days or two weeks before the fishermen can get to work—perhaps longer. The lake seems full of ice and it will take some high winds and warm sun to rot and break up the mass.

Fish have not brought high prices this winter, in fact they are now and have been much cheaper than meat. Most of the big refrigerators at Richmond are nearly empty and will be ready for the surplus of the 1915 catch.

Former Resident Dies

Word has been received here of the death of D. D. Williams which occurred in Cleveland, Monday night. Mr. Williams was a former resident of this city and also spent many years of his life in Madison where he was a highly respected citizen. A wife, Mrs. Julia Williams, and four daughters and son survive him. The funeral was held from St. James' church in this city on Wednesday.

Dies at Home of Son

John McCabe of this city died at the home of his son, John, in Collinwood, Monday, March 22, 1915, aged 84 years. He is survived by three sons, E. W. McCabe of Buffalo, N. Y., John, of Collinwood, and Charles of this city, and two daughters: Mrs. John Callagher of Mentor, and Mrs. J. A. Baldwin of this city.

WANTED—A READER

Council May Hire Professional to Read Plumbing Ordinance

The plumbing ordinance which has tried to get itself introduced into the council for a couple of weeks, covers sixty-seven typewritten pages. Just what can be gained by devoting an hour or so to the reading of this ordinance section by section is hard to determine but if the law doesn't require it custom seems to, so the councilmen may have to waste the better part of one evening.

City Clerk Kelley got his voice in fine working order Monday night on a five page electric ordinance and was very anxious to try his vocal powers on the continued story—like Kelly was—but the members headed him off. It was suggested that each member read ten pages of the ordinance but this plan did not seem to please and so the whole matter went over.

Fairport Wants Pavement

Plans to pave from the lighthouse in Fairport to the northerly line of the city are now well under way and it is hoped that work can be started during the present year. Petitions are now being circulated and there is no doubt but what they will be very generally signed.

Mayor Thomas of Fairport stated to a Herald reporter Tuesday that the county and township would take care of their share of the expense of the pavement, leaving such a small amount for the property owners to pay that it will not prove a burden to any one.

Fairport is growing, probably faster than any other town in Lake county, and the people certainly need better roads. Many new houses are going up in the port town this spring and it will be only a few years until the residences reach from the lake to Painesville.

Wickliffe to Have Boom

Wickliffe is also on the eve of a building and improvement boom, if reports of various activities under way are reliable. The biggest thing of its kind is the allotment and boulevard which is to extend between the New York Central lines and the Shore road from Vine street, Willoughby, to Cleveland. The entrance into the Sixth City will probably be made near the Willowick club, it is said. Several Wickliffe business men who declare they have seen the blue prints, state that the project is being backed by the Everett-Moore Syndicate, which is said to have taken options on all of the land affected. This fact is generally known and gives color to the report, says the Celta.

Wickliffe is also to have a branch of some Cleveland banking company, reports have it. The Thomas Lloyd house, just east of the Presbyterian church, will be remodeled into a large brick hotel while a substantial structure is to be built beside it for the bank. L. H. Higley, who occupies the Lloyd house, is stated to have been ordered to move within a month to make way for the improvement.

"SPECIAL" MEETING

Of the City Council Proves Very Tame Affair

City Clerk Frank L. Kelly was in the first, second and third reader class Monday evening and even at that very little important legislation was spread upon the statute books of the city.

The council was "gun shy" on the proposition to issue $35,000 in bonds to improve the electric light plant and make additions to the service. The measure was read for the third time and then laid on the table where it will repose until the members find out just "where they are at." Councilmen Eaton was absent Monday night and with at least one councilman opposed to the measure it was thought better to hold off the final vote on the ordinance.

Expert Morse made a report on the report of the C. P. & E. to sell "juice" to the city and did not advise the purchase. The fact that the trolley people charge more for their current in places where there are no municipal plants was brought out during the discussion also the fact that even should the city contract with the C. P. & E. for current for a term of years the company could get the Utilities Commission to change the rate if they could prove that the business was being handled at a loss. Just how Painesville would gain anything by "scrapping" its light plant and placing itself at the mercy of the C. P. & E. or some other corporation is something very difficult for the average citizen to determine.

An ordinance regulating electric wiring was read by the clerk at the request of Councilman Church, who admitted he did not understand it. After the second reading there were more councilmen who failed to comprehend all the terms of the measure and it went over until a later meeting. A rates and rules ordinance met a similar fate.

Other business consisted of ordinances giving the Director of Service power to contract for coal for the water and light plants and to enter into contracts for hauling. The sidewalk committee was instructed to put on hip boots and look over the walks in the north end of town.

He Called Her Down

A choice bit of gossip has been going the rounds for the past week. The principal parties connected with the affair are well known, which makes the story all the more sensational. A husband and wife are mixed up in the scandal, and what makes it doubly startling is the fact that each of them has always had the entire respect of the community. As a matter of fact the bomb exploded at the home of this couple at the very moment at which there had arrived at their house a party of twenty or twenty-five of our best people, who had gone there to surprise the couple on their wedding anniversary. Neither of the principals expected company. The astonishment of the visitors may be imagined when they heard the husband call his wife down. He made no bones of it. It was done openly and without even a hint of apology to the guests. The shocking part of it is the fact that everyone, even the closest friends of the couple, had no idea but that their home life was ideal. Nevertheless—and we have the best of authority for the story—when the company arrived they were met at the door by the astonished husband. As soon as the first greetings were over he said "My wife is up stairs, I will call her down." And he did.

Brick Plant in Havana

A recent copy of the Havana Post, a daily paper published in Havana, Cuba, contains among other interesting items, an account of a mammoth brick factory which is being started there under the direction of Mayor W. J. Carmichael, representing the American Clay Machinery company of Willoughby and Bucyrus.

The company according to the article has been formed for the manufacture of sand lime brick and for the sale of high grade silica sand in the city of Havana.

The new company is chartered under the laws of West Virginia and is capitalized at $250,000. The initial output of the company is stated to be 40,000 bricks daily.

Plant Sweet Peas Now

If you have not already planted your sweet peas you should do so as soon as the soil can be worked. The soil should be well drained and made fertile by well rotted stable manure. The location should be such that the peas will receive an abundance of sunlight and, if possible, be protected from strong winds. For sowing the seed, dig a small trench or furrow, about 4 or 5 inches deep, smooth the surface of the soil in the bottom of this trench and sow the seed evenly, using about one ounce of seed to fifteen or eighteen feet of the row. Then cover with two inches of soil. When the seedlings are four or five inches high, thin out so that the plants will remain about six inches apart in the row.

About People and Places

Mayor W. A. Corlett of Madison was at the court house on business Tuesday.

Andrews Institute will close for Easter vacation Friday of this week and will resume Monday, April 5th.

Walter Bender, 24, of Painesville, and Helen E. Weiss, 23, of Morgan, were granted a marriage license at Jefferson Monday.

Mrs. Margaret Carraher, aged 74 years, passed away at the home of her son, John Carraher, in South Mentor, Friday morning.

Joseph Agnes and Elizabeth Hollo, Mentor Hungarians, were united in marriage by Justice Lloyd Wyman last Saturday, the services of an interpreter being necessary.

Frank Sporn, aged 47 years, died suddenly in his apartments in the Barnes block, Sunday morning, of heart failure. Mr. Sporn is survived by a wife and four children.

Oliver Ackley, aged 69 years, passed away Monday morning at the home of his son, G. M. Ackley, Mentor avenue, R. F. D. 4. A daughter Mrs. Amanda A. Neville, of Cleveland also survives.

The annual spring opening of the Up to Date department store is bringing many people to Painesville the latter part of this week. The opening will be continued until Saturday night.

Pirl Beach, an ideal lake resort owned by P. A. Johnson of Unionville is to have more cottages during the coming season. Mr. Johnson already has thirteen modern furnished summer homes, all equipped with water and gas.

The county commissioners have voted to issue $68,000 worth of bonds to pay the county, township and property owners' portion of the paving of Cleveland-Buffalo Highway No. 2 between Painesville township and Willoughby.

The house originally built by Joseph Smith and belonging to the estate of E. B. Metcalf in Kirtland, caught fire from an overheated chimney Thursday and almost burned down. C. E. McFarland discovered the flame in time and gave the alarm. The loss was about $50. The house is located beside the temple.

Agricultural Books

"A Textbook on Grasses" by A. S. Hitchcock, has recently been published by the Macmillan Co. Besides being a textbook it is reference work of considerable value for those engaged in the teaching or study of this class of farm crops. The book sells for $1.50.

"Forage Plants and Their Culture" by C. V. Piper is similar to the book on grasses mentioned above, is published by the same firm, and sells for $1.75. Mr. Piper, however, has emphasized the facts pertaining to the culture of forage plants which include legumes as well as plants of the grass family, rather than giving a botanical study of the plants.

"Home Waterworks" by C. J. Lynde and "Electricity for the Farm and Home" by Frank Koester, both published by Sturgis & Walton Co. and selling for $1.00 each, are two interesting books to those mechanically inclined. These two books form a part of the popular series, "The Young Farmer's Practical Library."

The Songs of Yesterday

Where are the good old songs we sang, the songs of yesterday? When Sweet Marie the country ran and White Wings held its sway. And where is Annie Rooney now, and where's Sweet Adeline? And Climbing Up the Golden Stairs we used to think was fine. We sang Down Went McGinty and Two Little Girls in Blue and Maggie Murphy's Home could get an encore out of you. Sweet Belle Mahone has passed away, Good-Bye, My Lover, Good-Bye; After the Ball, you'll recollect, once brought tears to your eyes. And where is dear old Peek-a-Boo and Mother Told Me So? And how we long for Oscar Louise and charming Mollie O. Where are the good old songs we sang, the songs that once held sway? Just hum them o'er and feel the pang—the yearn for yesterday.

Success With Cover Crops

Professor W. Paddock of the College of Agriculture says that one of the secrets of success with the cover crop system of orcharding is to get the crop turned under early in the spring. This is for the purpose of inducing soil activities to begin as early as possible. Early cultivation also has some effect in warming and drying the land. Favorable weather in February and March should then be taken advantage of and at any time during these months when the soil is in a condition to be worked, orchard ground may be plowed to advantage.

THE TATTLER SAYS

Every now and then I meet a masculine sort of [illegible] who gives me the impression that if she had been in Eve's place she would have rapped the Snake on the bean with a limb of the Apple Tree and saved Adam a heap of worry and trouble.

AMERICA WINS

William Barton Captures and Brings Home Part of England.

William J. Barton arrived from England Tuesday, bringing with him a wife. Mr. Barton sailed in February, reaching Liverpool on the 27th and was united in marriage Friday, March 12, with Miss Hilda Strange of Gravesend, Kent. The couple left the next day on their wedding journey to America and will make their home for the present with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Barton, 413 South St. Clair street.

"I saw little of the war," said Mr. Barton, in reply to a reporter's question. "I went over on the Lusitania, the English boat that flew the American flag and had intended to return on the same craft but the boat was needed for government purposes and we was obliged to take a slower one. Not a warship was seen on the way over. On the return trip a British submarine in the Irish sea and a British cruiser just outside of New York were the only war craft sighted. There was no panic among the passengers and little thought of floating mines."

In England you see troops training,—that new army which will be ready to take the field when the war really opens in the Spring; wounded Belgian officers are also seen, but there is little to indicate that the nation is at war. Stores are running, factories are working full time, theatres and public houses are open and there are the usual number of men on the streets and in all public places.

The air peril is not regarded very seriously by the English residents and it is a popular belief that the German air craft kill more Germans than anything else. At night the streets are in darkness and big guns have been mounted on the high buildings but the people go about their business with little thought of an air raid.

Troops are moved in England—but even the soldiers know nothing of their destination. A railroad may be taken over by the government and for a day or two all train schedules will be annulled and the road used to transport troops.

The war has not increased the cost of living to any great extent Mr. Barton says. The price of beer has doubled but there is but a slight advance in the cost of food stuffs.

Mr. Barton had no trouble in getting out of England, in fact fewer questions were asked there than on this side.

Substitute For Bread

Officials of the U. S. Department of Agriculture are accredited with the statement that, if wheat remains at its present high figure or continues to rise and there is a corresponding increase in the price of bread. Potatoes may, to a considerable extent, be substituted for bread. Probably the greatest drawback in making the substitution will be the ordinary human appetite for bread. The same authorities claim that potatoes assist in neutralizing an acid condition of the body and, therefore, are desirable food in combination with meat, fish, and other animal foods.

Value of 1914 Farm Crops

All of the gold ever produced in the United States, according to a recent estimation of the U. S. Geological Survey is equal in value to only twice the farm value of the 1914 corn crop. The value of the golden grain for 1914 is greater than the value of all the silver ever produced in the United States. In fact the value of the farm products of the United States for 1914 is equal to more than one-half the value of all the gold and silver ever produced in this country.

Perry Woman Dies Suddenly

Mrs. Martha Fobes, a resident of the north part of Perry, passed away at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. Mrs. Fobes had been having grip but had so far recovered as to be able to be about the house, and went upstairs Sunday morning and expired in a very few minutes after reaching the room above. Heart failure is the immediate cause of her death. Mrs. Fobes is 75 years of age and has lived in Perry the past 45 years. She leaves a son, one sister and two grandchildren who mourn her loss.

MAYOR PRODS COUNCIL

Rises to Inquire Why Subway Matter Doesn't Progress

Mayor Malin dug up the subway question Monday evening after it had slept peacefully for several months and it is likely that the matter will again get as far as the letter writing stage.

Server M. A. Tuttle thought that there would be no money for this kind of work for some years to come, unless the tax laws are changed and City Engineer Downer admitted that for a long time the New York Central people had been keeping still in six or seven different languages.

"Time something was done" insisted the Mayor and the council finally decided that the engineer should punch up the railway officials.

It is understood that they will agree to build a subway at State street providing the St. Clair street crossing is closed.

Legal Tangle Solved

Solomon may have been some wise old judge but he had little on Justice E. G. Huntington at that.

A man who was in search of free legal advice visited Justice Huntington's office last week. No, he didn't want to bring a suit, and he didn't want to employ council—all he wanted was an opinion on a legal matter.

Briefly stated, he had contracted to drill a well for a neighbor, but when he failed to get water friend neighbor had declined to pay for the job and now the question was, how to get the money.

A little thing like that did not stagger Justice Huntington for a minute. His free advice was as follows: "The man refuses to pay for the well so it belongs to you. You can't keep it on his premises but there is nothing in the law to prevent you from pulling the well up, cutting it into proper lengths and selling it for post holes."

Davis—Nims Nuptials

Mrs. Mattie H. Davis has announced the marriage of her daughter, Charlotte Elizabeth, to Mr. Louis Woodruff Nims, of Cleveland, formerly of this city, which took place at her home, 119 Wood street, on Saturday at 4 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. Lee Howard in the presence of the immediate families. The bride wore her going away gown of blue cloth with a corsage bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley. Decorations of pink and green were used throughout the house, the living-room being especially beautiful with pink snap-dragons, and the dining room with Killarney roses. Mr. and Mrs. Nims left for an eastern trip and will later be at home in Cleveland.

Grange News

The Painesville Grange contest for getting new members resulted in securing twenty-four new members and reinstating a number of old ones, all together will total an addition of over thirty to the all ready prosperous Painesville Grange. Capt. Harry King and team win the supper, to be served by Capt. Harry Crofoot and team, the evening of initiation of new members.

Death at North Madison

Charles W. Russell, a brother of Mrs. Elmer Mott of this city, passed away at his home in North Madison, Tuesday, March 16. Mr. Russell was 57 years of age and is survived by a wife, Mrs. Grace E. Russell, a sister, Mrs. Elmer Mott, and a mother, Mrs. Nettie Bosworth. The funeral was held from the home in North Madison, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

NOT A GOOD FIREMAN

Wick Hathaway Makes Dismal Failure of Fire Kindling Job

Wick Hathaway has a fine storage building just west of Madison where he takes care of his berry plants and other nursery stock and on the second floor he has fitted up fine office rooms.

P. A. Johnson of Unionville and a Herald reporter were callers at the storage house Monday morning and Mr. Hathaway took the visitors through the building. The offices were chilly and Hathaway excused himself for a moment and gathered up a lot of kindling and coal.

Arranging the fire-making material in the stove in the proper manner Hathaway reached up on a window ledge, secured an old coffee pot nearly full of some liquid and dumped the contents over the coal and then applied a match.

The first match sputtered feebly for a few seconds and then went out and the second followed suit. A piece of paper was then lighted but it also refused to burn. Hathaway could not understand it but decided to use the contents of the coffee pot once more.

Picking up the pot he raised the cover and then something induced him to smell of the contents. "H—l" remarked Wick, "no wonder the fire didn't burn. Somebody filled up this oil can with water and used it for a plant sprinkler."

And, honestly, it was warm enough around there after that without a fire.

FATHER-SON BANQUET

Eighty Men and Boys Enjoy an Evening Together.

Tuesday evening the Kirtland Y. M. C. A. held a father and son banquet in the Town Hall. Over eighty men and boys surrounded the well filled banquet table and the spirit of good fellowship prevailed among all.

Dr. Russell of Kirtland acted as toastmaster and with a few well chosen remarks introduced Mr. T. B. Lanham, State County Y. M. C. A. Secretary. Mr. Lanham spoke on country life and told of the advantages that it had over the city. He read several poems that expressed the lack of knowledge that many city people have of the country.

After Mr. Lanham spoke Mr. T. B. West, Vice Chairman, was called upon. Briefly Mr. West spoke of the responsibility the fathers hold in helping to make the farm a pleasant place for the boy. He urged the boys to stay at home on the farm. Several other men and boys were called on and all expressed their desire to see the Y. M. C. A. grow and turn out good boys.

At the close it was voted to make the Father and Son Banquet an annual affair and it will be something that the fathers and sons of Kirtland will look forward to with pleasure.

The Kirtland boys and all who helped make this first banquet a great success deserve much credit and praise and it is hoped that it will be but a beginning of greater things not only for the Y. M. C. A. in Kirtland, but that it may stimulate the whole County Association.

Attempted Burglary.

Isaac Ronni of Fairport is in the county jail where he will await the action of the grand jury. Ronni was arranged before Justice Lloyd Wyman on a charge of attempted burglary and entered a plea of guilty.

It is said that the young man tried to enter a Fairport pool room and while he admitted this fact, Ronni claimed that he did not intend to steal anything.

Worthless Trees Sold to Orchard Men in Geneva

According to reports some Geneva fruit growers have suffered heavy losses through buying their trees of nurserymen located in other states. W. J. Speer purchased a consignment of 1500 peach trees from a Maryland concern and experts claim that he will not get fifty good trees out of the entire shipment.

W. T. Mann, a fruit expert, after examining the trees stated that he never knew of a nursery firm sending out such stock. He did not know how the trees could get in such bad condition unless they were broken [illegible]

[illegible] sent a representative to Geneva to look over the trees and will try and force the nursery company to disgorge, but the fruit grower will still be out of the use of his land for a year, besides all the work put on the young orchard during the past season.

There is one way to avoid occurrences of this kind, and that is to buy orchard and nursery stock of growers right at home. Lake and Ashtabula counties have many fine nurseries run by men whose word can be depended on and the nurseries are so accessible that fruit growers can easily look over the growing stock [illegible]

History of the Maple is Sweetest Story Ever Told

The maple trees of the nation produce 47,000,000 pounds of maple sugar annually—about half a pound for each person. And the demand for the product, it is estimated, is ten times greater than the supply. Despite this fact, statistics show that less than half the trees available for the purpose are utilized. This means that a good many farmers throughout the country—and Ohio is no exception to the rule—are neglecting to take advantage of an important source of income.

The season for sugar making is at hand, and the farmer might note that it comes at a time when there is little other work to claim his attention. He might take this into consideration, too, when he adds young trees from time to time to his wood lot. Convinced now, as most farmers are, of the value of the wood lot, it ought to be but a short step further to the realization that by judicious selection of varieties of trees planted, it can be made to yield an income both in spring and in autumn. A combination of sugar maples and nut trees would produce the desired result, and would be worth more in the long run than the plantation set out for the sole purpose of producing fence posts.

Science has turned its inquisitorial eye more than once on the sugar tree, but so far has failed to solve its mysteries. Investigation has simply recorded certain facts, it has not explained them. It is known, for instance, that the sugar maple is far more particular than the uninitiated suspect. For its sap to flow the nights must be cool, clear and still, with a temperature at least ten degrees below freezing; the days must be warm and sunny, with the temperature rising to 30 degrees above freezing, and finally, there must be a fall of rain or snow after four or five successive days of such weather or the sap will cease to flow.

But there is hardly more of a mystery here than there is in the fact that the farmer who has the trees to tap fails to tap them. He needs no demonstration to prove to him that the weather conditions favorable for a flow of sugar sap are favorable for little work about the farm. And he needs, surely, no reminder that an eager and profitable market awaits the product. Why, then, only half the product available is collected and why half the natural resource is wasted, is perplexing to the [illegible]

RUSSIANS RENEW FURIOUS ATTACKS

Begin Gigantic Battle With Foe Along the Whole Carpathian Front.

CZAR'S ARMY NOW OCCUPIES PRZEMYSL

Capture of the Key to Prussia Gives Russia Control of Virtually All of Eastern Galicia and Releases Army of About 120,000.

HOW TO PRONOUNCE PRZEMYSL.

Jay-meezle, with the accent on the Meez and giving the J the soft sound as in French.

Or as though it were spelled Shay-meezle.

London, England.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegram Co. from Vienna, by way of Copenhagen, says that a gigantic battle has begun along the whole Carpathian front. The Russians everywhere along the line have been strongly reinforced and are attacking with marked stubbornness. Violent conflicts are raging in the vicinity of Dukla, Uszok and Lupkow passes. These are the three principal passes in the Carpathians, nearest Przemysl, from which they are distant only about 50 miles. It is believed here that the news of heavy fighting at these points means that the Russians are following up quickly the advantage which they have gained by the fall of that fortress.

Russians Occupy Przemysl.

Petrograd, Russia.—The garrison of Przemysl capitulated Monday to the investing Russian army. The ending of the long siege gives Russia control of virtually all of eastern Galicia and releases the Russian army of about 120,000 which has been besieging the city, for service elsewhere.

The war office reports that 9 Austrian generals, more than 300 officers and 50,000 men were taken.

Nothing since the capture of Lemberg and the victorious sweep of the Russian army through Galicia in the beginning of the war has aroused an equal degree of enthusiasm. Newspaper offices and army headquarters were bombarded with telephone inquiries. Crowds stood in a pelting snowstorm before the bulletin boards. The Russian general, Selimwamoff, commanding the investing army, has been decorated with St. George's cross.

Victors Are Cheered.

A heavy snowstorm failed to check the enthusiastic demonstrations in which the civil and military populations united when the fall of Przemysl was announced. The crowds floundering in deep drifts which tied up street traffic, cheered the officers and soldiers who remained to participate in the celebrations.

From the Kazan cathedral the strains of the national anthem swelled in volume as the crowd gathered, and from other points throughout the city, mysteriously hidden behind the dense curtain of falling snow, music burst forth and added to the general spirit of enthusiasm.

The fate of the fortress had been inevitable since the failure of the last Austrian drive from the southward for its relief. There have been daily evidence of a shortage of provisions and reports of the ravages of disease reached the besiegers from time to time.

Troops and Guns Pound at Forts.

Gradually the lines about the city were drawn tighter, until within the last fortnight Russian riflemen were within range of the outer works. Russian artillery pounded the forts ceaselessly.

Austrian prisoners from Przemysl, captured shortly before the garrison surrendered and taken to Lemberg, say the fortress for a long time was in a condition of semi famine, lacking bread and other foods.

Except for the horses of the Austrian officers no animal, they say, was visible in the town, all having been killed to feed the soldiers, who recently had little to eat except conserves, which led to much typhoid and other sickness. Conditions were such, the prisoners added, that they almost led to a mutiny of the troops, who urged that the city be surrendered.

Key to Austrian Empire.

Przemysl has been described as the key to the Austrian empire. The opinion has been expressed by Russian commentators that its occupation would facilitate operations against the interior of Austria, which hitherto had been attended by only insignificant results. Beyond Przemysl lies the great and prosperous wheat country of Austria.

The city lies 60 miles west of Lemberg, which the Russians captured several months ago. It is a thriving community of about 50,000 inhabitants, the large majority of whom are Poles. It is situated on the San river and is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop and a Greek Catholic Uniat bishop. It was founded in the eighth century.

Girl Played Man Four Years.

Springfield, Mass.—The death of Miss Florestine Albertine Beaudoin, whose body was found in Willimansett Saturday night, revealed that she had lived disguised as a man for four years. She resided with her sister, Mrs. Mary Le Chappalle, and as "Albert Beaudoin" worked in the paper mills of Holyoke.

The only motive suggested for her long masquerade is that she could earn more as a man for the support of herself and her sister, who is a widow. Her death was due to heart trouble.

Hypnotist Revives Girl's Voice.

Beloit, Wis.—Disaster confronted Beloit college seniors recently five hours before time to stage the annual college play. Marie Radcliffe, Milwaukee, leading woman, appeared for the final rehearsal unable to speak above a whisper.

Dr. K. T. Waugh, professor of psychology, who, Dec. 21, cured by hypnotism the blindness of A. H. Chase, River Falls, Wis., solved the predicament. He treated Miss Radcliffe and in one hour she played the part with [illegible] in her voice.

HOUSTON B. TEEHEE

Houston B. Teehee of Tahlequah, Okla., has just been appointed registrar of the United States treasury. Mr. Teehee is a Cherokee Indian, a former member of the Oklahoma state senate and at present tribal attorney for the Cherokee nation.

TELLS OFFICERS OF LAW THAT HE SLEW ANOTHER

Man Walks in Police Court and Says He Shot When Victim Tried to Force Him to Swallow Poison.

Cleveland, O.—Stretched out on his bed, the counterpane soaked with blood that oozed from a bullet hole over his heart, George E. Kent, 28, was found dead in his home at 10719 Morison av. early Thursday evening when his brother Ray ran upstairs to call him for supper. The stunned family at first thought it was a case of suicide.

More than an hour later, shortly before 8 p. m., a man walked into central police station and approached Sergt. Vlach.

"I've killed a man," the sergeant said the stranger told him.

Police had heard of no shooting, and at first did not believe the statement. Officers took him to the detectives' rooms on an upper floor of the station and Lieutenant of Detectives Sterling began to question him.

Behind closed doors the detectives listened to the man's story, and afterward announced that the visitor confessed to the shooting of George Kent. The man gave the name detectives said, of George Scheu and said he lived at 10810 Navarre ct. Police immediately sent to the home of Kent on Morison av. and confirmed the fact that he had been found dead.

According to detectives the man who said he was Scheu told them he had been at Kent's residence and that they had quarreled. He told Lieut. Sterling, that officer said, that Kent tried to force him to drink poison, and that, when he refused Kent jerked a revolver from his pocket. He seized the revolver, police quoted him as stating, and fired the shot that ended Kent's life.

At Kent's home it was said a visitor had left the young man's room just prior to the finding of his body. His mother, who sent Kent's brother Roy to call him, and the brother both were in the house when the visitor was in Kent's room but did not hear a shot. Kent was an electrician.

WOMAN OFFICIAL ROBBED

NEW YORK'S COMMISSIONER OF CORRECTION IS 'TAKEN IN' BY STRANGE MAN.

New York City.—Katherine B. Davis, who as commissioner of correction is in charge of pickpockets and petty crooks, is sadly thinking that she has not learned much about their ways after all. The reason lies in the call of an immaculately dressed young man at her private office on the 24th floor of the Municipal building. The young man asked permission to look at her telephone book, did so, thanked her profusely and departed. A few minutes later Miss Davis discovered that her pocketbook containing numerous passes, a check for $25 and $50 in cash had gone with him.

Fire Ruins Passover Bread.

Cincinnati, O.—Fire caused $10,000 damage in the Manischewitz matzos bakery warehouse at 2100 W. 8th st. Five hundred thousand pounds of matzos was destroyed. This large stock was being carried owing to the near approach of the feast of the passover.

Upholds Two Convictions.

San Francisco, Cal.—The convictions of F. Drew Caminetti, son of Anthony Caminetti, United States commissioner general of immigration, and Maury I. Diggs, former state architect, under the Mann white slave act, were affirmed by the United States circuit court of appeals.

Diggs and Caminetti were tried and convicted before District Judge W. C. Van Fleet in 1913 for the transportation of Lola Norris and Marsha Warrington from Sacramento, Cal., to Reno, Nev., for immoral purposes.

Boy Dies Playing Wild West.

New York City.—Little Thomas Souteramo, five, didn't have anybody to play with so he went out in his back yard, got a piece of twine and started a solitary game of wild west.

Having no one else, he lassoed himself.

A moment later he stepped on the loose end of the twine, tripped himself, and pulled the noose so tight he strangled to death.

His mother was in the house only a few yards distant, but the noose was so tight he couldn't call for help.

MRS. ANGLE FAINTS AS JURY FREES HER

Woman Acquitted of Manslaughter Charge in Connection With Man's Death.

COURT SPECTATORS GO WILD WITH JOY

Freed Defendant and Father Driven to Station in Auto Where Daughter and Father Take the Train for Stamford.

Bridgeport, Ct.—Mrs. Helen M. Angle was acquitted of the charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of her admirer, Waldo R. Ballou, at Stamford on the night of June 23, 1914. When the jury announced its verdict, Mrs. Angle fell in a dead faint in the arms of her father, while 400 spectators, most of whom were women, went wild with joy, the women crying and laughing by turns.

Surrounded by Hysterical Crowd.

Restored to consciousness and half carried to the street, Mrs. Angle at once became the center of another hysterical crowd, which pressed about her until dispersed by the police and deputies.

The freed woman entered an automobile with her father and was driven to the railroad station, where she boarded a train for Stamford. Another crowd was at the station in Stamford, but Mrs. Angle was hurried to the home of her father, where she was greeted by the most intimate friends of the family, who had been notified of the verdict by telephone.

On leaving the courtroom State's Prosecutor Homer S. Cummings said: "I am heartily glad the trial is over. It has been a severe ordeal for all. The case was fully and fairly tried and the verdict should be accepted without question."

Attorney Jacob B. Klein for Mrs. Angle, said: "The verdict is a just and proper one and meets with popular approval."

The jury was out only 1 hour and 45 minutes.

Accusation Against Woman.

The accusation on which Mrs. Angle was brought to trial was that of having caused her aged suitor, Waldo R. Ballou, to plunge to his death down the stairs leading to her apartment in the Rippowam building.

She was arrested shortly after Ballou had been found unconscious and dying at the street entrance to the building. Owing to her nervous condition her trial had been postponed several times.

State Attorney Homer S. Cummings made the closing argument for the state.

Ballou, Mr. Cummings declared, was precipitated down the stairs in the Rippowam building on the night of June 23, and half an hour later was dragged down to the doorway. The conviction or acquittal of Mrs. Angle, he said, depended on the question whether he fell by accident or violence. The state claimed that Ballou was plunged down the stairs by violence, he declared.

Fell Down Backward.

Mr. Ballou plunged downstairs backward, the state claimed. Taking from the table the dented, blood stained hat of Ballou, he held it before the jury.

"I would that that dent had a tongue to speak," he said. "How it got there I don't know. But I do know that this flat iron (the electric flat iron) fits with remarkable precision into this dent."

The state did not claim that Mrs. Angle had wiped up all the stairs and landing after the tragedy, he said, but that she had attempted to and was interrupted in her work.

The trouble with the defendant's explanation of the various circumstances connected with Ballou's death, he said, was that they came too late, after a lapse of several months, and did not spring from her lips instantly when first questioned.

GIRL IS FOUND SLASHED

BODY IS RIPPED OPEN FROM THIGHS TO THROAT BY A JACK THE RIPPER.

New York City.—Horribly mutilated by a degenerate Jack the Ripper, the body of little Leonore Anna Cohen, a pretty black-haired child of five, was found in the hallway of her home, ripped open from thighs to throat. In one pudgy fist the little dead girl clasped a stick of lemon candy she had been eating when attacked. Beside her sat a jug of milk for which she had been sent by her parents less than 10 minutes before. The murderer had carefully set it aside. Not a drop was spilled.

The wounds show that the girl was slashed with a knife, the blade of which must have measured at least eight inches, but the knife was not found.

Farmer Gets Five Years.

Lima, O.—Eugene Thompson, a well known Hardin county farmer, living near Alger, O., was convicted of white slavery in the United States district court at Toledo. Thompson was sentenced to five years in the Moundsville (W. Va.) penitentiary. The defendant was accused of enticing Mary Shull and Elta Ellis from their homes last Thanksgiving and taking them to Jamestown, N. Y., thence to Chicago and other cities in the west. He finally abandoned them in Iowa, it was charged.

Students Are Fined.

Ada, O.—The sophomore class flag hoisted in the apex of the high school building Thursday at midnight started trouble here. Three seniors tried to shoot down the offending banner, but instead of hitting the flag they cracked a town ordinance against firearms. Mayor Montgomery assessed them $5 and costs each.

School Superintendent [illegible] ordered the [illegible] and sent the [illegible].

MISS ANNE SEYMOUR JONES

Miss Anne Seymour Jones is the pretty daughter of Congressman and Mrs. W. A. Jones of Virginia and her engagement to marry Lieut. Roland Hopkins of the field artillery has just been announced. No date has been set for the wedding, but it will probably be celebrated in June.

PROBE OF THIRTY-SIX AX MURDERS IS REOPENED

New Investigation Begins When Negro Is Taken Into Custody On Charge of Killing Three in Home.

VICTIMS OF AX MAN.

Colorado Springs, Col., September, 1911—H. C. Wayne, wife and child and Mrs. A. J. Burnham and two children.

Monmouth, Ill., September, 1911—William E. Dawson, wife and daughter.

Ellsworth, Kan., October, 1911—William Showman, wife and three children.

Paola, Kan., June 1912—Rollin Hudson and wife.

Villisca, Ia., June, 1912—J. A. Moore, four children and two girl guests.

Columbia, Mo., December, 1912—Mrs. Mary J. Wilson and Mrs. George Moore.

Blue Island, Ill., July, 1914—Jacob Neslesia, his wife, their daughter and the latter's infant.

Hartsburg, Mo., October, 1914—Mrs. B. F. Matthews, 80.

St. Louis, Mo.—The investigation of 30 ax murders committed in five states since 1911 was reopened here after the arrest of Loving Mitchell, a negro. The warrant on which Mitchell was arrested charges him with the murder of William E. Dawson, his wife and daughter, who were slain in their home at Monmouth, Ill., the night of Sept. 30, 1911.

Since that time communities in Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Colorado and Kansas have been scenes of similar crimes. In every instance the murderer with an ax killed an entire family as they slept. Scores of persons have been arrested, but invariably the police were forced to release them for lack of evidence.

In the house at Monmouth, where the Dawson family lived, the police found an electric flashlight on which were scratched the words "Colorado Springs" and "Lovey." This was practically the only bit of evidence ever found by the authorities after the discovery of the bodies of the victims.

Mitchell's arrest followed a search of more than three years. He had been employed near Monmouth, but disappeared after the murders in the Dawson home. He was traced to Independence, Mo., and from there to St. Louis. The prisoner was taken back to Monmouth by Chief of Police Morrison and Mayor Brown of that city. Before leaving, Chief Morrison said:

"Dawson, his wife and daughter were murdered by three negroes, two men and a woman; revenge for attentions which the negroes believed Dawson had shown their relatives was the motive for the crime; the negro woman in the case I will arrest soon; the other man is in the Joliet (Ill.) penitentiary."

He added that he had no evidence that these negroes were connected with any other ax murders.

Thief Returns Stolen Gems.

Akron, O.—Neatly wrapped in a bundle and accompanied by a note which told of the writer's recent conversion by Evangelist Charles Reign Scoville, $50 worth of jewels stolen from Mrs. J. McKay, Keeney st., last summer have been returned to her. Mrs. McKay found the bundle in her mail box.

Forty dollars, the former thief wrote he had stolen at the same time, will be returned as soon as he can save it. He asked Mrs. McKay's forgiveness, but did not sign his name.

Reunited After Sixteen Years.

Green Bay, Wis.—Efforts to find Mrs. Cora Naylor, the mother of Blanche Naylor of Madison, were successful when Mrs. Naylor appeared at the Brown County Woman's building and announced she was the person being sought. The Madison girl, according to her mother, was sent to the State Home for Dependent Children at Sparta about 16 years ago after her father had deserted them. [illegible]

SAYS SLUSH FUND TOTALED $6,000

Assistant Police Chief Tells of Collecting From Saloonkeepers and Others.

READS LIST WHILE GIVING TESTIMONY

Officer Who Pleaded Guilty Declares He Refused to Take Checks as He 'Didn't Want Any Evidence Like That Left Around.'

Indianapolis, Ind.—John F. Nugent, the assistant chief of police under Mayor Donn M. Roberts, detailed at the trial of the Terre Haute election case how he had collected a slush fund, totaling almost $6,000, from saloonkeepers and gambling room proprietors for registration and election purposes last fall.

He read a list of saloon and gambling house owners and amounts of money, which he said Mayor Roberts had told him to collect. Nugent has pleaded guilty. He said he refused to take checks as he "didn't want any evidence like that left around."

Implicates Indicted Judge.

Judge Eli H. Redman, who, with Roberts, is among the 28 defendants on trial, also did some collecting for his own campaign for judge from the same class of people, according to Nugent, and Roberts became angry.

Shea brothers, saloon and gambling house proprietors, were assessed $500 for the election, said Nugent, but he collected only $400, the Sheas telling him that Judge Redman had collected the other $100. That night, the witness continued, when he turned over the day's collection to Roberts, as was his custom, and explained that Shea brothers would contribute only $400 because of Redman, Roberts ordered him to go back to Shea and learn "what Redman means butting in on me." Redman also collected from other saloonkeepers, Nugent said.

Some Didn't Pay in Full.

Some of the men did not pay the amount they were assessed, the assistant chief of police stated. George Woodhall, who is among those on trial, was assessed $50, but paid only $25, said Nugent.

"Donn (meaning Mayor Roberts) told me that Woodall would only be given 25 favors, or one favor for each dollar he contributed," said the witness.

Frank C. Nally, United States district attorney, contends that of the $6,000 collected by Nugent and turned over to Roberts only $700 was paid into the regular Democratic campaign fund. Nugent also told of going to negro saloonkeepers, on orders of Mayor Roberts, and telling them just how many men were to be registered from each saloon on election day.

SAVED BY OWN SERUM, BUT IS RAVING MANIAC

Doctor Who, After Years of Patient Research, Isolated Deadly Meningitis Germ, Is Now Patient in Hospital.

Trenton, N. J.—A victim of the deadly meningitis germ, which after years of patient research he himself isolated, Dr. Frederick Hammond of the staff of the New Jersey State hospital and a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., is now a patient at the hospital. Prompt application by Dr. Harry A. Cotton, medical director of the institution, of a treatment for the scourge which Dr. Hammond himself discovered, saved the patient's life, but he is now a raving maniac.

Dr. Hammond, while working as a pathologist at the state hospital last December, became infected with a disease germ which attacks the blood. He had been working long hours in the laboratory and his physical strength was at low ebb, his friends say, so that when the tiny germ lodged in his system—probably breathed in while he was making a microscopic examination—he was unable to combat the ravages, development of the disease was rapid and ended in spinal meningitis.

Contrary to the advice of his colleagues, Dr. Cotton immediately prepared to resort to a serum treatment which Dr. Hammond had discovered. Medical authorities agreed that such treatment would be fatal, but Dr. Cotton decided to go ahead against the advice of the experts and follow the course laid down by Dr. Hammond in his experiments. The cerebro-spinal fluid was drawn from the spinal canal and a serum injected in its place. Dr. Hammond lived. His own discovery had saved his life, but it left him a maniac after the reaction. Dr. Hammond had been employed in research work at the hospital for 10 years.

Fifty Miners Are Killed.

Vancouver, British Columbia.—Fifty miners were killed and as many more injured early Monday by a snowslide which swept away several bunk houses at the Britannia mine at Howe Sound, B. C., according to a dispatch received here. Besides the bunk houses, part of the aerial tramway of the mine was carried away.

The mine level is on the side of a mountain and nearly 5,000 feet above the shore of the sound. The tramway destroyed extended from the mine to the beach.

Slays Wife and Self.

New York City.—Howard Boocock, treasurer of the Astor Trust Co., shot and killed his wife as she sat at the piano in their beautiful home at 35 E. 74th st., then turned the revolver against his own forehead and blew out his brains.

The murder and suicide occurred in the music room of the Boocock home. [illegible]

Seven Young Buccaneers.

Seven boys from the National Nautical school, at Portishead, Somerset, England, engaged in a remarkable exploit.

The boys had been on a cruise in their training vessel, Polly, and on returning to headquarters took French leave and rowed up the Severn several miles in one of the ship's boats. BIG PROBLEM NOW FACES LAWMAKERS

Overcrowding of State Institutions One of Most Perplexing Questions.

MILLIONS NEEDED TO SATISFY DEMANDS

We Will Try to Give a Little Relief to Each Institution and Then Later Work Out Some Permanent Remedy, Says Solon.

By D. A. DONOVAN.
Special Columbus Correspondent.

ALTHOUGH the general assembly is confronted by numerous perplexing questions, none is more troublesome than that involved in the overcrowding of state institutions and in the possible means of relieving the congested situation. Members of the finance committees of the house and senate are meeting the overcrowding difficulty at practically every institution and the committeemen say they are being appalled by the seriousness of the problem, which they say is far more acute than people generally imagine. At an institution yet visited, they declare, have they failed to be met by demands for greater accommodations to care for the patients. "It will take millions to satisfy these demands," a member of the house committee said. "And since we haven't the millions to spend," he added, "it will have to resolve itself into a case where we will try to give a little relief to each institution and then try later to work out some permanent remedy. The difficulty incidentally resolves itself into one of taxation, since essentially the financial question is the one uppermost. Much of the trouble is due to the large increase in population in all of the state institutions in late years. The biggest increase is noted at the Ohio penitentiary, where there are now more than 1,700 prisoners. The capacity of the prison is not much more than enough to accommodate 1,000 prisoners. The situation is somewhat similar at the Mansfield reformatory, where, with a capacity of 900, the population is more than 1,200. The capacity of other state institutions and the present population of each is herewith given to show to a degree the crowded condition which prevails at the present time. Institutions first named are hospitals for insane.

Institution	Capacity	Population
Athens	1,254	1,446
Cleveland	1,300	1,850
Columbus	1,768	1,888
Dayton	845	1,310
Toledo	1,608	1,847
Massillon	1,576	1,795
Longview	1,000	1,031
Gallipolis (for epileptics)	1,190	1,457

Wants to Be Secretary.

Charles H. Bryson of Athens, who is a member of the state civil service commission and whose term expires in August, wants to be secretary of that body. He was appointed on the commission as a Bull Mooser. He gets $4,000 salary, while the pay of the secretaryship is $3,600. He has taken the examination for the secretaryship, which was resigned by L. L. Faris, who has just taken a $1,200 job with the federal government. If Bryson is elected secretary, he will resign as a member of the commission, which will create a vacancy, which Gov. Willis will fill by the appointment of a Republican.

Crowding of State Institutions.

The crowding of state institutions is a question with which the finance committees of the general assembly are most seriously wrestling right now. Practically every institution is demanding more buildings and greater facilities to care for their inmates, and if all the requests were granted, members of the committees say, at least $10,000,000 would be doled out in the next few years. But the solons are not able to see where the money is coming from, and while they will try to give a little help to each institution, they will have to turn a deaf ear to most of the demands.

Old Question Is Raised.

The action of both houses of the general assembly in approving the new oil inspection bill and attaching to it an emergency clause so that it will become immediately effective, raised the old question of whether oil inspection after all is really necessary. More than seven years ago W. L. Finley, then oil inspector, reported to the governor that economic considerations made all oil of standard quality and that inspection was superfluous.

Cannot Draw Extra Pay.

The school code enacted by the last legislature provided that county school boards could call on county surveyors for aid in establishing new school district boundaries. In a ruling just given by the attorney general it is held that the surveyor cannot draw any extra pay for this additional work.

Student Under Gov. Willis.

Charles G. Williams of Coshocton, new state movie censor, is the latest former Ada pupil to land a place under the present state administration. He was a student under Gov. Willis at that place. He will have charge of the prosecution of all violators of the censorship law. He said that he would censor films from the standpoint of an average man and woman and would eliminate such parts of films as would injure the morals of children. He said that he would not censor like a prude. Williams is a lawyer. He is 31 years old.

Puts 'Crimp' in Plan.

Attorney General Turner has put a "crimp" in the plan to run a special exhibit train from Ohio to the Panama exposition, designed to make a tour of all the principal cities in the west on the way out and back. He says that the $25,000 appropriated for such an exhibit at the exposition may not be used for special train purposes. Those who have been planning the proposed trip counted on Gov. Willis going on the train and entertaining himself as a [illegible].

Will Have Use of State Money.

All banks which offered 4 per cent or more for the use of the public funds during the next two years of the [illegible] W. Archer recently have been designated depositories for such money, according to announcement of Treasurer Archer, as chairman of the state board of deposits. One hundred and two banks bid 4 per cent and better for a total of $3,394,000, and each one of these has been made a depository and each will be awarded the amount of money asked for. Banks which bid from 3.80 per cent up to the nearest point below 4 per cent will be designated depositories later, but it is not likely they will get very much of the state's funds. The banks bidding 4 per cent and upwards will be supplied first, and if there is any money available over and above their needs then the wants of the lower bidders will be cared for. The low bidding banks will be the first to be called on for withdrawals when the treasurer needs to call in money to meet current expenditures. It is not likely that any bank which bid lower than 3.80 will get any of the state's money. Treasurer Archer has notified banks which have been carrying the state's funds during the past two years and which were unsuccessful at the recent bidding that they must arrange to surrender as early as possible these deposits. Just as fast as this money comes in it will be sent out to the banks made depositories. The highest bidders will get the funds first.

Will Probe Lobby Stories.

The majority forces in the general assembly have finally determined to go "to the bottom" of the various stories that have been circulating connecting assemblymen with lobbyists whose practices, according to the reports, have consisted of dining and wining the solons in luxurious fashion. The majority leaders say that although they were inclined at first to treat the "lobby" stories lightly, they have been published so widely that they merit more serious attention. Accordingly an investigation resolution is being prepared at the instance of the speaker of the house, and while the probing is going on there will be summoned not only some of the lobbyists, but also the newspaper men and any others who may have any facts in their possession. "If there is anything improper going on we are the ones who want to know it first," says the speaker of the house in a statement.

First Aid to Injured.

First aid to the injured equipment has been installed in the chamber of the house of representatives as a result of the sudden illness recently of Representative W. O. Jackson of Springfield, stricken with acute indigestion while sitting in his seat during a legislative session. Hypodermic injections of stimulating drugs were necessary to save his life. The drugs and hypodermic needle could be secured only at a drug store by a physician and only after the usual process of certifying the legitimate need for the drug. Dr. Van S. Deaton of Miami county, a member of the house, had to make a hasty trip to the drug store on the Capitol square and during the time necessary Representative Jackson was in a critical condition. The next day a supply of emergency drugs and apparatus was bought and installed in a cupboard.

Consult With Federal Official.

Because of a difference of opinion between federal and local authorities as to which should receive cases for prosecution under the laws for the regulation of the sale of narcotics, State Drug Inspectors W. R. Hower and E. W. Herrington have gone to Washington to consult with the federal attorney general as to what course state officials should pursue to push such prosecutions. Now that the federal law against the illegal sale of "dope" is in effect the local officials are contending that they are without jurisdiction to handle such cases. Federal officers say the new federal law makes no change in jurisdiction and that state courts can receive such cases as heretofore.

'Bible Reading' Bills Appear.

Whether it shall be mandatory upon teachers to read the Bible in Ohio schools is one of the questions which the general assembly shall be asked to pass upon before it finally adjourns. The "Bible reading" bills are appearing in the assembly now for the first time, backed for the most part by the Cincinnati Federation of Protestant churches. One of the measures is an exact parallel of the Pennsylvania law, where reading of the Scriptures in the public schools is compulsory. This law is peculiarly drastic since it lays open to dismissal the teacher that fails to comply with its provisions.

King Bill Thought to Be Dead.

The King bill, to take the department of engineers from the state industrial commission and make it an independent department, is believed to be dead. The author of the measure says he will not push it. He said that he was induced to father the bill under a misapprehension. The passage of the measure would have meant the ripping up of the engineers' department.

Pass System May Be Restored.

The state fair pass system, which was abolished some three or four years ago, may be restored. The managers of the fair are considering this matter. Ohio railroads have been transporting exhibits to and from the fair at one-way price, but they have decided to charge both ways hereafter. This works a hardship on exhibitors, and to lighten the burden on them it is proposed to admit them to the fair free. Another proposition that will be taken under consideration is that of reducing the admission fee from 50 cents to 25 cents.

High Court to Settle Question.

The supreme court will settle whether the weights and measures law prohibiting the use of tall, narrow measures and providing for the use of wide, low measures is constitutional. The Franklin county courts upheld the law. The low, wide measure makes it difficult for dealers to cheat purchasers by stacking of the products sold. It is easy to "stack" when the tall measure is used. The case has been taken to the high court on error from the court of appeals.

PROSPECTS IN 1916

Politics Has Much Dependence on Conditions.

Legislation Placed on Statute Books by Democrats Was Based on Conditions of Peace—Changes Made by the War.

Writing from Cuba Mr. Watterson made this observation:

"If in 1916 the country has taken advantage of its opportunities and has adjusted itself to the changes wrought both in foreign and domestic commerce by the European war, the land will flow, as it were, with wine, milk and honey, and the Democratic calling and election under the Wilson leadership will be sure. The Republicans are all at sea. They have no man in sight. But in the event that the money, which fear has driven in hiding, remains in hiding because of continued agitation and uncertainty—the state of unemployment next winter what it is this winter—any old party—any old leader—can drive us from power."

In other words, if times are good in the United States next year, the Democratic party will take, and be accorded, credit. If bad, it will have to bear the blame and take punishment. It is one of the humorous features of our political philosophy, that the party in power is responsible for both the crops and the weather.

The next eighteen months are in the lap of the gods. Speculation about what they are likely to produce is at the greatest risk. Everything, both at home and abroad, is at sixes and sevens. We are striving and hoping to keep out of the war, and hoping also that "the mighty scourge of war may soon pass away."

The important legislation placed on the books by this congress was prepared for peace conditions. The Underwood tariff was laid without a thought of war, and, of course, without provision for any such contingency. And the same is true of the currency law and the new trust enactments. Latest come the federal trade law and the commission to execute it.

What changes has the war imposed? Business has been affected at every point, more or less. Exports are large in a few lines, but suspended in others. Imports have been so much reduced, the government's revenues are running heavily behind. Investments are halted. A feverish anxiety everywhere prevails.

Adjustments to meet this situation will be as difficult as they are imperative, and the new congress must at least attempt some of them.

As to Appropriations.

It is amusing to observe how Republican lamentations over the extravagance of the Democratic congress go side by side with denunciations of it for its failure to increase the army and make great appropriations for coast defense. These critics fail to recognize the fact that of the appropriations made by congress probably 40 per cent are for pensions and the support of the army and navy. Of the remaining 60 per cent the post office department absorbs a large share, and the ordinary running expenses of the government consume the rest. These cannot be seriously diminished, and if the army is to be largely increased it can only be done through augmenting the revenues. That, in turn, would call out hypocritical jeremiads over the alleged financial incompetency of the Democrats, and more denunciations of the new taxes. If the American people want a large army they must be willing to pay for it by more or less onerous taxation, just as European nations do. Economy and a large army and navy don't jibe well together.

Knew How to Get Things Done.

Woodrow Wilson has very clear ideas as to the ends of legislation; but to his messages and public statements he has always trusted matters of detail with a pleasing vagueness. He was much criticized for this at first. Men lamented his political youth and inexperience. As a matter of fact, he was maturer than they. Where other presidents had merely relieved their minds he was bent on getting things done. He knew that accomplishment is only possible, in a democracy, to the man who bears the other fellow's personal rights clearly in mind.

Forgetful.

As long as most of us can remember, the basis of American prosperity has been good crops, at profitable prices.—Boston Advertiser.

Tut, tut, brother, how you forget your lessons! How can you forget that for as long as most of us can remember the basis of American prosperity has been the protective tariff? To think that you, of all people, should forget that!—Life.

Presuming Much.

Chairman Hilles of the Republican national committee says that prosperity depends upon the election of a Republican president next year, the assumption being that a Republican president has great influence with war and weather makers.

It's the lame duck, or else the fellow who wants more than his share, that is always pleading for a handout from Uncle Sam in the shape of tariff duties.

Reassuring Qualities.

METHODISTS IN CONVENTION

CHURCH IS INEFFICIENT IN OHIO, SAYS SPEAKER FROM CHICAGO, TO DELEGATES.

RESULTS OF CHURCH SURVEY

Organization Does Not Measure Up to Needs and Opportunity—Many Delegates Unfamiliar With the Work.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—Measured in terms of opportunity and needs, the Methodist church of Ohio is not an efficient organization, delegates to the convention of Methodist men were told by Harry F. Ward, of Chicago, in his "Survey of Actual Conditions." Ward's talk was illustrated by lantern slides and had to do with a survey of Methodism in Ohio which he has made. Out of 1,059 pastors addressed 651 replied. Many who replied in part indicated unfamiliarity with church work and questions of the day, he said. The speaker argued that if the Sunday day school, Epworth League or prayer meetings do not have attendants in excess of their actual membership they are not recruiting stations for the church.

A street parade, with several thousand men in line, was one of the features of the convention. The parade marched through the streets of the city as evidence of the strength of organized Christianity. Chief among the addresses of the day was that of John R. Mott, of New York, on "The Bearing of the War on Christian Missions."

CONTRACT LET FOR COURTHOUSE

Cincinnati Men Takes Steps To Prevent Foreign Bidders Getting Other Work.

Cincinnati, O.—The Charles McCaul Co., of Philadelphia, will erect the new county court house. The new structure will cost either $1,385,485, with swinging doors, or $1,391,480, with revolving doors. Work of wrecking the old building will be commenced about April 1. The new structure will require 27 months to build. Bids are being considered by the county commissioners for the hauling of county records and transferring the prisoners from the jail.

The contract for building the new $2,500,000 county court house and jail was awarded by the court house commission to the Charles McCaul Co., of Philadelphia, for the general construction. The mechanical contract will be let later. The start of the work will be made about April 1, by which time it is expected that the commissioners will be able to move part or all of the records and occupants of the court house and jail to the new temporary location at Broadway and Pioneer street.

OVER A THOUSAND ACRES

Secured as Site for New Million-Dollar Cement Plant.

Dayton, O.—The last strip of land needed to complete a 1,000-acre tract was purchased by the Atlas Portland Cement Co. from Emma C. Bennett, Ira J. Gump, Bessie Studebaker, Cornelius Seaseman, B. F. Studebaker and Ella J. Brumbaugh, and the company will proceed with the construction of a modern cement plant, an expenditure of more than $1,000,000 being contemplated. The site obtained by the company is 12 miles north of Dayton, along the old Troy pike, and two and one-half miles southeast of Tippecanoe City. It was purchased for $150,000. The existence of a stratum of cement rock about 12 feet in thickness underlying the land was discovered by A. W. Heyman, chief chemist and geologist of the Atlas Portland Cement Co.

J. R. MARKER ACCEPTS POSITION.

Columbus, O.—On the day that Jas. R. Marker steps out of the office of state highway commissioner he will assume a position as chief engineer of the Ohio Paving Brick Manufacturers' association at a salary of $5,000 a year. The state of Ohio has been paying him $4,000 a year. Marker will have an office in Columbus.

MRS. WILLIS SLIGHTLY IMPROVED.

Delaware, O.—The condition of Mrs. Jay B. Willis, mother of Gov. Frank B. Willis, is slightly improved. She is suffering from pneumonia. Gov. Willis has been at his mother's bedside.

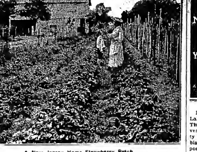
ROLLING MILLS HAVE REOPENED.

Middletown, O.—The central and east side plants of the American rolling mills have reopened and several hundred of the unemployed were returned to their old places. The shop has been shut down for some time and recently the iron workers in all of the plants voted on the question of accepting cuts in wages or seeing the entire plants closed. While the Middletown workmen voted decidedly against any cut, the association at large voted in favor of it.

TO AWARD STATE CONTRACTS.

Columbus, O.—Authority to award contracts for all inter-county and main market roads will be placed in the hands of a state board consisting of the state highway commissioner, the attorney general, and the state auditor if an amendment to the bill which Senator Cass, of Putnam county, has prepared for his bill modifying the road laws of the state and reorganizing the state highway department, is adopted.

MAKE MONEY IN HOME STRAWBERRY PATCH



A New Jersey Home Strawberry Patch.

(By ANNA GALIGHER.)

The strawberry will stand a good deal of ill treatment, but it will not produce good crops under the above conditions.

Any good soil which will bring corn or potatoes will do for strawberries, but if you want berries the size of hen's eggs put the plants in the richest soil you can find and cultivate the same as other garden crops.

If the soil is not rich enough without being fertilized use well-rotted stable manure. Fresh manure will not do, except as a top dressing, after the plants are well started, spread it between the rows.

I know a man who makes a business of growing strawberries for market whose berries are planted on thin, clay soil.

No fertilizer of any kind is used, and his largest berries are about the size of Gregg raspberries, as a rule. About half the berries are not worth picking.

I believe that spring is the proper time to set strawberry plants.

But if one can procure good, strong plants in the fall, and have them taken up with a quantity of soil adhering to the roots, they will bear a good many berries the following season, but not a full crop.

If transplanted in the fall, without any soil clinging to the roots, the plants should not be allowed to bear fruit the following season.

This is important, because when all of the roots are dislodged it takes a long time for the plant to recover from the shocks and form new roots.

None of the old ever take a firm hold in the ground unless new feeders start, and while the strawberry grows or hibernates all winter, the growth is less rapid when the ground is cold than it is in the spring and summer.

A great many people believe fall, or rather late summer, is the proper time to set strawberry plants.

They take up the plants, or send their order to some nursery man, as the case may be, and handle the plants just as they would in the spring. Now this is all wrong.

Last fall, while we were taking up strawberry plants, with the aid of a dibble and spade, and carefully placing them in boxes and baskets to be transferred to a new location, one of our neighbors came in for plants, which he had previously engaged.

He insisted that all the soil be shaken off the plants. He "wanted strawberry plants, not real estate."

A short time ago, while talking with this man, we had occasion to inquire how his strawberries turned out.

"Oh, we had a few," said he, "but they are nothing like yours. They are not what I expected. In fact, the berries were scarcely worth the picking."

I wanted to say, "I told you so," but as he is the sort of man who "knows it all," I said nothing.

No doubt he believes his failure was due to "something in the soil," but, as we experimented a little ourselves, we are fully convinced that it was all in the handling of the plants.

The last week in October is about the right time to transplant, or rather transfer strawberries.

The weather has begun to get cool by that time and the plants are large and strong. We set out 200 extra fine strawberry plants last spring and allowed the runners to form plants until the ground was all but covered. These surplus plants are the ones we will lift this fall.

See that the soil is in good condition to receive the plants. Plow or spade it as deep as the soil will permit.

If a crop of potatoes has just been removed from the ground, it should not need much stirring.

Place the plants in rows about four feet apart and ten inches apart in the rows. Rows may be either single or double, as preferred.

If the weather is dry a little water should be poured around the roots before filling in the soil.

After the plants have gotten a start, hoe or run the cultivator between the rows to loosen the surface before the covering is put on. It is a good plan to cover before hard freezing begins.

Don't cover too deep, because if the air is excluded the plants will smother. Clean straw, free from chaff, makes the best covering.

Anything which holds moisture is apt to cause the plants to rot if there is very much rain.

GROUND GRAIN BEST FOR YOUNG SWINE

Most Satisfactory Gains Made When Fed in Slop—Give Plenty of Pure Water.

There is no way that grain will go further or make more satisfactory gains when fed to pigs than when ground and made in a slop. It should be finely ground for this purpose and should be soaked at least six hours before feeding.

Do not make this slop so thin that the pigs must drink twice what they need to get a reasonable feed of the meal and don't make it so thick that it won't run readily the whole length of the trough.

Feed them as much of this slop as they need and then let them have access to plenty of pure water and they will drink no more than is good for them.

BENEFITS OF WISCONSIN ALFALFA ORDER

THE CONNECTING LINK

A Slogan of the Alfalfa Order.

(By H. L. RUSSELL.)

The organization of the alfalfa order of the experiment association of the state of Wisconsin, which now numbers over seven hundred members, has stimulated special interest in its culture, but there are yet many farmers who hesitate to try this crop because they are not familiar with its culture. The plant is doing exceedingly well in Wisconsin and is being rapidly introduced, the present acreage being estimated at over 30,000 acres.

Through the co-operative buying of selected seed, over 50,000 pounds of alfalfa seed (valued at over $9,000) were purchased and distributed to members at a very material saving in price, and a much higher grade secured than would have been possible had it been purchased by individual farmers.

By means of this organization, it has been possible to secure widespread co-operation of the members in making practical trials, throughout the entire state. In 240 trials where it was grown for the first time, successful results were reported in 88 per cent of cases. In the majority of cases where failure occurred, the soil had not been inoculated. Greater success was attained where alfalfa was grown without a nurse crop, although light seedings of grain (not exceeding one bushel per acre) were used quite widely. Reports on winter killing show, that where properly established, it stood as well as clover. As a result of tests of different rates of seeding, carried on not only at the Madison station and the branch stations, but also in co-operation with members of the alfalfa order throughout the state, the agronomy department has found that, as a rule, it is inadvisable to sow less than fifteen pounds of seed per acre on land well prepared and inoculated, and not less than twenty pounds on new land that is first used for this crop.

Benefits of Exercise.

Exercise plays an important part in the care of laying hens. It not only aids and increases digestion, but it promotes general health, prevents bad habits and keeps the birds warm in cold weather.

Keep Incubator Trays Clean.

Often little chicks are hatched with some disease. Incubator trays should be washed with hot water to which has been added a tablespoonful of good disinfectant to a gallon of water.

Succulent Feed for Sows.

Give the brood sows a daily feed of silage or other succulent feed; the sows will keep in better condition and the pigs will be stronger and more thrifty.

Importance of Phosphate Rock.

Phosphate rock is playing an important part in the fertilizer industry and has almost entirely displaced bone, guano, and apatite as a source of phosphoric acid.

"Labby" as a Diplomat.

In Mr. Thorold's "Life of Henry Labouchere" this story is quoted: The grand duchess of Tuscany had a venerable maid of honor about seventy years of age. She had piercing black eyes, and looked like an old post chaise, painted up, and with new lamps.

"How old do you think I am?" she once asked me with a simpering smile, that caused my blood to run cold.

I hesitated and then said "Twenty."

"Flatterer," she replied, tapping me with her fan. "I am twenty-five."

Cattle Diseases in Europe.

That the dread cattle malady "the foot-and-mouth disease" has gained a firm foothold in the European war zone as well as in this country is now a demonstrated fact. The Germans attempted unsuccessfully to stamp out the disease by means of the American method of wholesale slaughter.

What the continuance of this pestilence will mean to the warring nations, already stinted in the matter of rations, may be imagined. In France, Germany, Russia and Belgium, and also in Italy and Switzerland, the disease has gained such a foothold that it is economically impossible to fight it by the American method.

It appears that the disease has been growing in virulence since it made its first appearance. Mortality among cattle ranges from three per cent where the epidemic is mild to forty per cent where the outbreak is unusually violent.

THE OUTLOOK FOR 1915

It was the billion-dollar wheat crop of 1914 that went far towards carrying this country over the crises that have tried on each other's heels.

It was the ten billion dollars' worth of farm products—of wealth wrested from the soil by tilling the great productive areas from the Atlantic to the Pacific—that enabled America to turn the balance of a debted nation to the credit side and make all the world tributary, draining hither the gold that has been drawn to other nations.

And now, as the frost is working out of the ground, the farmers of the Nation, who did their part so well in 1914, are going forward to do more in 1915.

The area planted to winter wheat has been increased 12½ per cent, and an enlarged acreage of winter oats has been favored by the weather conditions.

Realizing the responsibility and the opportunity—put upon him, the farmer here, there and everywhere, is planning a great year of production with larger plantings of the staple crops and improved methods.

He is going forward to better the record of the extraordinary farm year that has passed, and Nature is helping him, with the earth sweetened by the frosts and well moistened by rain and snow.

The outlook for the farmer for 1915 is fine.

CLEAN UP

The case for spring cleaning is very strong. The custom is one of the best. It is founded on prudence no less than on the natural desire of wholesome and cleanly folk to have their homes free from dirt and their dooryards in order.

With warm weather comes swift decay of substances which have been kept in cold storage, so to speak, in the winter. With decay danger increases. And then the filth that breeds disease is more in evidence and more likely to assume trouble than it was in the cold months. The insects which carry germs in dirt begin to multiply and go back and forth from filth to food.

Spring cleaning is one of the best ways to abate the fly nuisance and peril. It is one of the surest preventatives of many later troubles for the housekeeper. It is good from every point of view. Clean up.

If gun-cotton forms the basis of practically all the continental explosives and of 70 per cent of the British explosives, it is one of the curious problems of the war that the belligerents have held raw cotton contraband. Either the extent to which cotton is used in the manufacture of explosives has been exaggerated or Great Britain was inconsistent in stopping copper and letting cotton go through.

Ohio is getting a force of Presidential candidates into the field. Cleveland Republicans are booming Ex-Senator Burton. Others are pushing the Hon. Myron T. Herrick, while Warren G. Harding is also talked of. Ohio should be satisfied with one candidate if she hopes to make any success with him; but she has over a year to make up her mind which it will be.

A correspondent in London recently declared "The gate of the Dardanelles is open, but the corridor into which it leads is still strongly held." "Wish You Was Here"

I got a card from Steve t'day, doggone his travelin' skin.
He's up around Niag'ry Falls a-writin' home ag'in.
Seems like that boy's one glory is to wander far an' free,
An' fader off he gits, I vum, th' more he writes to me.
He sends these pictur' postal cards, with photos showin' that
Th' world is allus beautif'l jest where you ain't livin' at.
His messages read all th' same, in letters large an' clear
He writes from Maine or Kankakee an' says—
"Wish you was here!"

Nobody ever seem to know just where he'll go or where,
We git his destination from th' card that says he's there.
An' he ain't more than settled down to loaf a day or two
Till he gits thinkin' up the names of ev'ry one he knew,
An' then with ever' doggone cent he possibly kin spare
He buys th' Unitary church, th' Depot an' the Square,
He lays 'bout ev'rything they is in Bath or Belvidere,
Then mails the whole blame business home and says—
"Wish you was here!"

I guess he's at Niag'ry now, he was last time he wrote,
But that don't prove conclusively he ain't in Terry Hote.
He may be down in Panam or snoopin' round in Nome,
Nobody knows just where he's at—except he ain't at home!
I guess we'd never hear from him for months or maybe years
If some kind soul had not devised these pictur' souvenirs.
Yes, I expect if Steve would die he'd rise up from his bier
To pen a card to all his friends an' say—
"Wish you was here!"

"An hour later, at a window on the ground floor, I heard pandemonium break out in the camps of the prowlers. There were cries and screams, and shots from many pistols. As we afterward conjectured, this fight had been precipitated by an attempt on the part of those that were well to drive out those that were sick. At any rate, a number of the plague-stricken prowlers escaped across the campus and drifted against our doors. We warned them back, but they cursed us and discharged a fusillade from their pistols. Professor Merryweather, at one of the windows, was instantly killed, the bullet striking him squarely between the eyes. We opened fire in turn, and all the prowlers fled away with the exception of three. One was a woman. The plague was on them and they were reckless. Like foul fiends, there in the red glare from the skies, with faces blazing, they continued to curse us and fire at us. One of the men I shot with my own hand. After that the other man and the woman, still cursing us, lay down under our windows...

The next instant I shot him. But it was too late. Dombey expired without a groan, immediately. I doubt if he ever knew what had happened to him.

"Leaving the two corpses, I hurried on past the burning house to the garage, and there found Doctor Hoyle's motor car. The tanks were filled with gasoline, and it was ready for use. And it was in this car that I threaded the streets of the ruined city and came back to the survivors on the campus. The other scouts returned, but none had been so fortunate. Professor Fairmead had found a Shetland pony, but the poor creature, tied in a stable and abandoned for days, was so weak from want of food and water that it could carry no burden at all. Some of the men were for turning it loose, but I insisted that we should lead it along with us, so that, if we got out of food, we would have it to eat.

"There were forty-seven of us when we started, many being women and children. The president of the faculty, an old man to begin with, and now hopelessly broken by the awful happenings of the past week, rode in the motor car with several young children...

...that I saw the last airship I shall ever see. The smoke was much thinner here in the country, and I first sighted the ship drifting and veering helplessly at an elevation of two thousand feet. What had happened I could not conjecture, but even as we looked we saw her bow dip down lower and lower. Then the bulkheads of the various gas chambers must have burst, for, quite perpendicular, she fell like a plummet to the earth. And from that day to this I have not seen another airship. Often and often, during the next few years, I scanned the sky for them, hoping against hope that somewhere in the world civilization had survived. But it was not to be. What happened with us in California must have happened with everybody everywhere.

"Another day, and at Niles there were three of us. Beyond Niles, in the middle of the highway, we found Wathope. The motor car had broken down, and there, on the rugs which they had spread on the ground, lay the bodies of his sister, his mother and himself.

"Wearied by the unusual exercise of continual walking, that night I slept heavily. Canfield and Parsons, my last companions, were dead of the plague. Of the four hundred that sought shelter in the Chemistry building, and of the forty-seven that began the march, I alone remained—I and the Shetland pony. Why this should be so there is no explaining. I did not catch the plague, that is all. I was immune. I was merely the one lucky man in a million—just as every survivor was one in a million, or, rather, in several millions, for the proportion was at least that.

"For two days I sheltered in a pleasant grove where there had been no deaths. In those days, while badly depressed and believing that my turn would come at any moment, nevertheless...

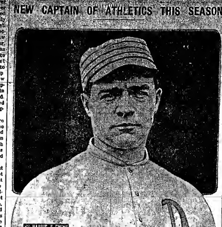
NEW CAPTAIN OF ATHLETICS THIS SEASON



© HARRIS & EWING

Harry Davis, New Leader of Athletics

Harry Davis, veteran catcher, it is announced, will be the captain of the Athletics this season. He succeeds Ira Thomas, who will take charge of the Mack pitching staff.

Davis was captain for several years before he became manager of the Cleveland Americans in 1912. For the last two years he has been coaching the Athletic players.

Harry Davis is one of those individuals who doesn't believe that a ball player's diamond career is ended when his arm goes out of commission and his legs lose their speed.

"Ball players too often devote most of their energy looking after their salary," he declared with emphasis. "They argue that at the best they have only a few years to stay in the game. They believe that during that time they must collect enough coin to last the remainder of their lives. They see visions of going back to hard labor, of losing all the comforts of life which they enjoyed while drawing a large salary as a member of a major league.

"That's wrong. It's entirely wrong. They don't appreciate the bigness of this game. Baseball is an immense proposition. There's not the slightest reason in the world why a man shouldn't make it his life work just as a man makes the study of the auto business his life work when he enters the office of an auto concern.

"The game is just like a business. The man who studies it, who is attentive, who is ambitious, who does what's right, who gives the club all that he possesses, who takes care of himself, is the man who will stick to the game and who will find that it will pay him dividends as long as any other line of work would.

"Just consider for a moment how many minor league clubs in this country are more than anxious to get a man of intelligence at a good salary to manage their clubs. Think of the number of scouts employed by major league clubs. There's room for every man who is willing to try to advance in his profession.

"I don't intend to sermonize, but that's a plain statement of fact, and conditions support my argument.

"Don't think for a minute that I believe a ball player isn't entitled to a healthy salary. On the contrary, I believe he is, and earns it. What I mean to convey is the idea that the ball player should work for the future just as the young fellow does in other lines of work."

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

Relieved.

"And so you are fully determined," he persisted, "that you cannot marry me?"

"Yes," she replied, gently but firmly. "I must still say so. I do not care enough for you for that."

"All right," said he, with a well-simulated sigh of relief, as he turned to the door to go. "I was afraid that..."

DR. J. D. KELLOGG'S ASTHMA

TO PREPARE AND USE VEGETABLES

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT EXPERTS GIVE RESULTS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT.

UNDERGROUND VEGETABLES

Some Facts About Roots and Underground Stems That Are Eaten as Vegetables—Cooking Starch.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nearly all roots and underground stems that are eaten as vegetables contain large quantities of water, in addition to starch or some similar material, a little nitrogenous matter, and mineral matter. The roots and stems store materials for future growth during favorable seasons. Plants that store most of their food as insoluble starch (as potatoes and cassava) are known as "starch-bearing plants," while those which store much of their food in the form of soluble carbohydrates (sugar in the case of the beet) which give the root a more or less juicy character are classed as "succulent roots."

In northern regions the potato is the most important of the starch-bearing plants. In the southern states the sweet potato is more generally used. One reason why the potato has become such a favorite is doubtless its lack of pronounced flavor. It harmonizes with foods having a more positive taste, and one does not tire of it as one would of the continuous use of turnip or squash. Then, too, it is easily grown, gives an abundant yield, and may be readily stored for winter use.

How Much Should Potatoes Weigh?

Potatoes should weigh 60 pounds to the bushel, or 15 pounds to the peck. As three or four average potatoes will together weigh one pound, a peck should number from 40 to 60.

The oftener potatoes are handled in their transit from producer to consumer the poorer their quality and the greater the percentage of refuse...

...with potatoes. More detailed information regarding this new introduction and its preparation will be sent free to the housewife who applies to the United States department of agriculture.

The Importance of Properly Cooking Starch.

Starch cookery is a very important subject. That starch may be thoroughly cooked it is essential that every starch grain be brought into contact with water at at least 140 to 178 degrees F.

In the case of starches separated from the plant cells when they were formed (arrow root, corn starch, etc.) cooking is a simple matter, and long continued cooking is seldom needed to make them palatable and in good condition for digestion.

The selection of potato starch instead of corn or wheat starch for thickening sauces in accordance with the custom of French cooks is rational, since it does not require so long boiling to insure the best results.

In the case of starch still enclosed in plant cells—as is the case with the starch present in cereal breakfast foods, etc.—long cooking is desirable in order that water may penetrate to each individual starch grain and unite with it to form the well cooked material which is considered most wholesome.

Starches from different plants or plant parts differ in the form of the starch grain, so that starches of various kinds can be identified by the aid of the microscope. But from the culinary standpoint they are practically interchangeable, and one form of starch may be substituted for another in nearly all cases. Just as we may substitute the yam or a dish of rice for the potato as a vegetable, so we may use starch from the potato, or corn, or wheat, or rice for thickening gravies or making puddings, making slight changes in proportion, according to the expansive powers of each kind.

Suggestions Regarding Succulent Roots.

Beets contain a larger percentage of sugar than most vegetables, and should be baked or steamed to retain as much of this as possible. At all events, they should be cooked in the skins, and the tip of the root and a portion of the leaf stems should also be left on until after cooking. Even so, some color and sweetness are lost in the water in which they are cooked.

Radishes, red or white, when a little too large to eat raw, may be cooked...

Advance Styles in Spring Neckwear

Although many of the new spring blouses and dresses are made with high collars, there are many of them that show an open throat. Practically every collar is high at the back and sides, but at least half of them are "V" shaped in front, or may be worn either open or closed.

Two styles appear to be in the running for first place for warm weather. They are the collar of lace or sheer embroidery like that shown in the picture, or the high fitted collar of net or organdie which sets close about the neck, worn with a second collar which finishes the bodice at the back and sides and is wired to stand away from the neck and to turn over.

There is almost no end to the number of designs in which these fancy collars are made. Many of them have cuffs to match and are suited to the blouse or coat.

A narrow frill of lace or net about the throat attached to a band of velvet or satin ribbon is worn with waists having round necks. This is becoming to those with long and slender figures who can wear the high closely fitting collars also. But for the short neck and full throat the "V" shaped opening at the front is altogether best. It lengthens the neck in appearance.

A very smart and new collar is made of sheer organdie and is shaped to fit closely about the neck. At the top a narrow, wired flange of organdie stands out at right angles to the band, concealing the throat and neck. It is not a particularly comfortable-looking piece of neckwear, but will cover up a multitude of defects, such as wrinkles or sagging muscles.

The Parasol Veil.

Another novelty of note is the so-called parasol veil. This is a huge circular veil thrown over the hat so that it falls in equal ripples on all sides. A border of ribbon combined with velvet dots renders this creation a striking one.

Still another new idea is featured in a fancy mesh veiling with a sand-colored kid flower applied, so that it would appear over the mouth when the veiling is adjusted. This style is strongly suggestive of the old time vanity veil.

Lemon Instead of Soap.

By taking a lemon and cutting it in two and squeezing the juice into the dishwater no soap is needed. The lemon will cut all grease and in a few days' time the silver, such as knives, forks and spoons, will become bright as new. All dark spots will also disappear from pitchers and cups. Use the lemon over and over again.

Effective Rebuke if Recipient Had Not A Hide as Thick as a Hippopotamus

One may be excused for feeling a little joy when the man who goes out of his way to make a rude remark in order to display his wit receives a rebuke that is as courteous as it is at the same time effective.

The retort given by a certain learned scientist must have been considerably more amusing to the onlookers than it was to the learned gentleman's antagonist.

It happened at dinner that one of the guests began to deride philosophy and went on rudely to express the opinion that philosopher was but another way of spelling fool.

"What is your opinion, professor?" he asked. "Is there much distance between them?"

The professor, with a polite bow to his vis-a-vis, responded gravely:

"Sometimes only the width of a table."

ALL THE PROOF NECESSARY

Surly Man Must Have Been Convinced That He Was Occupying the Other's Chair.

It was the rush hour in the cafeteria, one of these quick-lunch places where you help yourself and grab a chair and use the arm of the chair as a table. A rushed feeder grabbed a slice of pie and copped out a chair. Then he remembered he needed coffee and he dashed over to the service counter. When he returned with his coffee his chair was occupied by another hurry-up diner.

"Excuse me," said the first man, "but that is my chair."

"How do you know it is your chair?" demanded the occupant in a surly tone.

"Because I can prove it," stated the first man.

"How can you prove it?" asked the occupant.

"By your trousers," was the reply. "You are sitting on my pie."

TOMMY'S AMBITION IN LIFE

Not a Very High One, but Extremely Complimentary to His School Teacher.

Many of the teachers attending a recent teachers' convention at Portland, Me., had good stories to tell. One young and rather pretty teacher from Lincoln county told the following:

"It has been my custom to encourage discussion on subjects outside the lesson papers, and along this line I one day spoke of ambition. After I had set before the class the desirability of having high aims I asked my pupils what each planned to be. One wanted to be a doctor, another president, another an aviator, another an electric car motorman, another an engineer on a railroad, and so on around the class, until I reached Tommy.

"Tommy is a bright, handsome youngster of seven years, and I was expecting him to want to be someone of great importance in the world. I was puzzled to find him plainly much embarrassed. He didn't want to tell me his ambition, but finally asked if he might whisper it to me. Much interested, I gave him permission, and he trudged up to my desk. Even there he hesitated.

"'Come, come, Tommy!' I said, somewhat impatiently. 'Tell me what it is you want to be in life.'

"He raised himself on tiptoes and slipped one arm about my neck as he whispered, 'Your—your husband!'"—The Sunday Magazine.

INDICATIONS OF AN EARLY SPRING

Great Prosperity Ahead for Western Canada.

The most recent advices from all points in Western Canada report that conditions are apparent for an early spring. Farmers are going over the implements, getting their seeders ready for operation, the plows in shape for extended breaking, and there is a general optimism. A great many new settlers have already arrived, and the...

THE COLONEL'S GOLD MINE

Out in Gregory County, South Dakota, lives Colonel Johnson, the famed Alfalfa King of that great section.

About thirty years ago he left Wisconsin for that domain. All he had was willing hands, a clear brain and a bright vision. Today he is the owner of thousands of acres, president of several banks.

He has found a veritable gold mine in his thousand acre Alfalfa field, and what is...

County Committee.

The Lake County Rural Y. M. C. A. Committee met at six o'clock in the Association building, after a splendid dinner the evening was devoted to business related to County Association work.

Lake County has been organized for the past five years, but the men of the County are just beginning to realize the wonderful possibilities of the work.

Each man on the Committee is determined to do his part of the work, not only in raising funds but in any way that he can be of service.

There has been ten groups holding meetings each week. There meetings are under the direction of local volunteer leadership. The groups have a total membership of over two hundred and fifty boys. When you see the results and know this work is doing great good then think of the small cost isn't it a good investment? The following men of the county are behind this great work and would appreciate the co-operation of every man in Lake County: Perry, Chas. Lucas, T. B. West, W. E. Salkeld; Madison, C. C. North, C. W. Snarls, Carl Kimball; Painesville, Ed. B. George, P. H. Kendall, John R. Williams, Geo. A. Rende, L. M. Johnson; Willoughby, E. F. Kirkholtz; Kirtland, ...; Leroy, ...; Mentor, T. D. Morley, James R. Garfield, Ralph L. Donnan.

The Dried Apple

An eastern paper the other day remarked that "dried apples of the kind that used to hang from the rafters in the freight are about to swell the volume of export trade," buyers from Norway and Sweden being in the United States market for large supplies of the product.

Well—don't you believe it. The dried apple that hung from the rafter in the far-bygone days when we were a boy sitting beside the blazing log in the cabin fireplace went out years and years ago as a commercial product. The "evaporated apple" of trade is a whiter, cleaner, different product. Only here and there in isolated places where tradition of doing and making things for oneself survives, is the old-fashioned dried apple to be found—and it isn't dried in the rafters by the fire.

For the glow and crackle of the firelight are but memories of a vanished yesterday, since the coal stove and the gas heater came to the farmhouse. And yesteryears are all by-gone, to return no more, taking everything with them, their thoughts, and customs and deeds, and leaving only a few whitening heads to remember them.

At the Utopia

To what difficulties a manager can be put, when contemplating a new production is easily illustrated in the craft of "Bringing Up Father," the new Gus Hill extravaganza, which is underlined to hold the boards at Utopia, Monday, March 29th. The new offering is based on the successful and popular cartoons of the same title, and created by that artist and humorist, George McManus. The ultimate success of the play, which is described as a dancing and singing comedy, depends on the proper kind of actors to interpret the different characters. Of course, competence was essential, but the type had to be considered; that is performers who met with the physical requirements of the roles assigned to them. This was indeed a knotty problem for the management and at one time it looked as if the production would either have to be postponed or probably abandoned. For instance, there are ten leading characters on whose work the plot revolves and develops. They vary from the quite cosy going Irishman, "Jiggs. Mahoney," who is the "Father," and whose family tries to bring him up. Then there is another type, "Jerry Sullivan," also an Irishman, just the opposite of Jiggs, but equally a good natured; "Billy Hays," a dapper youth of about twenty-four and given to slang, "Tom Hamilton," a likeable young Irishman, with a decided brogue. Then there is "Pierre Castillon," a tall handsome man of Spanish cast, very quaint and ... "Mrs. Mahoney," a tall and graceful American girl, inclined to be airy; "Peggy Mahoney," a bright friendly little colleen of twenty, ...

HAD TO BE TAUGHT FRENCH

English Horses, in Service of Gallic Owners, Unable to Understand Words of Command.

A French writer tells a quaint story of the war. He says that the English cavalry in France found themselves in possession of a number of horses which were not quite suitable for cavalry work. By arrangements with the French government they let them off to French peasants for agricultural work. The farmers were delighted; though the horses were not adapted for cavalry work, they were better than they had been, for they have had no farm work. But we see they came to work them a difficulty arose. The horses did not understand French! When addressed with "Hue" or "Dia" (which is idiomatic French for "Get up" and "Way, whoa") they did not budge. No doubt carters in France, as in England, have a whole vocabulary of horse talk. Apart from the starting and stopping there are special cries which tell the horse to turn to the right or left or to take up a particular posture when it is being groomed.

Even in England these carters' and grooms' words differ in different counties, but probably that would be no difficulty in the way of transferring a horse, say, from the north of England to the south. For, as the experienced horse-tamer knows, the animals do not really understand articulation; what they do understand is the tone in which words are spoken. This has been said even of dogs, which are much more intelligent than horses and much more attentive to the speech of man. Dog lovers, however, deny this, and say that dogs understand the spoken word in whatever tone it is uttered or however quietly. However that may be, it would not help the English horses in France, since the French tongue expressing the various moods of entreaty or command differ even more from the English than does the pronunciation of the words. The horse is not the only animal to which French would be a foreign tongue. In France you call a cat not by a hissing sound, "Tsh, tsh," or "Psh, psh," as we do, but by something between a kiss and a whistle. Hence in France the vocative of "cat" is not "Puss" but "Mimi."

Aeroplanes of Russian Make.

Sukhomlinoff saw that a weak point in the Russian army was that too much of its equipment came from abroad—a vulnerable situation in wartime, as the present shows. So he set himself busily building up arms factories, cartridge factories, and so on within the boundaries of Russia, and in the Russian turn so to be sure, among other things, to make himself independent of foreign automobiles, explosives. Inventions might be tried out.

He also organized—and this gives us the measure of his foresight—a first-class school of military aviation, and not the least Russian contribution of the development and manufacture of aeroplanes, which today take the place of cavalry as "the eyes of the army." The result is that for the last four or five years Russia has been making her own aeroplanes and training a large staff of flyers able to use them. Sukhomlinoff also developed an effective corps of army automobiles for the rapid transport of men and supplies.—American Review of Reviews.

SPELLING BEE SUCCESS

Madison and Willoughby Take the Honors in Contest

The first county spelling "bee" brought a large number of young people and their friends to Painesville Saturday and proved very interesting and instructive, and marks a revival of the teaching of spelling in the schools of the county.

In the contest among seventh and eighth grade pupils the Madison village team won first place, with a score of 37 misspelled words out of a possible 300. Willoughby won first honors in the high school contest with a score of 120 misspelled words out of a possible 500.

The same schools had the champion individual spellers. Elizabeth Sweeney, of Madison village, made the best record. She had a perfect score in oral spelling and missed one word of the written list. George Lyons, of the same team was second. She was perfect in oral and missed two written words. Joseph Connelly, of Willoughby, was the high school champion, with perfect record in oral and five misspelled written words. Harriet Marley, of Mentor, was second with perfect record in oral and nine misspelled written words. Carl Graves, of Madison township, was a close third, with perfect score in oral and ten misspelled written words.

Only pupils perfect in oral spelling were Mary Winne, Margaret Walsh and Gertrude Gillette of Willoughby, Daniel Light, Perry; Edward Doerzen, Reba Wood and Herbert Tochten, Madison township, and John Millard, Kirtland.

The seventh-eighth grade teams finished in the following order: Madison Village, 37 misspelled words; Mentor Special, 49; Madison township, 51; Willoughby township, 65; Willoughby Village, 72; Mentor Village, 73, Fairport, 76; Painesville township, 85; Concord, 86; Kirtland, 88; Perry, 102; Leroy, 104, Mentor township, 111.

The high school record was as follows: Willoughby, 131; Madison village, 208, Perry, 209; Madison township, 224; Kirtland, 255; Mentor, 227.

Entertaining and Original

Alexander Johnson who will speak in the High School Auditorium, Tuesday evening, April 6, has a keen sense of humor and a profound sympathy with all the peculiarities of human nature. These two characteristics have made him most successful in various lines of social service for over thirty years. His lectures are most entertaining and original and reflect the experience that a long life of social helpfulness has brought to him. No one can feel more deeply for all classes of people and still combine with this sympathy a rational common-sense attitude.

His addresses contain many anecdotes, which, in themselves, are most entertaining, and his jovial manner lends a greater interest. Those who hear him once never forget his genial interesting manner.

He will speak upon the vital question of heredity—Eugenics, and upon the subject of environment. All the cases with which he has come in contact seem to point out to him the need for protection and improvement of the race. There are many phases of race development and social progress that will be touched upon in the lecture of Tuesday evening.

Old Resident Dies

Mrs. Sarah Hurlburt died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Blackwell, on Pearl street, Sunday after an illness of twelve days with pneumonia, the end coming very peacefully. Her daughters and sons and Mrs. Blackwell of this city and Mr. and Mrs. Lovette Hurlburt and Mr. and Mrs. Manning R. Kelly, of Cleveland were with her when the end came.

Mrs. Hurlburt was born September 9, 1834 and was a life long member of the Church of Christ. Her early life was spent in Perry. In 1902 she and her husband, Jehial Hurlburt moved to this city, Mr. Hurlburt passing away the year following. She had always lived a quiet Christian life and her many friends will mourn her loss.

Leaves Money For Home

The will of Mrs. Emma Caley of Little Mountain was filed in Geauga probate last week. Sums of $200 to $1,000 were left to friends and relatives and $500 to the Little Mountain church.

The residue of the estate is left to R. E. Gregory, trustee in trust, to invest and reinvest until such time as the same can be used towards founding an Orphan Home or Asylum in Lake County, said trustee to be one of the trustees of the same, which is to be named the "Caley Orphan Home."

NEW BILL IS INTRODUCED

Will Allow County to Assist In Paving Fairport

Attorney George C. von Beseler, who, by virtue of his office of Prosecutor became the legal adviser of the county commissioners, has just prepared a new road bill which will be introduced at Columbus by Representative Carl E. Kimball.

The von Beseler bill seeks to amend the present road law so that section 6905 will read as follows: The board of county commissioners may enter into an agreement with the board of trustees of any township or the council of any village, or both, to construct any ANY road improvement herein contemplated, whereby said board of trustees or council may assume and pay such a proportion of the costs and expenses of such improvement not assessed upon abutting land in accordance with section 6904 of the General Code, as may be agreed upon between said board of county commissioners and said board of township trustees or council, and such agreements or agreements may be entered into at any time before the contract for said improvement is let. Such road improvement may run over or be composed of different roads or streets lying partly within and partly without or entirely within any village, provided it is clearly the purpose of such road improvement to connect two important centers at least one of which lies without such village or to complete any gap between two county road improvements already constructed or in contemplation of construction.

The sentence in italics show the proposed changes, and should the bill pass in its present form Fairport can be paved on the streets where pavement is badly needed at a very low expense to the owners of abutting property.

UTOPIA AMUSEMENT COMPANY IN TEMPORARY FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES

Bob Manchester In New York In an Effort to Secure Much Needed Funds—Friends Hope for His Success

It has been known for some time that the Utopia Amusement Company, while able to meet current expenses from income, was having considerable difficulty in raising money to pay balances due contractors and also to meet a demand loan of a considerable amount at a local bank. Some time ago when the bank made demand on the theater to pay its loan the theater could not meet the situation and it was necessary to sell the collateral consisting of all of the capital stock of The Utopia Amusement Company and as well stocks of Chicago and New York theaters. Guy Wyman and R. E. Gregory, in order to protect the mortgage bond holders whom they represented and from whom they received loans of $35,000.00 for the original promoters while the theater building was in process of erection, bought in the collateral. A sixteen days option was then given a prominent Toledo business man and theater magnate, a warm personal friend of the original promoters, with a view to having him take over the property and re-finance the company. This option price was just the actual cost of the property to Wyman & Gregory plus $350.00 for attorney's fees and expenses, and not $5,000.00 as has been reported. The Toledo man later, however, repudiated his option. Mr. Wyman and Mr. Gregory then told the original promoters that they could redeem their property at any time and at a price just equal to what they had invested in it for them, going so far as agreeing still to furnish them $20,000.00 of a $30,000.00 first mortgage loan in an effort to assist them. Mr. Manchester and Mr. Loom then went to New York in an effort to raise the required capital. They are still hoping to be able to do so, but up to this writing no word of success has reached Painesville. Owing to all this delay some of the creditors have filed mechanics liens and others have brought suit against the company.

When approached on Wednesday morning by a Herald reporter, Mr. Wyman said that there had been no reorganization of the company in the hands of the new holders of the stock, as it was still their intention to give the original promoters every possible opportunity to refinance the popular playhouse in order that they might continue as formerly to own and to operate the theater.

It is the hope and the purpose of all concerned, that the original promoters will yet be able to resume both the management and the ownership of the Utopia by reason of being able to raise the necessary capital. The amount required, it is said, is something like $55,000.00, or $25,000.00 cash in addition to a possible mortgage loan of $30,000.00.

THE TATTLER SAYS:

My son, follow not in the footsteps of the loafer, and make no example of him that is born tired, for verily I say unto you that the business is over-stocked, the seats in the corners are all taken and the whittling places are all occupied. It is better to saw wood at two bits a cord than whittle at a whittling match and abuse the government.

FRAN REXFORD DIES

Well Known Mentor Merchant and Justice Passes Away

Frank J. Rexford, who has been in failing health for some time, passed away at his home in Mentor at midnight Sunday. Mr. Rexford was in his 79th year and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Maud Hill and one brother, William Jasper Rexford, both of Mentor. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon and were attended by a large number of people from all parts of the county.

Mr. Rexford was one of the oldest justices of the peace in the county, holding a commission over twenty years. He had been in the grocery business for many years and was the resident secretary of numerous Cleveland steamship companies who had their "main offices" upstairs over his grocery store in Mentor special districts where they were incorporated for taxation in Lake county. Here the directors of the steamship companies met once a year.

Frank Sinclair, aged 20 years, who was taken to the hospital, Friday, died at 1:45 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, after a short illness with pneumonia. He is survived by a wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Sinclair. Mr. Sinclair was a member of the 14th Ohio Battery.

USES GERMAN WEAPON

Woman Defends Self When Attacked in Own Home

Sauer-kraut as a weapon of defense seems to have been overlooked by the foreign military experts but a Painesville woman found the German delicacy very useful in repelling an invading force. Of course kraut could hardly be classed as a "concealed" weapon but could easily be classified as a weapon of "offence."

Mrs. Joe Pongraas of West South street obtained a warrant in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court for the arrest of her brother-in-law, George Pongraas and his wife. According to the affidavit and the story of the woman she had forbidden her husband's relatives visiting her but they ignored and after knocking at her door and threatening to break it down, she claims, she opened the door and gave them the contents of a pan of "sauerkraut." This checked the relatives for a while, but, according to Mrs. Joe Pongraas they came into her house later and misused her in many ways, striking her and causes and assaulting her, injuring her so badly that she had to secure the services of a physician.

When arraigned before the justice, George Pongraas and wife claimed there "was nothing to it." They did not deny that they did come into her house, but they claimed that the notoriety of a law suit, they realized, and for that reason entered a plea of guilty and were fined the costs, a ten dollar bill being required to square the matter with the justice.

Mrs. E. R. Tucker Dies

Mrs. E. R. Tucker, aged 49 years passed away at her home on Liberty street, Saturday evening. Mrs. Tucker had been in poor health for the past three years. She is survived by a husband and one daughter, Mrs. John King. The funeral was held from the residence at 12:30 o'clock Eastern time, Wednesday.

Court has adjourned for the term.

Lorain county will spend $12,000 for completion of the road to Cleveland.

TANGLE TANGLED AGAIN

A. C. Grover Takes Exceptions to Decision of Justice

"I read in your paper an article entitled, 'A legal tangle solved,' in which Justice Huntington was reported as to have advised a client to pull a fence from the ground, cut it into pieces and sell the sections for post holes to get his pay for digging the hole.

"It appears to me another legal point arises here. There is no question but the man is entitled to the hole, but could he pull it without some of the soil adhering to the hole and would he be entitled to the soil? We read that a wise judge once ruled that a man was entitled to a pound of flesh nearest the heart but not one drop of blood.

"This calls to my mind the time I was employed by the Justice to erect a new wire fence along one of his city lots. Three boys too youthful for the kindergarten passed by and I said to them, "Boys, would you like a nice present?" Their faces beamed with expectation, but when told that they could pull up one of the post holes, take it home and set it out in the garden where it would grow they gazed at me with an expression of fear and doubt as they toddled along. I could hear their children prattle and one of them turned to me and said, 'We thank you're crazy.'

"I admired their judgment for it certainly sounded like an insane proposition and I believe these youthful philosophers would put Justice Huntington and your reporter in the same class."

A CASE OF SMALLPOX

Rooming House Proprietor is Sick With Disease

V. J. Halderman, proprietor of a rooming house on the south side of the park is suffering from a light attack of smallpox and the house has been quarantined by the city health authorities.

Mr. Halderman was taken sick Saturday of last week and the attending physician, Dr. James R. Davis, had him removed to a part of the house where he could not come in contact with any of the other inmates. After studying the case for a day or two the doctor became convinced that it was smallpox and notified the health officer.

There were a dozen or more roomers in the house, but as they had not been exposed to the disease they were allowed to take their clothing and get out. All who had not been vaccinated were compelled to undergo the treatment and there is little or no danger of the disease spreading.

Concord

Mrs. Charles Weinie and son Raymond are visiting her mother, Mrs. Jesse Curtiss.

J. H. Winchell and family spent Sunday at Forrest Chamberlain's.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Manley of Painesville were recent visitors at W. P. Warren's.

Word was received here last Wednesday that Charles Chapman of Clifton, Arizona, had passed away at a hospital there following an operation. The remains were shipped to Chardon where services will be held Tuesday, March 30. Mr. Chapman lived in Concord and his many friends tender sympathy to his wife in her great sorrow.

Wedding bells are ringing a good deal in Concord and North Chardon these days. Wednesday, March 24, Miss Belle Webster and Walter Curtiss were married in Chardon, and Friday, March 26, Miss Elga Radcliffe and Lloyd Pomeroy of Thompson were united in marriage. Both couples have a host of Concord friends who extend hearty congratulations and wish them much happiness.

Forrest Chamberlain has moved to their new home near Corlett's Corner.

Mrs. Chester Winchell was taken to the Painesville Hospital last week ...

DEFINES PRESIDENT WILSON'S POSITION

Attorney General Gregory Files Brief in the Harvester 'Trust' Case.

LAYS IDEAS BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Most Striking Feature Is the Distinction Made Between 'Growth From Within' and 'Growth Through Combination.'

Washington, D. C.—Attorney General Gregory's brief in the harvester "trust" case, which was expected to define the present administration's working policy toward all combinations, has just been filed in supreme court and fulfilled expectations.

Its most striking feature is the distinction it makes between "growth from within" and "growth through combination."

"Apparently," says the brief, "congress saw no substantial danger through the growth of a single business from within, no matter how large it might become in that way, even though, for example, through greater efficiency, energy or resources and consequent ability to offer a better product than its competitors or the same grade of product at a lower price, a corporation might come to possess the trade to the very point of controlling the market for the time being.

Such Monopolies Rare.

"Monopolistic power so attained could be so rare and its field so limited that it might safely be ignored."

But, he says, congress intended that every combination which interferes or threatens to interfere with normal and effective competition should be prohibited.

The International Harvester Co., says Gregory's brief, is not the result of the normal growth of a single business, but is a combination of able competitors, the McCormick, Deering, Champion, Plano and Milwaukee companies, controlling an overwhelming proportion of the trade brought together by George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co., banker and promoter.

By a single stroke, says the brief, rivalry was extinguished and a virtual monopoly achieved. Later other big companies were taken in.

Says Figures Contradict Trust.

The attorney general cites figures to disprove the harvester trust's arguments that this combination was necessary to promote foreign trade. On the contrary, says the government, the trust probably has retarded foreign business growth.

In conclusion the attorney general says: "If corporate combinations, however comprehensive, do not come within the purview of this act except only so far as they demonstrably abuse their power, the inevitable result will be the continuance of the great rush toward concentration."

HITS ICE CREAM MAKERS

COMMERCE COMMISSION'S DECISION IS A VICTORY FOR THE EXPRESS COMPANIES.

Washington, D. C.—Ohio ice cream dealers are hit hard by a decision which the interstate commerce commission handed down. The decision is a victory for the express companies against the ice cream manufacturers composing the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers, in which Ohio is largely represented, and suit was brought to secure a classification rating on ice cream not in excess of second class, without minimum charges. The commission had put ice cream in the second class, but had fixed a minimum charge of 29 cents for a package of 100 pounds. The commission finds that present rates on ice cream are not unreasonable.

URGES MORE FRIENDSHIP

PRESIDENT IS GUEST OF HONOR ON NEW ARGENTINA WARSHIP MORENA.

Annapolis, Md.—President Wilson sent all precedents kiting when he broke an old rule that no president of the United States shall leave American soil and was the guest of honor on the new Argentina dreadnaught Moreno, under the Argentine flag. In his address President Wilson predicted a day when the Americas will be bound not merely by political ties but by mutual ideals and ideas. "We are rapidly approaching a day," he said, "when the Americas will draw together as never before and that it will be a union not of political ties, but of understanding and mutual happiness."

War Veteran Is Found Dead.

Salem, O.—Neighbors found the body of Seth A. Cook, 70, Civil war veteran, lying on the floor beside a partially packed suitcase at his home here. He died from heart failure a week ago while preparing to leave for a visit to the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. O. Leonard at Massillon. His friends thought he had started and his body was discovered by accident. Mr. Cook was in the grocery and laundry business in Canton and Salem for many years. His son Earl W. Cook, is a broker in Cincinnati.

Plans Saving of $49,700.

Columbus, O.—Asserting that if its recommendations are adopted the state will save $49,700 a year in the tax and public utilities commissions, the Howard economy probe committee prepared another section of its report to the general assembly.

In the public utilities commission the committee recommends the elimination of 16 positions, reductions of salaries in 13 and increases in two, and adds that if the department improves its organization, still further saving will result.

CORDELIA DREXEL BIDDLE

One of the most interesting weddings of the spring season will take place in Philadelphia on April 28, when Miss Cordelia Drexel Biddle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle, will become the bride of Angier B. Duke of New York. Miss Biddle, who is only 17, inherits her father's love of athletics. She was not to have made her debut for several seasons to come. But, owing to the war in Europe her plans for two years of study abroad were upset and she was included in the season's list of "buds" at the last minute.

DEMANDS REPARATION FOR INSULT TO U. S. FLAG

Bryan Acts When He Learns Mexicans Pulled Down Banner Floating Over House in Which American Was Murdered.

Washington, D. C.—The state department, according to Secretary Bryan, has made to the Mexican government a demand of reparation for the indignities to the American flag which was pulled down on the house of John D. McManus when he was murdered and his house looted by Zapatistas recently. The facts in the case of McManus and the flag, the state department says, are known to the White House, although there has never been an official statement that this government demanded reparation for the insult to the flag. The statements of Gen. Palafox, Zapata's minister for foreign affairs, on the subject of McManus have revealed only that he had expressed regret for the death of McManus and promised that the murderers would be apprehended and punished.

The official facts as to the flag incident obtained from the state department records by permission of Secretary Bryan, are these:

On March 11 the Brazilian minister at Mexico City reported that notwithstanding the American flag was flying on the house of McManus and the house was sealed by the Brazilian consul, the house was broken into and looted.

On the next day the Brazilian minister sent a message which stated that the international committee had reported to him the "desecration of the American flag." A photograph of the flag accompanied the statements to the minister from the committee.

On March 13 Secretary Bryan asked the Brazilian minister to report relative to the acts which constituted a "desecration to the American flag."

March 16 the Brazilian minister replied that the desecration of the flag referred to in his previous dispatch consisted in the fact that the flag was badly torn by the Zapatista forces "and dragged half way down the pole." Dragging the flag down, the minister said, followed the fusillade and preceded the entry by the Zapatistas into the house of McManus.

RUSH CANAL SURVEY

ENGINEERS EXPECT WORK WILL BE COMPLETED SOON ON OHIO WATERWAY.

Youngstown, O.—Work on the survey and estimates for the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio river barge canal from a point on Lake Erie about 7 miles west of Ashtabula to the Ohio river, at the mouth of the Beaver river, will be completed within two months, Chief Engineer G. H. Lehman of the canal board announced here.

Two routes have been surveyed, the engineer states. Both follow the Mahoning and Beaver rivers to a point above Niles, Trumbull county, O. From that point one follows Mosquito creek north toward the lake, while the other continues up the Mahoning river to Warren and from that place proceeds to a line toward the terminus.

Hurt Leaving Cemetery.

Zanesville, O.—While returning from the funeral of her husband killed by mine cars, Mrs. William A. Sayre of Caldwell perhaps was fatally hurt and four others were badly bruised in a runaway near Olin Valley. The others injured are Mary Sayre, 14, John and Miss Bennie Sears and William Seaton, the three last of Nelsonville. The horses became frightened while going down a hill and they dashed over an embankment and landed in Duck creek. The carriage turned over twice.

Hears Her Son Is Alive.

East Liverpool, O.—Mrs. Elizabeth Marquis of Lisbon has just received a letter from her son Robert, 24, whom she and her seven other children were mourning as dead. As a result she will ask the postal authorities to investigate the sending of a mysterious letter, signed "Ed. Monroe" and dated Lisbon, March 11, which advised her that her son had died of diptheria in St. Louis. Robert Marquis left Lisbon two years ago. He has been employed as brakeman on a western railroad. He writes he is enjoying good health.

KILL U. S. COTTON TRADE IN CHINA

Japs' Activity Is Shown In Secret Reports to the State Department.

INFORMATION COMES FROM OFFICIAL

Flowery Kingdom Is Forcing Neighbor Nation to Legalize Residence in Manchuria of 80,000 Japanese Exploiters of Country.

Washington, D. C.—Secret reports to the state department reveal some of the details of Japanese activity and aggressions in China which have an important bearing as contravening rights of American citizens of China.

Annihilates U. S. Cotton Trade.

One of these reports shows that Japan has succeeded in annihilating the United States trade in cotton with Manchuria. The report shows that the trade of the United States with that great province was largely in cotton goods of the cheaper kind. One of the department officials, after reading the new statistics, said: "Our cotton trade in Manchuria has simply disappeared."

Wants Residence Legalized.

Another secret bit of information to the state department, both from Tokio and Pekin, is that Japan is forcing China to legalize the residence in Manchuria of 80,000 Japanese exploiters of the country. The report says that Japan, by treaties with China, is allowed only "treaty ports," which ports are open also to Americans and other foreigners. After the Russo-Japanese war, however, and after the taking over of Korea by Japan, the Japanese government began pouring Japanese citizens into Manchuria as well as into Korea. The main purpose was colonization.

Calls It Discrimination.

"Southern and southeastern Manchuria," said the informant, "have been overrun with Japanese who had no legal right there. But Japan is now forcing China to accept those colonists as legal residents. That in itself is discrimination against the privileges of Americans in China. Manchuria is a part of China and Japan, by obtaining exclusive civic rights in that province for her colonists, is violating the open door."

These reports together show that a hard blow has been struck at American commerce directly by Japanese commercial influence and further disclose the ultimate purpose of Japan to hold on to Manchuria.

SUBMARINE IS FOUND

U. S. DIVING BOAT, MISSING MORE THAN 30 HOURS, TOWED TO SHALLOW WATER.

Honolulu, S. I.—The American submarine F-4, lost since Thursday morning off Honolulu harbor, was found Friday afternoon. Heroic efforts are being made to raise the stricken craft, but after having been submerged for more than 30 hours it was regarded as doubtful whether any of her crew of 26 men remained alive.

First efforts to lift the little vessel to the surface proved vain and it was found necessary to send to the Pearl harbor naval station for a derrick and crane. This involved much loss of time and the fate of the crew has not yet been determined. Rescue vessels dragging the ocean bed with grappling hooks chanced upon the stricken craft at a depth of 300 feet.

OPEN FIGHT WITH SONG

TEMPERANCE WORKERS START CAMPAIGN BY WARBLING 'ALL CHICAGO DRY.'

Chicago, Ill.—In opening the campaign for a "dry Chicago" at a public meeting here, George F. Rinehart, superintendent of the Chicago Dry Federation, led a choir in singing the new campaign song, "All Chicago Dry; All Chicago Dry," to the tune of "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Mr. Rinehart's subject was, "How to Make Chicago as Dry as the Arizona Desert."

His plan, he said, was to conduct a political crusade until the municipal election in April, 1916.

Auto Fatally Hurts Youth.

Springfield, O.—Harvey McAllister, aged seven, was fatally injured here, when he was struck by an automobile belonging to State Senator A. R. Garver of Tippecanoe City. Mrs. Garver and several other women were in the machine, which was driven by the chauffeur. The boy's skull was fractured. At the hospital it was said he could not recover.

Motor Speeder Kills Two.

Kenton, O.—Two men were killed and one probably fatally injured when a motor speeder, which they were riding on the Erie railroad track, was derailed. The dead: George Page and Mell Simpson; fatally injured, W. H. Nau. The men, all of whom lived in the village of Foraker, were railroad employes, and were returning home after having attended a theater performance in Kenton. Railroad men say the men drove their speeder too fast. A passing train crew discovered the dead bodies along the track.

Society Man Is Freed.

White Plains, N. Y.—Richard S. Darling, aged 24, society man and president of the Acme Sanitary Safe Co. of New York City, was acquitted here on the white slavery charge tried before Judge Platt.

The jury found that Darling had not induced, procured or enticed Miss Katherine Lyall Shaw, 19-year-old wife of Robert Marsden Shaw, a New York banker, to go to the Gedney Farms hotel on Dec. 31, 1913, as alleged by Shaw, for "immoral purposes."

PRINCESS HENRIETTE

Princess Henriette, duchess of Vendome and sister of King Albert of Belgium, is making her temporary home in England with other members of the royal family.

TWO SHOT TO DEATH IN REVOLVER BATTLE

Fishermen Are Killed When They Clash With Game Wardens Just Outside of City Limits of Cincinnati

Cincinnati, O.—Two men were killed and three others wounded, one probably fatally, in a revolver battle Sunday morning between six game wardens and three fishermen who had been seining in the Little Miami river, just outside the city limits.

James L. (Tip) Lemmon, 55, a peddler, was killed in a wagon in which the fishermen were hauling away the fish, and Charles Fabor, 41, also a peddler, died soon after being taken to the City hospital. Ed Kleinfelter, the other fisherman, is not expected to recover.

Game Warden Louis Kuertz was shot in the right hand and Deputy Game Warden Dave Ferris was shot in the left arm. Neither injury is expected to prove serious.

Warden Kuertz said he had been trying to trap Lemmon for a long time; Lemmon is alleged to have said he would kill the game warden if he attempted to arrest him.

Late Saturday night Warden Kuertz received information that the men had placed a large seine in the Little Miami. The warden rounded up several deputies and sped in an auto to the river.

Just before his party reached the river he passed three men in a wagon. He drove past them and ordered his deputies to walk back through the bushes to the wagon.

The men were stopped by the warden and asked what a barrel in the vehicle contained. One of the men pulled the cover from it and it was found to be full of fish. Game Warden Kuertz then told the men they were under arrest.

One of the men believed to have been Lemmon, was on the seat of the wagon. He opened fire through the cover over his lap and a bullet penetrated Ferris' arm. The other two men and the game wardens then opened fire simultaneously.

BODY IS FOUND IN ICE

CORPSE OF WOMAN MISSING FOR FOUR MONTHS DUG FROM FROZEN TOMB.

Cleveland, O.—A four months' search for Mrs. Marcus Morey, 24, who disappeared Nov. 13, ended March 28 when her body was found imbedded in the ice in Rocky river at the foot of Sloan-st, Lakewood. The finding of the body made certain the fears of her relatives that she had carried out the threat made in a note she left to end her life.

"I don't know anything of a mother's care and wife's duties in a household," Mrs. Morey had said in the letter addressed to her husband, Marcus Morey, salesman for the J. M. & L. A. Osborn Co. "The baby must have good care," the note went on. "Oh, how I love him and you."

Since the birth of her baby, Ralph Morey, ten months before she disappeared, Mrs. Morey had been ill, her relatives say, and had constantly expressed the fear that she was incapable of caring properly for her little one.

Two Hurt as Auto Hits Bridge.

Springfield, O.—Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Orulick of Dayton were injured here when their automobile collided with a guide rail on a bridge on the Valley pike, seven miles west of this city.

Three Killed by Live Wire.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Three persons were killed and two badly shocked and bruised by current from a high voltage wire which broke and fell across the rear fence of a house.

The dead: Capt. Valhoff, 40; Mrs. Helge Valhoff, 33, his wife; Harris Skinner, 50.

The 2,200 volts in the broken wire set fire to the fence across which it fell. Valhoff and Skinner were killed when they threw buckets of water on the flames. Mrs. Valhoff seized her husband's hand and fell dead.

Many Attend Peace Meeting.

Akron, O.—Eight thousand people registered a positive protest against war and cheered the eloquent pleas for ultimate universal peace made by John Hays Hammond, widely known civil engineer; Henry Clews, New York banker, and John Wesley Hill, president of the International Peace forum, at the great peace meeting in the Cherry Street tabernacle. The speakers declared, however, that strong and effective coast defenses are necessary so long as the possibility of United States invasion exists.

THREE BOATS SUNK, MANY LIVES LOST

Two British Liners Are Torpedoed and Dutch Steamship Is Mine Victim.

WORK OF GERMAN SUBMARINE RAIDERS

Both English Vessels Are Torpedoed Before the Passengers and Crews Could Safely Be Transferred to the Lifeboats.

London, England.—Reports officially confirmed by the admiralty state that two British liners have been torpedoed and sunk by German submarines and a Dutch steamer sent to the bottom in a German mine field during 48 hours. Both British ships were torpedoed before the passengers and crews could safely be transferred to the boats and many lives of non-combatants were lost. Of the passengers and crews of the two liners 136 persons are missing. The crew of the Dutch steamer was saved. One of the German submarine raiders was recognized as the U-28.

Statement of Admiralty.

The admiralty has just issued the following statement: "The British steamer Aguila of the Yeoward line, bound from Liverpool for Lisbon, was torpedoed off Pembroke at 6 p. m., March 27. The vessel sank. Twenty-three of the crew and three passengers are missing. The master and 19 members of the crew were landed at Fishguard. "The British steamer Falaba, 4,806 tons, of the Elder-Dempster line, bound from Liverpool for the West African coast, was torpedoed at 25 minutes past noon on March 28 south of St. Georges channel and sank in 10 minutes. The ship carried a crew of about 90 persons and about 160 passengers. About 140 survived and were picked up, eight of whom, including the captain died afterwards. It is feared that many were killed by the explosion of the torpedo. The Dutch steamship Amstel of 853 tons, owned by P. A. Van Es & Co., bound from Rotterdam for Goole, Eng., was struck by a mine at 4 a. m., March 29, in a German mine field off Flamborough. The crew was landed at Humber by the Grimsby trawler Pinewold."

Details of Disaster.

Official reports give further details of the disaster to the British liners. The Aguila, a twin screw steamer built in 1909, was signaled by the German submarine U-28 when about 50 miles southwest of the Smalls on the southeast coast of Ireland. It was just growing dusk when the raider tore down upon the liner from her quarter. The first signal made was for all aboard to take to the boats as the liner was to be sunk. This work was started at once and expedited under urging of further signals to speed the work. Four minutes after the first warning signal was made the submarine began to fire on the ship. The first torpedo exploded near her engine room and the explosion killed the chief engineer, a boatswain and the donkey man outright. According to stories of survivors the submarine fired on the crew as the men were getting into the boats and 10 were drowned. This accounts for 13 of the missing. The admiralty says there were 10 others, besides three passengers, who have not been accounted for. After the Aguila sunk—and she sank almost at once—the U-28 sped away and later hailed the Ottilie, a trawler, reported the sinking of the Aguila and the Ottilie proceeded to the scene and rescued the survivors.

State 125 Lives Lost.

The Elder-Dempster Co., owners of the Falaba, state that no less than 125 lives were lost when the West African liner was sunk by a torpedo Sunday near Milford Haven. Survivors, of whom there were between 130 and 145, state that the only warning given those aboard were three blasts from the whistle of the raider, signaling them to take to the boats. So hurriedly was the launching of the boats carried out that the first sank on touching the water. The second and third boats were smashed against the side of the ship by the sea. The fourth, the last to get away, carried 24 men. All the occupants of the first three boats were thrown into the water. The submarine circled about without attempting to render any assistance to those in the water, according to the survivors.

At the offices of the liner it was stated that the drifter Eileen Emma saved 116 of those left floundering in the water; of those six died aboard the drifter, including the master of the liner, Capt. Davis. The drifter Wenlock picked up six persons alive and rescued two bodies. Another drifter, the Orient II, picked up 14 men in a lifeboat. All were landed at Milford Haven.

The chief officer of the Falaba was in the water for two hours before he was rescued. The two stewardesses of the ship were lost. Lieut. Blakeley, an army officer, was picked up dead.

Noted Office Owner Dies.

Painesville, O.—Frank J. Rexford, aged 79, Mentor grocer and justice of the peace, is dead. Rexford was famous as the secretary of numerous Cleveland steamship companies whose offices were located in tiny quarters over Rexford's store, so they could profit by the low Mentor district tax rate. The tiny store owned by Rexford was the headquarters of more steamship companies than any other one building in the world. All of the annual meetings of the company were held in the cramped quarters.

Miners Sue to Recover Wages.

Zanesville, O.—Peace negotiations between the Elk Coal Co. of Roseville and the striking miners failed at the last minute and 50 miners have filed suit to recover their wages. Legal representatives of the miners stated the remaining 90 employes will file similar suits. The coal company is holding back the wages and has asked the court to apply the $4,000 due the miners to pay part of a judgment for $25,000 asked by the company on the ground the miners prevented the filling of contracts.

TWO BILLS BRING MANY PROTESTS

Measures Proposing Reading of Bible in Public Schools Stir Up Tempest.

BRUNT OF ATTACK IS BORNE BY JEWS

Introduction of Bills Into the Ohio Assembly Is Part of National Movement Which Is Led by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

PROPOSAL to compel Bible reading in the public schools has stirred up a miniature tempest in the general assembly. Incident to the appearance of two bills on the subject more than a week ago, petitions favoring reading of the Scriptures to school pupils have been flooding the general assembly. Now the tide is beginning to turn and the petitions are floating in protesting against the passage of the bills. Probably no subject that has come before the assembly this year has created such intense feeling. The brunt of the attack upon proposals is being borne by Jewish societies just now, and it is owing largely to the protest of these societies that consideration of the measures has been postponed by the house schools committee with which they are lodged. The introduction of the bills is part of a national movement which is led by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts. The movement is being aided in Ohio by the W. C. T. U. and various other organizations. The Totman bill, first introduced, makes the reading of the Bible purely optional and would put the question up to the school authorities. It is the Hines bill which will be fought over. This makes compulsory the reading each day in school rooms of ten verses of the Scriptures. The reading is to be wholly without comment on the part of the teacher. The teacher whose duty it is to read the verses is to be discharged if she refuses or omits to do so. Opposition to the bill is based for the most part on the argument that it constitutes an infringement upon religious liberty and as a step toward the association of church and state, against which the American government is committed.

State Begins Investigation.

Investigations have been started by order of the governor and the attorney general's department to determine if steps should be taken to remove Probate Judge R. W. Baggott of Montgomery county and Mayor George W. McLeish and City Solicitor Roy N. Merryman, both of Steubenville, and two other lesser officials of that city from office because of complaints filed against them by state examiners. Special Counsel Charles Follett and John O. Price of the attorney general's office are working on the Baggott case, while Assistant Attorney General Henry S. Ballard is in charge of the investigation of the cases against the Steubenville officials. The accounting bureau returned findings of nearly $2,000 against Judge Baggott. The charges against the Steubenville officials are based on a report made by State Examiner John A. Bliss. They showed an alleged disgraceful state of affairs in that city. One of the favorite diversions of the city officials after raiding a speakeasy was to divide up the "booze" they confiscate among themselves, one of the charges averred. Resorts and gambling houses apparently were permitted to run wide open and certain officials, it is alleged, reaped profits from city contracts. Incompetent men were placed in charge of the city's works, and the people's money squandered right and left. The officials mentioned in the report are, in addition the Mayor George W. McLeish and Solicitor Roy N. Merryman, who opposed Attorney General Turner for the Republican nomination for attorney general last fall, Service Director James P. Gavin and Safety Director Hugh W. Patterson. Auditor Donahey said that Merryman had failed to take steps to recover findings of more than $12,000 against city officials returned by the state accounting bureau.

Wrangle Over Appointment.

A fight is on between the state civil service commission and the state board of administration over the refusal of the latter to appoint Prof. J. Frank Lumb, a blind teacher, superintendent of the state school for the blind in place of H. C. Maurer, the acting superintendent. The board is satisfied with the services of Maurer and does not want to appoint Lumb because of his physical infirmity. The civil service commission certified Lumb for the place and refuses to approve Maurer's salary. "We hold that the board has the right to select its own superintendent, and we do not intend to make any change for the present," said Thomas E. Davey, one of the members. The courts may be asked to settle the trouble.

Biggest Crooks Are Blackmailers.

William J. Burns, the well-known detective, who was in Columbus visiting relatives, said that the biggest crooks in the country are blackmailers, who find this more profitable and safer than other dishonest practices. "These fellows secure the best looking and smartest women they can find and set traps for big men," said Burns. "They are absolutely unscrupulous and are the biggest menace we have to contend with at the present time." Burns said that the country is suffering less from crooks now than heretofore.

Attorney General Edward C. Turner from his sick bed the other night ordered that his opinion on the tax muddle of the assembly be sent to that body. He holds that as emergency bill itself as well as an emergency section must have a two-thirds vote of both houses. This situation has arisen as a result of the declaration by Democrats that the Beitler tax bill, designed to supplant the Warnes law, has not legally passed the assembly.

Turner puts himself in the clear on the ruling, addressing it to the officers and members of the general assembly. He told them the legislative proceedings under which the Beitler bill was passed were faulty and the bill, in fact, did not pass. He went into the details on the discussion of emergency legislation, holding the course followed by the last assembly was wrong.

Turner made it plain that no declaration of the legislature created an emergency and held on court for a moment would be bound by such a declaration. If emergencies were created by declaration, he said, no law on the subject would be required.

"It would be far better to halt now on this manifestly wrong course and to start anew on the right course at this time than to have matters further complicated by following the erroneous interpretations of a preceding legislature," was the concluding sentence of the Turner opinion.

In another part of the ruling he said he felt that the policy of his department should be made public, so the legislature and other state departments may know its attitude.

He holds that bills offered as emergency laws and failing to get the two-thirds vote could not be counted as having passed as ordinary laws.

Finds Dire Distress.

Dire distress exists in the little mining town of Connorville, near Moxahala, Perry county, according to H. H. Howett, visitor of the board of state charities, who has returned from a trip to that place. "While in Moxahala on official business Truant Officer William Longstreth of that place told me of the destitution of Connorville, and asked me to go there, which I did," said Mr. Howett. "I found 15 families that are actually starving. It is a mining town and there has been practically no mining work during the past year. Many children there are ill from lack of food. There is one family that is subsisting from the milk they get from a cow they own. They have no feed for the cow and it lives by what grass it can crop from the fields. The residents have sold nearly all their household effects to get food. In most of the houses in addition to a stove there is hardly any furniture. The children can't go to school because they haven't enough clothing to keep them warm. The situation is truly a pitiable one and something should be done to relieve it. The people are so badly off that they do not know what to do to help themselves."

Will Be Disappointed.

Owners of cattle killed on account of the foot and mouth disease last winter will be disappointed when they learn that the state will not reimburse them for their losses before next summer. The state agricultural commission nearly two months ago certified to the federal government and the general assembly the names of those who should be compensated and the government at once paid its share. No provision has been made by the legislature for the payment of the state's share, and when action for this will be taken no one knows. The loss to owners is divided equally between the government and state. The bill to reimburse the owners must be in the secretary of state's office before it goes into effect, and as a result the money for this will not be available before some time next summer. "The assembly should have passed this bill in January," said A. B. Caple, a Wood county dairyman, who was in Columbus Friday, trying to collect $6,000 which the state owes him for cattle lost.

Tod Calls on Willis.

Brimful of good humor, former State Senator David Tod of Youngstown who lost the Republican nomination for governor in 1914, stopped off in Columbus recently and paid a courtesy call on Governor Willis, the man who defeated him for that nomination. State house friends of Mr. Tod told him that they expected to see him back in the political game later, but he shied away from the suggestion and said that he was well satisfied with the one experience that he had, which, while exceedingly interesting, he was not eager to have repeated. "But you might not have the same experience the next time—you might win," protested one friend. Mr. Tod smiled, but made no comment. The Youngstown man was on his way to Lexington, Ky., to look over some fine horses he has there.

Will Recommend Reorganization.

Reorganization of the state treasurer's office, the state fire marshal's office and the state agricultural commission will be recommended in the legislature soon by the state civil service commission, an official declares. The proposed changes will call for many salary cuts.

Will Have Little to Do.

The liquor license board to be appointed for Logan county by the state liquor license commission will have very little to do because there is only one saloon license to be granted in the county. Lakeview is the only community in the county where liquor may be sold and its population only entitles it to one saloon. The county is one of the driest spots in the state and an effort to vote Lakeview dry is being talked of. Two license commissioners were appointed for the county, but they resigned because of the meagerness of their pay.

Says Diseases Can Be Prevented.

The loss to the state each year from preventable diseases amounts to $100,000,000, according to Dr. E. F. McCampbell, secretary of the state board of health. Of the 68,000 deaths in the state last year, 28,000 were from diseases that can be prevented. He says that with proper personal hygiene the average life can be lengthened 10 years or more. There are fewer old persons living today than 40 years ago. This is due to an increase in chronic diseases of the heart, blood vessels and kidneys.

Awarded for Loss of Eye.

Loss of one eye and partial loss of the other is worth more compensation than the statutory total of the workmen's compensation law for separation, the industrial commission held in awarding Phillip Reese, 932 E. 70th st., Cleveland, $2,808, covering a total of 312 weeks' compensation. Reese was injured at the plant of the Linde Air Products Co. when a gauge on an oxygen plant exploded. Should he lose the sight of his remaining eye he will be entitled to a permanent total award, drawing $9 a week.

STATUS OF THE OHIO FLOOD ACT

SOON WILL BE DECIDED BY THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF OHIO.

ADVANCED TO EARLY HEARING

Controversy as to Whether There Is a Conservancy Law Touches Sufficiency of the Action of House.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—Early adjudication of the status of the Vonderheide act by the Ohio supreme court, which has been in dispute since the referendum question became acute, has been made possible. The tribunal advanced the proceeding in error from the Montgomery county court of appeals to an early hearing on the motion of the Dayton conservancy advocates. Thus far the referendum question has not been raised, but it is considered likely that it will be brought forward at this time.

The controversy as to whether there is a conservancy law touches the sufficiency of the action of the house of representatives of the Eightieth general assembly. The house gave a mere majority and not a two-thirds vote to the Vonderheide act, although the house passed the emergency clause by the necessary two-thirds. Whether the oversight will destroy the act is the issue that will likely be submitted to the court with other questions in the case.

ROSEVILLE MINERS ARE SUED

For Elk Company For $25,000 Because They Went on Strike.

Zanesville, O.—The first suit of its kind ever filed in the world according to local attorneys, was entered here by the Elk Coal Co., of Roseville, Muskingum county, against 145 miners in its employ for $25,000 damages. The mine owners claim the miners broke their wage agreement and closed the mine on March 17. The petition states that when the mine owners discharged three men the miners struck instead of submitting their grievance to arbitration by district officials, according to their working agreement. The owners claim that the miners are insolvent and ask the court to order wages owed the miners applied to any judgment which may be entered.

DRYS CIRCULATE PETITIONS.

Toledo, O.—Representatives of the dry forces are busy circulating petitions in Northwestern Ohio counties. J. Sanford, district superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, says the proposed amendment differs from that on which a vote was taken last fall. The new proposal prohibits only the sale and the manufacture of intoxicating liquors within the borders of the state. It does not prohibit their importation. Sanford says the interstate shipping laws will cover this feature for them.

CANAL BILLS ARE CONSIDERED.

Columbus, O.—Legislation to abandon a large part of the canal system of Ohio came before the General Assembly. One bill calls for abandonment of the Miami & Erie canal from Defiance to Dayton; a second provides for letting the water out of the Loramie reservoir and selling the land covered by it, and a third provides for abandonment of a portion of the Ohio canal in Tuscarawas county.

THE VERY SAME ROPE USED.

Upper Sandusky, O.—After brooding for six months over the suicide of his son, Oscar Steen, who secured a halter rope from the barn at his father's home near Carey, went to the woods and hung himself, the father, Elias Steen, aged 66, took the same halter rope, climbing on the same stump in the woods, tied the rope about the same limb and hung himself by jumping off the stump.

BOY FARMERS ARE GIVEN PRIZES

Dayton, O.—Dayton schoolboys who made good as farmers' assistants last summer, were given prizes. Thirty-nine of the 200 who spent the summer on farms, in agricultural extension work, will win prizes of from $5 to $25 each.

MAN KILLED ON HIS FIRST TRIP.

Coldwell, O.—William Sayer, American, of Belle Valley, a driver in Florence mine, was instantly killed when several cars, on one of which he was riding, passed over him.

SCHOOL CENTRALIZATION LOSES.

Marion, O.—By a majority of 17, school centralization and a proposed $26,500 bond issue were defeated in an election held in Montgomery and Big Island Township.

BITTEN BY DOG; MAY LOSE ARM.

Napoleon, O.—While playing with a pet dog here, Henry Wagner, aged 50, was bitten on his right hand. Blood poison developed. He may lose his arm.

MAN BURNS TO DEATH IN HOME.

Cambridge, O.—Sandy Rose, aged 58, was burned to death in his home near Middlebury. Neighbors discovered the house in flames and found Rose dead when they arrived.

FOUND DEAD; MONEY MISSING.

[illegible]—Peter Dower, aged 55, employe of the Floyd Coal Company, was found dead on the Chesapeake and Ohio track by a section crew.

TWO GO DRY; ONE WET

Convoy and Franklin Against Saloons—Lebanon For Them.

Van Wert, O.—A Beal election was held in Convoy, resulting in 157 votes being cast against the return of the saloon and 105 for it. All other corporations in Van Wert County have voted to keep the saloons out. Two hundred farmers living in territory adjacent to the village signed petitions urging the voters to keep Convoy dry. Lebanon, the wets were victors in a Beal law election here by a majority of 54 votes. Franklin, the drys won by a majority of 34 votes in a Beal law election.

QUARANTINE TO BE MODIFIED

In All Areas of State, If the Federal and State Plan Is Adopted

Cincinnati, O.—State and federal authorities directing the work of stamping out the foot and mouth epidemic have under consideration now a plan to declare all modified quarantine areas in the state, restricted areas—a less rigorous quarantine condition following thorough disinfection of all stock yards, pens, stock cars, etc., in the state.

This disinfection under inspection would require retention of the veterinary inspectors for perhaps 60 days longer in the work, but it would mean the most far-reaching relief the live stock interests of the state have yet had from quarantine restrictions.

Modified areas—those from which shipments are allowed only on certification of an inspector to points where there is federal inspection and for immediate slaughter, now represent the greater portion of the state.

Eleven thousand eight hundred and seventy head of stock were slaughtered in Ohio in the recent epidemic of foot and mouth disease, according to statistics received from Washington. According to the statistics offered, Ohio makes a better showing than any of the states in the efficiency of its campaign against the disease.

ASKS ANOTHER LAW CHANGE

More Radical Provisions Sought by New Board Member.

Coshocton, O.—Charles G. Williams, newly-appointed member of the State Moving Picture Censor board, announced that he will ask the legislature to change the present law governing the censorship of moving pictures, so manufacturers as well as exhibitors, may be prosecuted for displaying films not censored.

TO INAUGURATE BENEFIT PLAN

Cincinnati, O.—The Procter & Gamble Co. here made public the details of the new pension and benefit plan recently inaugurated by that company. The name of the fund to be created under this plan is "The Procter & Gamble Co. Pension and Benefit Fund." The purpose is to benefit under certain rules and restrictions employes of the Procter & Gamble Co., the Procter & Gamble Distributing Co. of the United States and Canada, and the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. It constitutes no contract and confers no legal right upon any employe. All employes participating in the plan upon attaining the age of 65 years (women 50 years) may, with the consent of the board of directors of the company, retire from service, or may be required to retire, and upon reaching the age of 65 years (women 55 years) shall retire, unless formally requested in writing by the board of directors of the company to remain longer in service.

TEST SUIT AGAINST CLERK

Urbana, O.—A test case to determine the right of clerks of the courts of Ohio to retain one-half of the fees in naturalization cases was brought here when Prosecuting Attorney H. W. Houston filed a petition demanding that M. R. Talbot be required to restore to the county treasurer $950 he had drawn between the years 1906 and 1909. The suit is brought at the behest of the County Clerks' Association of Ohio for the protection of numerous court clerks in larger cities where naturalization fees are large, and where certain political enemies are said to be agitating a return of fees to county treasuries.

FIND WORK FOR 1,509 PERSONS.

Columbus, O.—Employment was found for 1,509 persons last week by the five Free Employment Agencies conducted by the State Industrial Commission at Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton and Toledo. Preparations for the early opening of state employment agencies at Akron and Youngstown were made here. Lee B. Faris was named Provisional Superintendent at Akron and W. C. Simcox at Youngstown. Lillian Aller was named provisional clerk at Youngstown.

RICH MARION COUNTY MAN DIES

Marion, O.—Benjamin Franklin Sager, aged 81, vice president of the Campholf National bank at Larue and Marion county's wealthiest citizen died from blood poisoning.

FALL WILL CAUSE MAN'S DEATH.

Napoleon, O.—Losing his balance while sitting on the guard railing, Jasper Strubel fell 12 feet into an open basement entrance. His skull was fractured.

TO PAY CLOVER LEAF INTEREST.

Toledo, O.—Walter L. Ross, receiver for the Clover Leaf Railway, was authorized in federal court to pay the semi-annual interest on the company's 4 per cent gold bonds, amounting to $130,000.

CONGRESSMAN'S MOTHER DIES.

Batavia, O.—Mrs. Armanda Kearns, mother of Congressman Charles Kearns, died after an illness of several weeks.

HAS PEOPLE'S TRUST

Country Satisfied With the Work of Congress.

Tariff, Honestly and Skillfully Drawn, Has Set a New Mark in History—Currency Bill Also a Great Achievement.

The first great achievement of the Sixty-third congress, called in special session in the summer of 1913, was the revision of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. We have heard from the protected interests much criticism of the wisdom of the Underwood act and many gloomy prophecies of its ultimate effect upon American industries. But, "our enemies themselves being judges," this law is free from the most serious defect of the tariffs that preceded it, for it was drawn honestly. There has not been a breath of suspicion cast upon the good intent that inspired it. There has been no rubber scandal, no woolen scandal, no glove scandal, no sugar scandal, in consequence of its making. And in this respect it has set a new mark in the tariff history of fifty years.

The second great achievement of the congress was the currency bill. This measure, put into operation under the most adverse circumstances, has the unique distinction of commanding the support both of Wall street and the West. It is but the recognition of plain fact to note that the causes of this gratifying result were primarily moral. When congress met neither house contained a single member who was eminent for his knowledge of finance. But the congress, with the party of the South and the West in control, had honestly revised the tariff downward, and dealt with sugar, with lumber and with wool in a truly national spirit. Men trusted it. As a result, the best knowledge and experience of bankers, financiers, economists and merchants were freely poured out. Radicals and reactionaries alike forgot their prejudices and came together to work out common needs in a patriotic way. And the world has applauded the result.

Abundance and Prosperity.

In four months deposits in Kansas City banks have increased more than $28,000,000 and are now larger than ever before. There has never been as large an increase in any similar period of any previous year. The record gives evidence of the prosperity and the wealth of the territory of which Kansas City is the financial and commercial center. The profits arising from last year's big wheat crop and the business stimulated thereby in large measure accounts for the big increase. The present indications are that another big crop will be raised this year. Never before was the substantial basis of prosperity more solid in the West than it is at the present time, and there is every reason to expect a year of expanding trade and good times in Kansas City territory.

Wilson: Statesman and Politician.

In discussing Woodrow Wilson as statesman and politician we take up the latter aspect of his administration of the presidency, for the reason that no man's statesmanlike qualities ever benefited his fellow-beings unless he was a good politician to begin with. Statesmanship is concerned with ends, politics with means. To arrive at the first one must command the second. The president's leadership of the legislative branch of the government has eventuated in the most constructive session of congress in fifty years because he is a consummate politician.

Worked for Public Good.

The future of democracy, after all, is conditioned primarily on the moral qualities of a people. In seeking the reason why the present congress has written more constructive legislation than any other in half a century we have not far to look. It is to be found not in any new-fangled theories but in the possession of the plain, old-fashioned virtues of honesty and regard for the public good. The nation says "Well done!"

One Thing Pretty Sure.

The McKinley example of prompt achievement is precisely what the people are today determined shall be followed by the Republican president certain to enter the White House on March 4, 1917. His name is of no consequence.—New York Evening Mail.

Any servant of the interests will answer the purpose, but his name will be of the greatest consequence. The first letter of it will be Monopoly Tariff, of course.

Realize His Worth.

Now it is Senator Underwood, and the Democrats in the senate will welcome his able leadership.

Did All That Was to Be Done.

Judging by the results accomplished, the session of congress recently closed was more or less of a routine session. President Wilson's desire to carry out a further constructive program by passing conservation and other measures was not realized in fact, there was a plain reaction against executive pressure, after the uniform concessions of the previous sessions. But routine matters, after all, are the most necessary. And congress can congratulate itself that it did the business that had to be done.

The Foreign Trade.

Imports are decreasing and exports are still on the increase, according to the most recent statistics of the department of commerce. While the increase in the foreign trade does not mean a great deal compared with the total volume of domestic trade, which is seventeen times as great in normal times, nevertheless it has provided so much work for those who need employment that the present results cannot fail to arouse the most extreme satisfaction.

FINALLY GOT HIS INTERVIEW

Death of James Creelman Recalls Remarkable Exploit of Newspaper Man.

James Creelman's death in Germany while still in the prime of life recalls an exploit of which any newspaper reporter might be proud, observes the Wall Street Journal. He was in London at the time of the Baring crisis in 1890, and performed the unheard-of feat of securing for the New York Herald an exclusive interview with the governor of the Bank of England.

It is a matter of history how the governor, the right Hon. William H. Lidderdale, handled that crisis. He lived to see the Barings successfully liquidated and stronger than ever, with the financial situation in Argentine restored, the £3,000,000 gold which he borrowed by means of acceptances from the Bank of France returned in due course with the seals of the packages unbroken. The London market was tided over a desperate emergency with the minimum of disturbance, although there were some forty failures in the stock exchange.

Lidderdale died not long ago leaving an estate valued at only £2,000. He was a strong man and an honest one. But the idea of interviewing him was so remote that only an irreverent American would have thought of it. Creelman had no pass key or letters of introduction. He simply went to the Bank of England, and staring with the astonishing "beadle," worked his way up. He was sent from department to department, to the secret amusement of various heads, until he actually found himself in the presence of the governor.

But the joke failed to explode. Lidderdale was a long-headed Scotchman, much too intelligent not to see the value of publicity at such a time. He was no slave to precedent. He gave Creelman an excellent interview of a frank and reassuring character, which was published in the following Sunday's New York Herald. It was a great scoop, and the London papers spent money frantically on cable toll getting facts on their own situation from New York for their Monday morning issue.

A precedent was set, and since that time English financiers have been more approachable. It may be said also that publicity there, as in Wall street, has done much to clean up admitted evils, and to set honest finance right with public opinion. The story is well worth recalling for it has an obvious moral which should never be forgotten.

New Telegraph Code.

A new form of code chart for simplifying the teaching of the Continental telegraph code has been evolved by a Chicago inventor. In place of the usual method of representing the different telegraphic equivalents for letters and figures in the form of dots and dashes, the characters are indicated by small and large letters or figures, the former representing the dots and the latter the dashes. For instance, the letter "A" is represented as "a A" meaning dot dash. The letter "B" is shown as "B bbb" or dash dot dot dot. Thus, by this simple method, the inventor has eliminated the great confusion arising from the dash-dot representations of the various characters. The letters and figures are fixed in the memory of the student as large and small characters instead of in the form of a complicated mass of letters, figures and combinations of dots and dashes. It is stated that this chart has greatly simplified the learning of the code.

The Practice of Kicking.

Kicking, like charity, should begin at home. It ought to be the duty of everybody at home to object, persistently and effectively, to the specific overcrowded street car, the badly paved road, the encroaching doorstep, the neglected yard, the malodorous cesspool, the irresponsible motor car and the reckless railroad—especially if he have any personal part in the maintenance of similar abuses. If the tendency of these evils were rightly apprehended, if a part only of the effort that is expended, presumably, in objecting to generalized, foreign and futile subjects were bestowed on specific and tangible details, if we would forego the emotional pleasure of the impersonal "muck rake" to assail the evil at our very feet—especially if each one of us were careful to avoid offense in matters of the same kind—our country would surely be a much fairer one.—The Unpopular Review.

New Subterranean Fauna.

Deep mines present conditions likely to evolve a new subterranean fauna from animals accidentally imprisoned and having sufficient endurance to survive the change. At a depth of 750 feet in a mine of the Midlothian Coalfield, Scotland, Dr. James Ritchie has found 13 animal forms, and he concludes that many others may be carried into deep underground workings. These animals were away from any ventilating shaft reaching the surface, the main shaft being a quarter of a mile distant. They are supposed to have been introduced mostly on the props of Norwegian fir and with the horse fodder, but some may have been drawn in by the suction of the ventilating fans. The species noted were the common mouse, the brown rat, the house sparrow, the great slug, a small spider, two beetles, two flies, the springtail or pit flea, two earthworms and a mycetozoon on the pit props.

Reason for Drier in Paint.

The linseed oil in paint naturally resists the drying effect of the atmosphere, and because of this it is necessary to add something to the paint mixture to overcome the resistance. Drier is prepared for this purpose, its function being to absorb oxygen rapidly and convert the film into a hard, insoluble product. During this process the linseed oil is changed into linoxyn, and the drier continues its oxidation until the paint film is eventually destroyed.

Drier is made by adding salts to a certain amount of linseed oil which is heated up to about 500 degrees F. The temperature is allowed to drop and turpentine or a mixture of turpentine and benzine added.

BOYS READ THIS

Have you ever noticed that the fellow who runs most of the big concerns of the country are the ones who always return courteous answers? If you address the president of the railroad he will listen attentively and make a decent reply. But you ask a civil question of the cub at the depot in a country town and you will get a smart and flippy reply. Go into a big city store and ask for the manager. He will talk pleasantly and give you the desired information. But happen to get in the way of the bright young fellow who is washing a window and he will hand you a package that will make your blood boil. But drop around twenty years later and the cub at the depot may have advanced until he is a brakeman on the local freight and the window washer will probably be driving one of the delivery wagons for the store. The presidents of railroads and the managers of big concerns are the fellows who in flowery days of their youth acquired the habit of returning soft and courteous answers. That is one of the reasons they became railroad presidents and managers of big concerns. The cub who knows more than the president of the railroad will always be a cub, and the sleepy window washer will still be polishing glass in the autumn time of his days.

TWO KINDS OF MEN

Civilized men make roads, the savages do not. This is the safest test of civilization.

Among us, in all communities, are individuals who are not really civilized. They do not take any interest in roads.

A man's scale of civilization is very correctly tested by his attitude toward the stone which has rolled into the road or the tree which has blown down across it. The man who drives around the obstacle day after day is one sort of a man, the man who stops his team and rolls or drags it away is another. And the person passing along a road which he does not expect to retrace, who removes the obstruction for the sake of the stranger who comes after him, responds to a very high test of civilization. He feels socially.

This can be applied to rubbish in front of your store or residence. To remove same means that you are the right sort of man or woman. To let it remain, and be removed by another is just the opposite.

Many times an accident has been prevented by the removal of paper, boxes, and the like, from public places.

SIDE LINE FARMING

The side lines on the farm are money makers. If you grow just corn and oats there is a busy season and a time of year there is no work to do at all. But if the seed corn business is started, a few pure-bred hogs, sheep, cattle or chickens, the time is taken up more evenly throughout the year. If you have hogs as a side line you will study them, go to shows to see your desired breed and learn all you can about them. It will make the farm life more interesting and there is a lot of satisfaction in knowing all about any one subject.

Ask any man who has started such a side line on his farm and has gone to the bottom of it and he will say it has been paying. You feel more like raising chickens if you know why chickens do not lay eggs and why corn is not the best feed for them.

Such a side line costs little. It can be started with one calf, a half dozen chickens, a bushel of seed or a colt.

THE WASTE ACRES

The state of Ohio should take up the matter of reforesting the waste acres of the state. Five million acres in Ohio are non-productive. They should be growing timber. Without forests there can be little game of [illegible] ber is increasing yearly. Ohio produces less than one-fourth of the wood which is used in the state each year. The people of the state pay $30,000,000 a year for lumber and three-fourths of this sum goes outside the state. We need better laws in regard to forestry reservations in Ohio which will take care of the waster acres of the state. We advocate the planting of forest and fruit trees along country roads in Ohio, and we also believe that the state is neglecting an economic possibility as well as an important means of beautifying the country districts by not having shaded country roadsides.

Should Not Feel Discouraged

So many people troubled with indigestion and constipation have been benefited by taking Chamberlain's Tablets that no one should feel discouraged who has not given them a trial. They contain no pepsin or other digestive ferments but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Obtainable everywhere.

Friends of Long Ago

I sat one night beneath the mazda's glow
And penned a verse on "Friends of Long Ago."
"Ah! Tell me where you are tonight," I wrote
With tear-dimmed eyes and choking, tightened throat.
My verses finished, sped they on their way
And they were published, just the other day
At yestermorn the mailman's double ring
Awakened me from dreams of balmy spring
My letter box was stuffed and flowing o'er
A dozen missives lay upon the floor
A nameless joy, a wild, ecstatic thrill
Swept o'er me as I realized that Bill
And May, Clyde, Jake, Ned, Roy and Ruth and Joe
And all the other friends of long ago
Had, each and every one, sat down to write
And tell their old chum where they were that night
The Rev'rend Haskin's boy, long-legged Joe,
Gives tango lessons now at ten per throw,
Dear little May, the shrinking violet
Became a window smashing suffragette,
While ragged Ned, who oft had naught to eat,
Has just cleaned up a million bucks in wheat
Old Jake, who blacked my eye with fine effect,
Now touches me by telegraph,—collect.
And Clyde, who wore long curls till he was eight,
Has just knocked out the champ, Young Kid McPhate.
And Roy, the smartest boy in town by far,
Now gathers nickles on a Broadway car.
Poor Bill! I feared that he'd go wrong some day—
He's in the senate now,—perhaps to stay.
While Ruth, my sweetheart once,—excuse these grins—
Sends photos of her kids—and six are twins!

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Odd Bits of News

St. Louis, Mo.—Mrs. Helen Hart, who is past 70 and the mother of five grown children, has enrolled as a pupil in the Yeatman high school.

Seattle, Wash.—Six years ago Mrs. Ellen A. Heim grubstaked Jeremiah Wilson a prospector and sent him to Alaska. Wilson struck it rich and a court ruling has just ordered an Alaska mining corporation to turn over to Mrs. Heim and her 16 year old daughter, Marie, their share in Wilson's discoveries. The share is $6,000,000.

Hoopestown, Ill.—This city has an All-Prohibition administration and in a further effort to make it the one real "dry" town of the country, interesting ordinances have been adopted. One measure provides that any member of the city council, the mayor, superintendent of the water plant, police officer, city clerk, city treasurer or other city officer who shall have about his premises or who shall, whether in this city or elsewhere, partake of intoxicants, shall be removed from office.

Cascade, Md.—William Brown, father of 17 children of his own, was lonesome and has just adopted two more children, making 19 youngster to play about his knees.

Frank J. Rexford died at his home here Sunday night at 12 o'clock. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Hill, and a brother, Jasper. He had been able to get to his store until a week ago. Funeral at 2 o'clock Wednesday.

The heavy rain storm held up moving the old church which is to be converted into a Town Hall. Much dissatisfaction is being expressed, as many of the voters that voted for a Town Hall did not know of the talk to buy the old church and expected that a new, modern thoroughly equipped structure was going up, and that is what is needed, and it might prove better policy and cheaper in the long run to tear the church down and use what lumber possible than to try to make a modern building out of an old out of date building.

Work has at last begun again at the church. It is an old saying that a minister is never thoroughly broken in until he has built a church. By the time this is finished and furnished and the furnace repaired, etc. etc. and the mortgage on the fine new parsonage Rev. Sever had built while here, it will probably be experience enough for everyone.

Friday evening the Mother's Club with Mrs. Lytle manager, gave a play the "Spinster's Return," and it was a scream from start to finish. There were so many stars it is hardly possible to name the best. Mrs. Bostwick certainly took the cake; Mrs. Lamb, Mrs. Mynderse, Mrs. Bradway Mrs. Spindle, Mrs. Mills, and well every one of them were wonders, and Miss Merkle and Miss Jackson's sweet love songs and Mrs. Morley with her eight kids all needed a switching so bad, and Dickey Parsons so sweet in his kilts, and "Whitney & Snell a pair hard to beat," the minuet and the young maidens that danced it, and, O well, come and see it yourself. It's to be given again the week after Easter. The hall would not hold the crowd. Over $50.00 was taken in. Everybody wants to go again and everybody they tell wants to go the old carpet bag and baskets and fancy work, parrot not to mention hoops and, yes, Joe Baker, Mrs. Church, Bess Hart with her jewels, Mrs. Andrews and her parasol, Mrs. Jim Smith and her Indian dress, her husband in paint and feather. Come and see Count Ketchum, etc. etc.

Plenty of Smiths.

The unassailable supremacy of the "Smiths" in London can be estimated from the telephone directory. The honorable family of Jones, for example, occupies not quite four pages. The Robinsons, who have a place with the greatest, do not require two pages. But the Smiths begin on page 752 and end on page 770.

LEGAL NOTICE

George Philpott, Elizabeth Philpott, Dall Philpott and Judson Philpott, all residing at 2003 Cott Ave., Grand Rapids, Michigan, will take notice that on the 29th day of January, 1915, Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, filed their petition in the Common Pleas Court of Lake County, Ohio, in case No. 1836, against the above named parties and others, heirs at law and devisees of Joseph Philpott, deceased, praying for the reformation of a deed to the following described premises:

Parcel 1. Situated in Willoughby, in the County of Lake and State of Ohio, to-wit and known as part of Lot No. 1 in tract No. 1 in said Township and described as follows: Beginning at a stone set on the tract Line between tract No. 1 and tract No. 2 and on the north Line of Lot No. 5 and on the North line of Land owned by F. B. Squires. Thence North 3 degrees 08 minutes East on said tract line 677 feet to a Stake. Thence [illegible] South line of Land this day deeded by the above Grantor to Florence Clark and Jennie Kitchen 1347 feet to the westerly line of land owned by Covert. Thence South 2 degrees 40 minutes West on said Covert westerly Line 677 feet to a stake. Thence North 86 degrees 30 minutes West 1361 feet to the place of beginning—a piece of land 24 feet square in the Southwest corner of the above described parcel of land is not conveyed by this deed, containing without said 24 feet square of Land 20 95-100 Twenty and ninety-five one Hundredths acres of land.

Parcel 2. Also another piece of land in tract No. 2 beginning at the center of the road at the S. W. corner of land deeded to Florence Clark and her heirs, thence in the center of the road to the N. W. corner of land owned by Elmer Clark, thence on Clark's N. line to tract No. 1, thence N. on tract line No. 1 to Clark's S. line, thence W. on Clark's S. line to the place of beginning, containing 2 33-100 acres of land.

Said petition alleges that on the 5th day of October, 1905, said Joseph Philpott executed and delivered to said plaintiffs his Warranty Deed, whereby he intended and attempted to convey the title to the above described real estate, to said plaintiffs, and that said plaintiffs paid the full purchase price of the same, to-wit, the sum of $1200.00, that by the mistake of the person who drew the deed, the granting clause in said deed was written "do hereby grant bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, my heirs and assigns forever." Said petition asks that said deed may be reformed so that the granting clause will read "do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said Albert L. Yeomans and Cora Yeomans, their heirs and assigns forever."

Said defendants are required to answer on or before the 7th day of May, 1915, or judgment may be taken against them.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Notice is hereby given that until the 24th day of April 1915, at 12 o'clock noon, sealed proposals will be received at the office of the clerk of the Board of Education of Painesville Township School District, for enlarging the school house (by building an addition thereto) in sub-district No. 3 of said School District (and situate in Lot 12, Tract 1, Painesville Township), according to the plans and specifications therefor on file in the office of the clerk of said Board of Education, Wilcox Building, Painesville, Ohio, and in the office of The National Engineering Company, Architects, 504 Marshall Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Each bid shall contain the names of all persons interested in the same, and shall be accompanied by a certified check to the order of the Board of Education of Painesville Township School District, in the amount of five per cent of the total amount of the bid—or surety bond to said Board of Education in the amount of ten per cent of such bid to the approval of said Board of Education—as a guarantee that if the bid be accepted a contract will be entered into and the performance of it properly secured.

When both labor and material are embraced in the work bid for, each must be separately named in the bid with the prices thereof.

None but the lowest responsible bid will be accepted, and the board reserves the right to reject all the bids or accept any bid for both labor and material which is the lowest in the aggregate.

By order of the Board of Education of Painesville Township School District.

Willoughby

The schools are closed this week for the Easter vacation. They will resume their work Monday at the Methodist church and Town Hall.

The College building will probably be torn down this week. Work will begin on it at once unless the weather is too stormy.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blakeley of Cleveland, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. James A. McMahon.

Mrs. Wm. Southern of Cleveland spent a day or two with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Goldsack the past week.

Miss Nina Carrel was unable to teach in her school last week on account of illness.

Mr. Arthur Barnes was in Painesville on business Tuesday.

The fire escape from the college building will be used for a stairway down the river bank to the power house of the water works.

Mr. Mankey is having his house on Wilson Ave. painted.

Frank Eldridge of the basket ball team had his arm cut on a nail Tuesday while playing a game with the Chardon team.

Mrs. Thomas Bridgeford entertained at cards Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Belle Phelps entertained the Sewing Circle Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. S. D. Shankland and Mrs. Nellie Clarke were calling on Cleveland friends Wednesday.

Died, Friday Mrs. Sarah Crobaugh aged 93 years. She has been a lifelong resident of this place and was loved by all who knew her. She leaves one son Harry, who resides with his mother. The funeral occurred at her late home on River street Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Minnie Carrel was quite badly burned Tuesday about the face and hands, by an explosion of gas from the furnace.

The death of Frank H. Clarke who shot himself Wednesday, was very sad. He was 45 years old and leaves a wife and two children. He has lived in this place all his life, and was the eldest son of Judge C. D. Clark, who survives him, with a sister Florence, and brother Charles Clarke. No cause for the deed is known. The funeral was held Friday at his late home. Interment will be in the cemetery here.

The Willows played the Presbyterian Juniors basket ball team Monday evening at the college building. Score 30 to 26 favor Willows. This is the last game in the old building.

The Alumnae Association and High School gave a dance at the Andrews Gym Monday evening.

Whooping Cough

Well—everyone knows the effect of Pine Forests on Coughs. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is a remedy which brings quick relief for Whooping Cough, loosens the mucous, soothes the lining of the throat and lungs, and makes the coughing spells less severe. A family with growing children should not be without it. Keep it handy for all Coughs and Colds. 25c at your Druggist.

Kirtland

Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beech in the loss of their infant daughter, Viola Louise, whose death occurred Sunday A. M. March 28th after several days illness. Funeral services will be held Tuesday at ten A. M. at the house and interment will be made in Brial Hill cemetery, Chester.

In the County School Spelling Contest held in Painesville the 20th, the following pupils in the order named won the right to represent Kirtland township: Miss Isabella Rice, Lewis Martin, Martha Logeden, Pauline Becker, Harold Martin and Robert Eville. The H. S. contestants were: John Millard, Catharine Markell, Gladys Johnson, Vera Martin, Lee Martin and one other pupil whose name I do not know. Madison village won highest honors in the grades and Willoughby won the H. S. honors.

Miss Helen Booth spent last Saturday and Sunday with her parents.

Master Luman Johnson of Chardon, was the guests of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Parks, last week.

John Brooks and Arthur Parks visited Cleveland relatives last Saturday and Sunday.

Master Roy Workman is enjoying his Easter vacation with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks.

John Sperry, though slightly improved, is still suffering with asthma and is obliged to sit up night and day.

Mrs. Kocis and daughter, Miss Ruth, spent Saturday and Sunday with friends in the City.

The Kirtland Y. W. C. A. were very pleasantly entertained by the Mentor association last Monday evening at the Village Hall. Max Allen, who took the young ladies to the Hall is looked upon with much envy by his less fortunate companions.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Bechtol returned Monday from a visit with relatives in western Ohio and in Mich.

Mrs. Ada Markell is staying a few days with the Allen family who have nearly regained their usual health.

Mrs. Hart Markell spent a few days in Mentor recently.

Miss Maude Thompson, who spent the winter with her sister, Mrs. Ben Moree, and family, in California, is expected home soon.

The next number of the Lyceum course will be given Tuesday evening April 6th by the popular entertainer, C. L. Burgderfer, who makes his audiences laugh or cry at will. His entertainments are made up of original stories, costume character sketches, tragedy, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kilby and son of Cleveland, are spending a fortnight with Mrs. Kilby's sister, Mrs. Pearl Betts and family.

C. P. Clapp is still suffering with rheumatism though able to move about a little more at present than for more than a month.

Mrs. Perry Johnson was a Saturday and Sunday guest at her parents home this week.

Perry Childs has begun his year's work on the Sweet farm under the management of Eugene Martin.

Dr. Don Reynolds spent last Tuesday with his mother, whose health is considerably improved at this writing.

Mrs. Wilbur Murphy, of Perry will remain with her parents at Riverside another week while Wilbur Jr. recovers from the grippe.

Miss Benti and Miss Miller spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Aldridge.

Baby Huntington, Churchill, Dobbs and Brooks are all convalescing.

Mrs. A. P. Squires has so far recovered as to leave the hospital in Salem some time last week.

Miss Hattie Martindale is quite ill.

Nearly one hundred men and boys enjoyed the Father and Son banquet held last Tuesday evening at the Town Hall. Dr. Russell acted as toast-master and splendid responses were made by State Sec. Lanham, Co. Sec. Donnan, Rev. Crawford, T. B. West, of Perry, Bishop J. A. Becker, Mr. Bebb, Wm. Liston, Pres. of the K. Y. M., B. F. Upham and W. Brewster. A bounteous supper was served by the Hotel host and hostess. It was voted to hold a similar banquet annually. Dr. Russell's kindness was greatly appreciated by the Y. M. C. A. who also thank all who helped make the evening one of inspiration and pleasure to both old and young.

School work was discontinued last week at Riverside, where the teacher Miss Florence Eville and several pupils had the pink eye.

Wm. George returned last Thursday from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Morley, in Cleveland, where he has been ill for the past two or three weeks.

Told That There Was No Cure For Him

"After suffering for over twenty years with indigestion and having some of the best doctors here tell me there was no cure for me, I think it only right to tell you for the sake of other sufferers as well as your own satisfaction that a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Tablets not only relieved me but cured me within two months although I am a man of 65 years," writes Jul. Grobien, Houston, Texas. Obtainable everywhere.

Splendid for Rheumatism

"I think Chamberlain's Liniment is just splendid for rheumatism," writes Mrs. Dunburgh, Eldridge, N. Y. "It has been used by myself and other members of my family time and time again during the past six years and has always given the best of satisfaction." The quick relief from pain which Chamberlain's Liniment affords is alone worth many times the cost. Obtainable everywhere.

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

TOLEDO MAN EXPECTED TO DIE

D. L. Bower, treasurer and manager of the New Overland Real Estate Exchange at Toledo, thought death was close upon him. He suffered from derangement of the stomach and digestive tract and his condition was highly discouraging.

He took Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. Then he cheered up and went to selling. He had new interest in life.

J. W. Wood, Mr. Bower's partner, wrote:

"This remedy is surely one of the greatest medicines I ever heard of. My partner spent $2,000 with renowned doctors in trying to get relief. He gave himself until about the 20th of September to live. He has taken three doses of your remedy. Now he can eat and sleep without any distress."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee. If not satisfactory money will be returned.—Adv.

CHAPTER IV.
—7—

Beginning of Life Anew.

"But I must go on with my story. I traveled through a deserted land. As the time went by I began to yearn more and more for human beings. But I never found one, and I grew lonelier and lonelier. I crossed Livermore valley and the mountains between it and the great valley of the San Joaquin. You have never seen that valley, but it is very large and it is the home of the wild horse. There are great droves there, thousands and tens of thousands. I revisited it thirty years after, so I know. You think there are lots of wild horses down here in the coast valleys, but they are as nothing compared with those of the San Joaquin. Strange to say, the cows, when they went wild, went back into the lower mountains. Evidently they were better able to protect themselves there.

"In the country districts the ghouls and prowlers had been less in evidence, for I found many villages and towns untouched by fire. But they were filled by the pestilential dead, and I passed by without exploring them. It was near Lathrop that, out of my loneliness, I picked up a pair of collie dogs that were so newly free that they were urgently willing to return to their allegiance to man. These collies accompanied me for many years, and the strains of them are in these very dogs there that you boys have today. But in sixty years the collie strain has worked out. These brutes are more like domesticated wolves than anything else."

Hare-Lip rose to his feet, glanced to see that the goats were safe, and looked at the sun's position in the afternoon sky, advertising impatience at the prolixity of the old man's tale. Urged to hurry by Edwin, Granser went on:

"There is little more to tell. With my two dogs and my pony, and riding a horse I had managed to capture, I crossed the San Joaquin and went on to a wonderful valley in the Sierras called Yosemite. In the great hotel there I found a prodigious supply of tinned provisions. The pasture was abundant, as was the game, and the river that ran through the valley was full of trout. I remained there three years in an utter loneliness that none but a man who has once been highly civilized can understand. Then I could stand it no more. I felt that I was going crazy. Like the dog, I was a social animal and needed my kind. I reasoned that since I had survived the plague there was a possibility that others had survived. Also, I reasoned that after three years the plague germs must all be gone and the land be clean again.

"With my horse and dogs and pony, I set out. Again I crossed the San Joaquin valley, the mountains beyond, and came down into Livermore valley. The change in those three years was amazing. All the land had been splendidly tilled, and now I could scarcely recognize it, such was the sea of rank vegetation that had overrun the agricultural handiwork of man. You see, the wheat, the vegetables, and orchard trees had always been cared for and nursed by man, so that they were soft and tender. The weeds and wild bushes and such things, on the contrary, had always been fought by man, so that they were tough and resistant. As a result, when the hand of man was removed the wild vegetation smothered and destroyed practically all the domesticated vegetation. The coyotes were greatly increased, and it was at this time that I first encountered wolves, straying in twos and threes and small packs, down from the wild regions where they had always persisted.

"It was at Lake Temescal, not far from the one-time city of Oakland, that I came upon the first live human being. Oh, my grandsons, how can I describe to you my emotion, when, astride my horse and dropping down the hillside to the lake, I saw the smoke of a campfire rising through the trees. Almost did my heart stop beating. I felt that I was going crazy. Then I heard the cry of a babe—a human babe. And dogs barked and my dogs answered. I did not know but that I was the one human alive in the whole world. It could not be true that there were others—smoke, and the cry of a babe.

"Emerging on the lake, there, before my eyes, not a hundred yards away, I saw a man, a large man. He was standing on an outjutting rock and fishing. I was overcome. I stopped my horse. I tried to call out, but could not. I waved my hand. It seemed to me that the man looked at me, but he did not appear to wave. Then I laid my head on my arms there in the saddle. I was afraid to look again, for I knew it was an hallucination, and I knew that if I looked the man would be gone. And so precious was the hallucination that I wanted it to persist yet a little while. I knew, too, that as long as I did not look it would persist.

"Thus I remained, until I heard my dogs snarling, and a man's voice. What do you think the voice said? I will tell you. It said: 'Where in hell did you come from?'

"Those were the words, the exact words. That was what your grandfather said to me, Hare-Lip, when he greeted me there on the shore of Lake Temescal fifty-seven years ago. And they were the most ineffable words I have ever heard. I opened my eyes, and there he stood before me, a large, dark, hairy man, heavy-jawed, slant-browed, fierce-eyed. How I got off my horse I do not know. But it seemed the next I knew I was clasping his hand with both of mine and crying. I would have embraced him, but he was ever a narrow-minded, suspicious man, and he drew away from me. Yet did I cling to his hand and cry."

Granser's voice faltered and broke at the recollection, and the weak tears streamed down his cheeks while the boys looked on and giggled.

"Yet did I cry," he continued, "and desire to embrace him, though the Chauffeur was a brute, a perfect brute—the most abhorrent man I have ever known. His name was . . . strange, how I have forgotten his name. Everybody called him Chauffeur—it was the name of his occupation, and it stuck. That is how, to this day, the tribe he founded is called the Chauffeur tribe.

"He was a violent, unjust man. Why the plague spared him I can never understand. It would seem, in spite of our old metaphysical notions about absolute justice, that there is no justice in the universe. Why did he live?—an iniquitous, moral monster, a blot on the face of nature, a cruel, relentless, bestial cheat as well. All he could talk about was motor cars, machinery, gasoline and garages—and especially with huge delight, of his mean pilferings and sordid swindlings of the persons who had employed him in the days before the coming of the plague. And yet he was spared, while hundreds of millions, yea, billions, of better men were destroyed.

"I went on with him to his camp, and there I saw her, Vesta, the one woman. It was glorious and pitiful. There she was, Vesta Van Warden, the young wife of John Van Warden, clad in rags, with marred and scarred and toil-calloused hands, bending over the campfire and doing scullion work—she, Vesta, who had been born to the purple of the greatest baronage of wealth the world had ever known. John Van Warden, her husband, worth one billion eight hundred millions, and president of the Board of Industrial Magnates, had been the ruler of America. Also, sitting on the International Board of Control, he had been one of the seven men who ruled the world. And she herself had come of equally noble stock. Her father, Philip Saxon, had been President of the Board of Industrial Magnates up to the time of his death. This office was in process of becoming hereditary, and had Philip Saxon had a son that son would have succeeded him. But his only child was Vesta, the perfect flower of generations of the highest culture this planet has ever produced. It was not until the engagement between Vesta and Van Warden took place that Saxon indicated the latter as his successor. It was, I am sure, a political marriage. I have reason to believe that Vesta never really loved her husband in the mad, passionate way of which the poets used to sing. It was more like the marriages that obtained among crowned heads before they were displaced by the Magnates.

"And there she was, boiling fish chowder in a soot-covered pot, her glorious eyes inflamed by the acrid smoke of the open fire. Hers was a sad story. She was the one survivor in a million, as I had been, as the Chauffeur had been. On a crowning eminence of the Alameda Hills, overlooking San Francisco Bay, Van Warden had built a vast summer palace. It was surrounded by a park of a thousand acres. When the plague broke out, Van Warden sent her there. Armed guards patrolled the boundaries of the park, and nothing entered in the way of provisions or even mail matter that was not first fumigated. And yet did the plague enter, killing the guards at their posts, the servants at their tasks, sweeping away the whole army of retainers—or, at least, all them who did not flee to die elsewhere. So it was that Vesta found herself the sole living person in the palace that had become a charnel house.

"Now, the Chauffeur had been one of the servants that ran away. Returning, two months afterward, he discovered Vesta in a little summer pavilion where there had been no deaths and where she had established herself. He was a brute. She was afraid, and she ran away and hid among the trees. That night, on foot, she fled into the mountains—she, whose tender feet and delicate body had never known the bruise of stones nor the scratch of briars. He followed, and that night he caught her. He struck her. Do you understand? He beat her with those terrible fists of his and made her his slave. It was she who had to gather the firewood, build the fires, cook and do all the degrading camp labor—she, who had never performed a menial act in her life. These things he compelled her to do, while he, a proper savage, elected to lie around camp and look on. He did nothing, absolutely nothing, except on occasion to hunt meat or catch fish."

"Good for Chauffeur," Hare-Lip commented in an undertone to the other boys. "I remember him before he died. He was a corker. But he did things, and he made things go. You know, dad married his daughter, an' you ought to see the way he knocked the spots outa dad. The Chauffeur was a son of a gun. He made us kids stand around. Even when he was croakin' he reached out for me, once, an' laid my head open with that long stick he kept always beside him."

Hare-Lip rubbed his bullet head reminiscently, and the boys returned to the old man, who was maundering ecstatically about Vesta, the squaw of the founder of the Chauffeur tribe.

"And so I say to you that you [illegible] not understand the awfulness of the situation. The Chauffeur was a servant, understand—a servant. And he cringed, with bowed head, to such as she. She was a lord of life, both by birth and by marriage. The destinies of millions, such as he, she carried in the hollow of her pink-white hand. And, in the days before the plague, the slightest contact with such as he would have been pollution. Oh, I have seen it. Once, I remember, there was a Mrs. Goldwin, wife of one of the great magnates. It was on a landing stage, just as she was embarking in her private dirigible, that she dropped her parasol. A servant picked it up and made the mistake of handing it to her—to her, one of the greatest royal ladies of the land! She shrank back, as though he were a leper, and indicated her secretary to receive it. Also, she ordered her secretary to ascertain the creature's name and to see that he was immediately discharged from service. And such a woman was Vesta Van Warden. And her the Chauffeur beat and made his slave.

"—Bill—that was it; Bill, the Chauffeur. That was his name. He was a wretched, primitive man, wholly devoid of the finer instincts and chivalrous promptings of a cultured soul. No, there is no absolute justice, for to him fell that wonder of womanhood, Vesta Van Warden. The grievousness of this you will never understand, my grandsons; for you are yourselves primitive little savages, unaware of aught else but savagery. Why should Vesta not have been mine? I was a man of culture and refinement, a professor in a great university. Even so, in the time before the plague, such was her exalted position, she would not have deigned to know that I existed. Mark, then, the abysmal degradation to which she fell at the hands of the Chauffeur. Nothing less than the destruction of all mankind had made it possible that I should know her, look in her eyes, converse with her, touch her hand—aye, and love her and know that her feelings toward me were very kindly. I have reason to believe that she, even she, would have loved me, there being no other man in the world except the Chauffeur. Why, when it destroyed eight billions of souls, did not the plague destroy just one more man, and that man the Chauffeur?

ENGLISH VILLAGE A MODEL

About as Sinless as Is Likely to Be Found In This Wicked Old Abode of Men.

A sinless village has been found in England. It is Blackwell, a snug little colliery town in the Derbyshire hills, where the solitary policeman enjoys a perpetual holiday. The last incumbent left from sheer boredom. The manager of the collieries is a born leader of men, and this, combined with the fact that he can dismiss all evil-doers at will, practically the whole population being employed at the colliery, is the secret of his power. At the model clubhouse the main army of the villagers can be seen around the model bar arranged by the manager, who does not object to drink in moderation. He selects the brands of whisky and beer for the consumption of his flock. Over the bar are notices requesting patrons not to swear or gamble. There is a ballroom, and here the youth of Blackwell trip decorous measures, for Blackwell has no use for the tango or other modern dances, or, for that matter, for modern dress. There is also in the building two well-equipped baths, so that cleanliness ranks among the villagers' many virtues. Blackwell has also excellent cricket and football grounds. In the cricket building is a battered straw hat, the relic from Blackwell's "one lapse from grace." It was the only hat out of fifteen that returned when a party of holiday-makers left Blackwell to spend a day in London.

Thoughts in Autumn Fields.

Perhaps the herb everlasting, the fragrant immortelle of our autumn fields, has the most suggestive odor to me of all those that set me dreaming. I can hardly describe the strange thoughts and emotions which come to me as I inhale the aroma of its pale, dry, rustling flowers. A something it has of sepulchral spicery, as if it had been brought from the core of some great pyramid, where it had lain on the breast of a mummied Pharaoh. Something, too, of immortality in the sad, faint sweetness lingering so long in its lifeless petals. Yet this does not tell why it fills my eyes with tears and carries me in blissful thought to the banks of Asphodel that border the River of Life.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Handling of Striped Materials

It seems that everything is woven in stripes this year, and the frock of gingham for the half grown schoolgirl may show them as well managed as they are in the visiting gown made for her mother. The handling of striped fabrics is not a particularly simple matter, but when well done the results are something to be proud of.

A good model for a dress of striped material is shown in the picture. It is in every way commendable for the girl of from nine to fourteen years and merits the attention of those who must provide clothes that shall be attractive for girls of the awkward age. One of the strongest points in favor of striped fabrics for children's wear lies in the fact that they allow simplicity and variety at the same time. By the simple expedient of changing the direction of the stripes the trimming is provided of the same material as the frock.

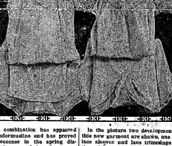
The model shown is so good that it should be followed exactly as it is, by the copyists who use it. The bodice is cut with long shoulders and large arm's-eye, and the simplest of neck openings. In it the stripes run up and down and the slight fullness gathered in at the waist line gives them the right direction. They slant toward the middle of the belt at the back and front. At each side a band of the material, having the stripes running horizontally, makes a neat decorative feature and adds to the shapeliness of the waist. In the elbow-length sleeves the stripes run lengthwise.

The neck and sleeves are finished with an embroidered edging in a simple, well-made design. Pearl buttons, two at each side, and simulated buttonholes of narrow braid, are effective little touches on the front of the waist.

The skirt is moderately full with panel at the front and plaits at the sides and back. Above the three-inch hem a band of the material, with the stripes running horizontally, gives the skirt a neat finish and a desirable flare at the same time.

The belt may be of patent leather or suede or of some heavy fabric. Altogether, this dress follows many good points in the modes of spring for grownups and at the same time contrives to be prettily childish and very practical. It is meant to be developed in wash fabrics and is easy to launder.

New Combination Garment



A new combination has appeared among undermuslins and has proved a great success in the spring displays. It has appealed to the senses of utility, economy and daintiness, which women exercise when outfitting themselves with summer underwear. This garment is called the "envelope chemise" and is engagingly pretty as well as practical.

To cut the new combination, one has only to vary the lower part of a chemise pattern by sloping the side seams outward to provide for a flare at the bottom. Also the back breadth is cut longer than the front breadth and with a tab at the center of the lower edge. This tab is more or less narrow and is provided with buttonholes which fasten over small, flat pearl buttons sewed to the bottom edge of the front breadth.

This arrangement divides the skirt of the chemise, making it as easy to walk in as muslin or silk pants and giving the appearance of a short under petticoat.

The envelope chemise is developed in nainsook or other thin cotton fabrics and in wash silk or crepe de chine. It is trimmed with the usual lingerie laces. The corset cover, pants and short skirt may be dispensed with when this chemise is adopted, since it takes the place of each of them.

In the picture two developments of this new garment are shown, one with lace sleeves and lace trimmings and the other made with small hand-run tucks at the front, a narrow handmade edging about the bottom and top and finishing the arm's-eye. Any needlewoman can make this chemise and it is a very simple matter to launder it. It is cool for summer wear, for it dispenses with at least one piece of underwear.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Smart Outing Costumes.

For smart country club costumes in norfolk style there is a new silk material called khaki-kool, which comes in various crisp weaves resembling shantung and rajah pongees and in smart shades of sand, putty, dreadnaught gray and in pearl and oyster white. These costumes are very simple and very smartly tailored with belted coats above wide circular skirts. The natural shade of the khaki-kool is sometimes matched by natural silk stockings; stockings to match the dark and light gray shades are also carefully selected for wear with black pumps or boots. This khaki-kool has a virtue of springing up, however it is crushed, and will, without doubt, be fancied also for summer motor coats.

Colored Blouses.

Colored handkerchief linen blouses are shown again this year. You remember last year they were introduced for country wear. They are still on tailored linens, frequently with pockets. They have long sleeves and sometimes the fronts are scalloped.

Red Hair and Light Eyebrows.

A word of warning to the red-haired woman with light brows and lashes [illegible] you achieve by so doing will be weird in the extreme, artificialness being its predominant note.

In such a case light brown water cosmetique, well diluted and carefully applied, gives the very best results, for it imparts to the brows and lashes a ruddy brown tint which has at least the appearance of being natural, which coal-black brows with red hair are decidedly not.

HER EASTER JOY

By ESTHER JOYCE

Miss Amy Carter leaned back in the dull shadows of the boarding-house parlor and watched the girl at the piano.

The girl had a true but quite untrained voice, and she sang in commonplace, soulless fashion the air of a four-part sacred song.

"Wasn't it shivery and grand where the bass took up the tune?"

The girl's hands came down on the keys with a crash. She had not dreamed that Miss Amy had come into the room. Most of the boarders did not come down stairs until the tea bell had rung. Miss Amy was almost as startled as the girl. She had been in the house five weeks and never exchanged a word with anyone save the landlady.

"Were you at St. Augustin's this afternoon?" inquired the girl, swinging around on the piano stool.

"Oh, yes," replied Miss Amy, simply, "I've been there every Sunday since I heard you sing there in the choir."

"I'm sure it is awfully kind of you to say so. I don't do much, you know, just one of the chorus, but it's $1.50 per, and you meet real nice people, too. I'd have joined the Musical league, too, only you've got to report for every rehearsal or lose your tickets for the last concert."

Miss Amy sat like one entranced. Here was a girl who did not simply buy admission tickets and listen to others. She was in it all, in the world of music, from which Miss Amy had always been excluded by the iron key, marked "Duty."

"How—how do you manage to get into a choir—or a league or anything of that sort?"

The girl felt flattered as she looked into Miss Amy's kindling face.

"Oh, they're always looking for good sight readers with fresh, clear voices in the big choirs. Sometimes you get paid, sometimes you don't. I didn't get anything last year. But the easiest way get in is to take lessons from the choirmaster—private lessons. Then Mr. Weston will put you in the choir to jolly you along whether you can sing or not. You're new to New York, and you wouldn't believe the graft—"

The clang of the dinner bell drowned the latter part of the sentence and the girl rose abruptly. Miss Amy followed her down to the dining room, but scarcely knew what was spread before them. What mattered food or drink or sordid tandtadies or gossiping boarders, when she had found the key to her paradise at last? Perhaps it was graft—perhaps the girl spoke thoughtlessly.

The next morning very early Miss Amy went shopping. She told the milliner she wanted a brown hat to match her suit. "No, not a toque like she had [illegible]," and she described quite accurately the hat which the girl had worn to church the afternoon before.

"I'll wear this," she said, "and you can send the old one home."

Next she went to the nearest drug store and studied the directory. "Weston, Albert, singing teacher, 121 West —— street."

As she left the drug store she spied a florist's window, and she stopped for a bouquet of violets. Then again she hesitated. The crisis of this, her new life, was at hand. She allowed three cars to pass, and then with firmly compressed lips she signaled for a hansom. At the boarding house everyone said that in New York one must keep up appearances. Perhaps if he thought she could afford to ride in hansoms he would overlook her vocal deficiencies.

Albert Weston, worn by his struggles with an indifferent pupil, was standing at the window of his studio when the hansom drew up before the building and the brown, wrenlike figure stepped cautiously from the vehicle and shot a questioning glance up the brownstone front.

"I'm glad I took the hansom," commented Miss Amy as she mounted the steps. This was life! An absurd thrill swept over her and brought a delicate and most becoming blush to her face.

Mr. Weston studied her curiously, hands deep in his pockets, when she asked almost timidly the privilege of studying with him. Prices, hours, everything seemed secondary to the fear that he might not accept her as a pupil. He tried her voice, paced the room a few moments and then said gravely:

"Yes, I will take you as a pupil, but I want to be quite frank with you. You will never be a great singer. You have a sweet, harmless, drawing-room voice, but I don't want you to go into the work with any idea of being a grand opera singer in time. You have begun too late—too late for that."

Again the delicate flush mounted to her face.

"I understand all that—it is just for my own pleasure. I—I could not study sooner. It is just for the joy of being able to sing for myself."

He stopped short in his nervous walk and looked at her. Such simplicity, such humility, such lack of ambition, almost staggered him.

"Perhaps some time—when my voice is a little stronger—you might, that is, if it would be quite right, you might let me join your choir at St. Augustin's?"

"[illegible] ready [illegible] what our congregation likes is a number of sweet, correct voices. By the time someone gets tired of rehearsals or marries or moves away, I'll have your voice placed and be glad to take you on."

And so commenced the musical career of Miss Amy Carter, aged thirty-one, residence a second-class boarding house; occupation, spending a small inheritance which had come to her suddenly after a life of narrow drudgery and unrelieved sacrifice. At first her lessons opened and closed with almost monosyllabic conversation, but in time the musician delved beneath the heart which for years had almost starved for music. It had been born in her, she thought, but there had been work to do, so heavy that her hands had grown too rough and stiff to play the old-fashioned organ. There were two invalids to nurse when the village choir would have been glad of her services. And so she counted her love as dead and buried until the inheritance had come, and then—

"Well," she said, with a whimsical smile, "I thought I'd come to New York and hear the best music while the money lasted. I would have a taste of real life—what I have heard people call the joy of living."

Weston smiled to himself. She called this seeing life! And indeed these days she was quite in a flutter of excitement all the time. Weston had tickets he could not use for this concert and that. Matinees came just when he had pupils, and it was a shame to waste the tickets. He was tremendously diverted by this delicate, flowerlike woman, who felt that she was indulging in a mad orgy of music. He learned to look forward with keen interest to her comments on the concerts she attended. Self played so small a part in her enjoyment. It was always not how she felt, but how the music affected the audience. And gradually he discovered that she had a decided gift of criticism, which was developing under the course of reading he prescribed for her.

Something he knew, too, that his pupil of thirty-one had not discovered. Under the magic of indulging the one great longing of her lifetime she was cheating old Father Time, turning pages back and not forward. The faint color was always in her cheeks these days, and the voice, rising in her birdlike throat, was fresh as a girl's, lilting like a lark's in flowered meadows.

And watching her development, the tired man began to wonder what had come over him. He saw his work in a new light. The weight of drudgery slipped from his shoulders. The sense of wasted effort yielded to the infectious happiness of his buoyant pupil.

And so dawned Easter morning over St. Augustin's. Outside the doors the mob of sightseers swayed while the regular parishioners claimed first right to pews. Then came the inrush of strangers, the organist took his place, Mr. Weston raised his hand and the band of white-robed men and women filed into the choir loft. Out to the waiting multitude rolled the waves of perfectly balanced harmonies. A hundred voices, admirably selected, thought the congregation, and yet to the man who had trained them there came but a single voice. Her face was uplifted, her eyes dewy and tender, as with flutelike clearness the wonderful words reached him above the heads of the other singers:

"The strife is o'er,
the battle done;
The victory of life is won;
The song of triumph has begun.
Alleluia. Alleluia. Alleluia."

To the man it came not as a pean of triumph but a message of peace—and she had shown him the way!

He wanted to tell her now—this minute! The service stretched ahead of him interminably.

"Alleluia. Alleluia."

His glance caught and held hers. A startled expression flashed over her face. The flutelike tones faltered and died away. The absorbed singers on trembled, and her face, paling, turned either side did not note that her hand from the leader to the banks of Easter lilies. Perhaps it was their perfume—something seemed to smother the sound in her throat. Then, as if fascinated, her glance traveled back to meet his, and the tender gravity in his face steadied her. She raised her book, the color came back into her face, and, as her voice floated out to him in the final "Alleluia," he knew that his heart's message had reached her, and that was her answer.

Easter in an English School.

There is a very old school for boys in London, called Christ's hospital. Its pupils still follow an ancient custom. On the day after Easter they march to the house of the lord mayor, who is awaiting them behind a long table on which are several piles of money. Each Grecian, a student of the highest rank, receives a sovereign. The others are rewarded with coins of lesser value, according to their standard. Then each other boy is given a glass of lemonade and two buns, and back they all march to school again, as happy as can be.

Old Beliefs of Easter.

The stories of the Easter hare, which children believe, is an old tale, doubtless originating in Germany. In certain sections of France children are taught to believe that the cathedral bells lay the Easter eggs. This belief has been transplanted to some of the old French settlements of America.

IDEAL OF RELIGION

Assurance That the Lord Is the Light and Rejoicing the Creed.

Light for every man that comes into the world—this is the ideal of religion that is held out in the Scriptures. Why will men refuse to permit their fellows to share in this light? The sun is the possession of no creed, nor sect, nor school. They who sought to make it such by arrogating it to themselves in their schemes of worship have passed from the stage of world influence. These religions died because they denied that, as in the temple above, revealed in the apocalyptic vision of St. John, so in the temple of divine love and human affection upon the earth—the Lord is the light and rejoicing the creed.

There are many followers of the light of God's grace and goodness in the common walks of men who are not numbered within the fold of the churches, because, it may be, they have not been sure that hospitality awaited them. Such should not be the case. The religion of Christ is not essentially of any school, sect, creed, clan or church. It is the religion of the life of God, the Father, in the lives of his children, the life of Jesus Christ in the spirits and affections of men. There may be a more excellent way than to follow after God in the discipleship of secrecy. It is always to be desired that the one who finds the light of the divine life in his soul shall give thanks to God in the midst of the people. It is the end and intent of the religion as conserved into fellowship with its ordinances of worship and under its claims of service. But the light must be kept shining at all odds. It is the light for every soul. If a soul has not had its cravings satisfied with any of the approved forms of religious ministration, still the light must not be denied that leads its possessor to prayer and to adoration and to exalted states of religious experience. The individual suffers a handicap in the solitude of his soul service. That light within makes the soul to rejoice and the way of life to be bright with flowers, despite defeats and disappointments. Is it any wonder the Society of Friends, among others, have laid great emphasis on this truth? God will lead in his own good way into the fold of his church the souls that are his. They who have the care of the churches must not deny the light of God's saving truth in the life of any of their fellows. Who knows the calling of God? Who can tell when the still, small voice is whispering its consolation to another? Who can say that the one walking beside them in the garments of humility may not in the view of the angels be robed in the garments of transfiguration?

Light of Grace and Truth.

Let your light so shine that men seeing your good works, may glorify your father which is in heaven—such is the admonition given those who name the name of the great light giver, Jesus Christ. In the glory of the liturgical service, in the splendor of the music of the choir loft, in the scholarly and illuminating discourses of the pulpit, in the prayers of fine beauty and deep fervor of the service books of the churches, in the spontaneous and sincere expressions of devout souls, burst forth the light of grace and truth. Fortunate, indeed, they who can rest their wearied souls within the holy walls and find salvation and peace.

Other sheep have I, said the master, who are not of this fold. He went forth for such and when he found one in the mountains afar he carried it in his bosom and returned with rejoicing. Let the church place its light out from under the bushel of formalism, so that its full glow may reach, with a penetration beyond any other known illuminant, into the souls of all men.

Doing the Master's Work.

But they who, in the daily walks of life, are giving forth light—how beautiful these; they who are making glad the hearts of others—how precious their service; they whose very footsteps cause the dull earth to glow as did the sod beneath the feet of the tenderest of men—how wonderful is their mission of good living. They may be so placed or circumstanced that the church cannot house them—a misfortune! But still they are the true disciples of him who came to bring grace and truth into the lives of all men. "And I, if I be lifted up (exalted) will draw all men unto myself."

God's Mercy Endureth.

It may be that recollections of the past hinder you, but you must reject them; anxious thoughts may arise, put them away; your faults seem to raise up a barrier, but no past faults can separate a loving heart from God.—H. L. Sidney Lear.

No One Can Do Your Work.

No one of my fellows can do that special work for me which I have come into the world to do. He may do a higher work, a greater work, but he cannot do my work. I cannot hand my work over to him, any more than I hand over my responsibilities or my gifts. Nor can I delegate my work to any association of men, however well ordered and powerful. They have their own work to do, and it may be a very noble one. But they cannot do my work for me. I must do it with these hands or with these lips which God has given me.—Ruskin.

One Special Act of Love.

You must make, at least once every week, a special act of love to God's will above all else, and that not only in things supportable, but also in things insupportable.—St. Francis de Sales.

The Santa Fe is the only transcontinental line having its own rails all the way. It is the only line reaching both Exposition cities. It is the coolest in summer. It offers you the most perfect roadbed and track in America—new, solid steel equipment, specially ventilated; powerful engines; courteous employes and Fred Harvey dining-car and dining-room meals.

At frequent intervals, specially conducted tourist-car parties will be organized.

So when you are ready, buy your ticket over the Santa Fe—every hour will be a relaxation—every mile will have its delightful impression. The journey—plus the two Expositions—will be a liberal education. About one fare for round trip. Exposition tickets on sale daily until November 30, 1915.

Send for two fascinating picture-books of the Expositions and the Santa Fe route. I can help you plan an economical wonder-trip through California.

No War Tax on Homestead Land in Canada

The report that a war tax is to be placed on Homestead lands in Western Canada having been given considerable circulation in the United States, this is to advise all enquirers that no such tax has been placed, nor is there any intention to place a war tax of any nature on such lands. Man's Ingratitude.

"Yes. But they increased it just enough to compel me to keep books and employ an expert accountant to figure out my income tax."

IMMENSE QUANTITY OF WHEAT TIED UP

There Will Still, However, Be a Heavy Deficit of the World's Normal Crop.

A grain expert who has been watching the grain markets and the world's grain fields for a number of years, says:—

"There is at the present time about two billion bushels of wheat, the production of the countries at war, tied up. This is about one-half the world's total production of wheat, which is four billion bushels. One writer argues that, granting that the warring nations produce a one-half crop in the coming year, a deficit of one billion bushels will still be shown. The three countries upon which the filling of this deficit of one billion bushels will rest are the United States, Canada, and Argentine. The combined output of these three countries is only 1,240,000,000, their exportable surplus would of course be much less, so it can easily be seen that the question is not one to be easily solved and it behooves all the above countries to increase their respective productions as much as they possibly can, for when the war is over and trade begins to re-establish itself and the nations undergo a process of rehabilitation, the demand for all breadstuffs will be enormous.

"During the three years following the declaration of peace the farmers of all neutral wheat-producing countries will have ample opportunity to market their wheat at good prices, and it may safely be assumed that the demand will be heavy. Canada has an unusual opportunity in that she has the natural environment for wheat production; she is under the protection of the British flag, and she will not be molested upon the water to any great extent, she can increase her acreage and greatly enhance her production. In other words, she can become a far greater wheat-producing country than she is at the present time."

If the summing-up as made by this expert be correct, is there not the very best reason for the continued effort that is being made by the Government of the Dominion of Canada to secure settlers on the productive vacant lands of the country? Not only are these lands capable of producing high class wheat in large quantities, but cattle, pigs, sheep and horses also do well. The climate is admirably suited.—Advertisement.

Had Enough of War.

After a season in the trenches, knee deep in mud and water, yet not having seen one of the enemy in all that time, Private Cox was invalided home. After relating all the adventures which he and his comrades had experienced, he concluded, "And now I comes 'ome full of bloody rheumatism an' I ope I never see a bloody battle again."

Life is a burden to some people and some others are a burden to life.

SOME HARM IN MOONLIGHT

Scientists Have Been Giving the Matter Attention and Now Are Out With Explanation.

The alleged harmfulness of moonlight is at last receiving scientific attention. It seems that the light of the moon, being reflected, is polarized; that is, the vibrations are in one plane instead of all planes, as in light coming directly from its source. It is also said that it has less germicidal power than direct light, and that decay is therefore quicker.

All this may be true, and it may explain some of the folklore as to moonlight. We have so long believed these tales to be the myths of primitive peoples that we are not inclined to take any suggestions in this line seriously. They are really mistaken attempts at the scientific explanation of phenomena noticed for the first time.

The folk-tales seem to have originated in lands of very clear atmosphere, and it is extremely doubtful whether in northern misty climates moonlight has any ocular or nervous effect one way or the other. Still we are often surprised at the facts elicited from still more bizarre investigations. Surely polarized light must have injurious rectinal effects, and it might be well to find out that much.

Men of Many Duties.

A contributor to the Docket sends the following concerning a law of North Carolina:

"It was probably a surprise to the justices of the North Carolina supreme court to learn the general assembly's opinion of their needs, as expressed in chapter 168 of the Public General Laws of 1911 as follows:

"'Section 1. That the fireman of the supreme court building shall be appointed by the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court, and when not engaged in his duties as fireman shall act as assistant janitor of the supreme court, and shall assist in the cleaning and care of the supreme court and perform such other duties as may be designated by the said justices of the supreme court.'

"It seems that the general assembly has here created the office of firemen-both attendant-nurse."

Canada is Calling You to her Rich Wheat Lands

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

She extends to Americans a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help to feed the world by tilling some of her soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think what you can make with wheat around $1 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. PAINESVILLE HAS A CHANCE TO SAVE SIX HUNDREDTHS OF A CENT ON LIGHTS

This Great Economy Can be Accomplished Only by Scrapping the Municipal Light Plant and Buying "Juice" of the C. P. & E.

Somebody truthfully said that "figures won't lie but liars will figure." There may have been no errors of omission or commission in the report given to the council Monday evening by the C. P. & E. experts but the supposed facts of the report were given with so much detail and so many technical terms were employed that the councilmen knew little or nothing more about the matter than they did before the meeting. Even at that, there were some items which the experts "forgot" to mention.

The figures given in the report submitted Monday night on the costs of producing current at the present plant include items of:

Interest	$.950.00
Depreciation	2570.00
Lost Taxes	450.00
	$3970.00

The total bill for current if 760,000 KWH are purchased would be $14160. But there's a little "joker" in this, as the net cost to the city would be the actual price plus interest, depreciation and lost taxes on the city plant, which charges would go on whether the city plant is operated or not. The total cost of purchased current to the city then would be:

$ 3970.00
14160.00
$18130.00

For 760,000 Kilowatt hours the actual cost to the city would be 2.4 cents per Kilowatt hour.

The clear, concise report given to the council by H. M. Morse of H. Whitford Jones & Co., consulting engineers, showed that the cost of producing current at the municipal plant with the new equipment, including all charges for interest, depreciation, lost taxes, etc., is 2.46 cents per Kilowatt hour, making a grand total net saving to the city of SIX HUNDREDTHS OF A CENT if current is purchased of the C. P. & E.

While numerous matters may be open to question in the matter of arriving at this estimated cost, it is evident that even accepting the figures given in the report as correct, the city would not really be saving anything by buying current at the price offered by the C. P. & E. Ry. Co.

And if the city should enter into a contract with any corporation to supply current what would the price be five or ten years from date when the contract expired and the municipal plant had long since crumbled to dust?

ARBOR DAY

First Celebration in Ohio Was Held in 1882

Ohio's first Arbor Day was held in Cincinnati in April, 1882, ten years after the occasion had been originated by Governor J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska. Millions of trees have since been planted in Ohio on that day now celebrated in the schools of nearly every city, town and village in the Buckeye state.

The inspiration to observe the day in Ohio came in 1881, when Baron Richard Von Steuben, royal chief forester of the German empire, and a descendant of Gen von Steuben of revolutionary war fame, visited Cincinnati, while in the country, relebrating the centennial of the surrender of Yorktown, and urged upon its citizens the necessity for planting trees. Leading citizens at once met and laid plans for carrying out the idea of Gov. Morton.

A three-day session, at which were present the most noted foresters of the United States and Canada, was held April 25, 26 and 27. The last two days the public schools were dismissed to permit pupils and teachers to participate in the planting of trees in the public parks.

The city gave itself over completely to the holiday spirit. Buildings and streets were decorated. The military and citizenship turned out in parade and marched to Eden park, when 50,000 had gathered to witness the ceremonies. As signal guns were fired various groves dedicated to the presidents, the pioneers and authors and others were planted. Noted orators made the principal speeches, and one of the most notable occasions in the history of the state was brought to a successful conclusion.

The next year the idea spread. Other cities followed example. Gov. Foster issued a proclamation making the celebration state wide in its scope ...

OLD LANDMARK GOES

Willoughby High School is Razed to Make Way for New Structure

The razing of the Willoughby high school building to make way for a new $85,000 high school is arousing old residents of Willoughby, who declare it means the destruction of the oldest landmark in this end of Lake county. Much speculation is rife as to what will be found under the cornerstone of the old medical college on the site of which the school was built more than a half century ago.

Cutler Roberts, grandson of Benjamin Woolsey, who willed the property to the Methodist Episcopal conference of Northeastern Ohio, which in turn deeded it to the village board of education, declares that several thousand dollars in gold will be found under the cornerstone. A Bible and several legal documents relating to the division of the property among the heirs will also be found there, he asserted today. There are three heirs to any contested estate of Benjamin Woolsey, all of whom live in Willoughby.

A well filled with human bones will also be found under the basement of the building, when excavations for the foundation of the new structure are made, is the claim of old residents. They are recalling when a medical college, long since moved to Cleveland, occupied the building.

GRAND JURY HOLDS TWO-DAY SESSION AND RETURNS SIX TRUE BILLS

One Alleged Car Robber Is Not Indicted. Jail Found to be in Best of Condition.

The Grand Jury met at the court house Monday morning and after organized by electing W. F. Smith foreman. The jurors remained in session until late Tuesday afternoon and during the interval examined twenty-five witnesses. The following true bills were returned:

Frank Fatica, Manslaughter. It is charged that Fatica killed Dominic Ciacibello of Wickliffe on January 20, after a family row. Fatica has been out on bail since a few days after the alleged commission of crime.

Walter Foster, Burglary and Larceny. Foster is charged with breaking into the cigar store of Herman Levy on March 20 and taking personal property to the amount of $4.00.

John Sickers and Chas. Fineus, Burglary and Grand Larceny. On February 20 these men are said to have broken into a Nickel Plate freight car and taken one box of plier valued at $6, box of hosiery worth $4, two bags of peanuts, $3, and a box of cloth worth $25, the total value being $38.

Robert Duker, Burglary and Larceny. Duker is claimed to have been the man who broke into the Nickel Plate station house and took $12 worth of shoes, $6 worth of underwear, some stamps and a 25 cent rubber comb.

Isaac Ronni, attempt to commit Burglary. Ronni is a Fairport boy who, it is claimed, tried to force an entrance into A. M. Bartlett's pool room, on March 21.

Eli G. Bunnell, Criminal Neglect to Provide for Children. Alleged that for some time Lila, William and Florence Bunnell, all under sixteen, have not been properly provided for.

No true bill was found in the case of Chas. Vlosek, who had been charged with burglarizing a Nickel Plate car.

WHEN PEACH TREE SHOULD BE PRUNED

A Peach Tree of the Muir Variety in Its First Season's Growth—Fig. 1.

The principal reasons for pruning a peach tree, according to a recent bulletin issued by the United States department of agriculture, may be summed up as follows:

(1) To modify the vigor of the tree

(2) To keep the tree shapely and within bounds

(3) To make the tree more stocky

(4) To open the tree top to admit air and sunshine

(5) To reduce the struggle for existence in the tree top

(6) To remove dead or interfering branches

(7) To aid in stimulating the development of fruit buds

(8) To thin the fruit

(9) To make thorough spraying possible

(10) To facilitate the harvesting of the fruit

WAR AND HATE

"Wars will never have any ending" said President Wilson at Baltimore, "until men cease to hate one another." But how much hatred was there among the mass of the men engaged on the side of the allies in the present war against the Germans? As a matter of fact the day before the conflagration burst forth to amaze the world there was complete amity between the mass of Frenchmen and the mass of Germans, between the mass of Englishmen and the mass of Russians and the mass of men now fighting against them. War is a madness which turns brother against brother, which destroys all ordinary ties, which severs even bonds of blood and interest and which leads its victims to forget everything except the blood lust which has supplanted reason and human kindness and all that distinguishes man from the brute.

We shall not get rid of wars while we persist in warlike preparation. We shall not get rid of it while we go on bullying and blustering, as there seems a disposition to do in Mexico. We shall not get rid of it by rushing war ships to every scene where sordid American interests seem threatened. Nor shall we get rid of it if we grow excited every time some fanatic in a foreign land who hates us vents his spleen on the stars and stripes. In a fit of stupid anger we can do more in a moment to disgrace and insult that flag than any enraged or contemptuous foreigner could do in a hundred years. We should merely pity the poor fool who would thus relieve his feeling toward this country. And besides, how long would a foreign flag be permitted to float here in our own land if the country to which it belongs were menacing our coasts and insisting on a more or less intimate regulation of our affairs?

THE CASE FOR APPLES

Sections which are heavily interested in the apple market as producers of apples on a large scale, are much concerned about the inadequate demand for the fruit which still stands first in the United States. In New York, for example, concerted efforts have been made to set forth the good qualities of the apple and the reasons why more apples ought to be eaten.

It is a movement which ought to succeed. Apples deserve the fullest favor of the American people. This country produces a vast apple crop and many of its orchards rank with the best in the world in the quality of their fruit. Apples are healthful food and millions of people would be in better condition if they ate more of them. And more, many more, would be eaten if the various ways of using apples were more generally and thoroughly understood.

Apples are well worth studying and knowing well. They differ widely in taste and keeping qualities. Some kinds are better eaten raw than baked in pies or baked in any way. With others the reverse is true. They agree with some men and women best in one form and best with others when differently prepared. Altogether, they are the most useful fruit of the United States and they ought to be made still more important in the diet of the American people.

MACK AGAINST CIGARETTES

As leader of the Philadelphia Athletics, Connie Mack takes rank as one of the greatest generals base ball has ever known. He reads men, and as a sane, ordinary person reads a book. He contributes to the Scientific Temperance Journal this characteristically clear statement:

"It is my candid opinion, and I have watched very closely the last twelve years or more, that boys at the age of ten or fifteen who have continued smoking cigarettes do not as a rule amount to anything. They are unfit in every way for any kind of work where brains are needed. No boy or man can expect to succeed in this world in a high position and continue [illegible]

If you can wear your flannels when your neighbors
Are shedding theirs and poking fun at you;
If you can take precautions, though your labors
Are watched and criticised by quite a few;
If you can swallow sulphur and molasses,
And calmly wear red flannel round your throat;
And take bad doses from alternate glasses,
Until you feel your very heart's afloat;
If you can catch a cold and keep your temper,
While all your friends suggest a dozen cures;
If you have influenza and distemper,
Yet sympathize with cases "worse than yours."
If you hear "How is your cold?" and answer sweetly,
Or hear "I told you so," and not get cross;
If suddenly you lose your voice completely,
And never breathe a word about your loss;
If you can stick to rubbers and umbrella
When all the world is wearing summer suits,
And smile benighly at the other fellow
When he makes fun of you with jeers and hoots;
If you can grapple with that tired feeling,
And force yourself to work that must be done;
Then summer time your ills will soon be healing,
And probably you'll live till fall, my son.

Rules For Correspondents

Here are ten rules for country correspondents. They were prepared by an experienced newspaper man. Cut them out and keep them. Then try to make your next letter to the Herald conform with all of the rules.

1. Do not abbreviate. Do not write Mr & Mrs, but Mr. and Mrs.; not Mon. or Sat. but Monday or Saturday.
2. Leave space between items for correction or additions.
3. Give both initials. Write C. H. Brown instead of Mr. Brown or Mr. C. Brown.
4. Write important subjects fully. Do not dismiss the death of a well known pioneer in half a dozen words, but write something of interest concerning him. If suicide or murder give all the details you can get.
5. Have verbs agree with subjects. Don't say Mr. and Mrs. B. was, but Mr. and Mrs. B. were. Mr. and Mrs. B. may be one scripturally. But they are two grammatically.
6. Don't use nicknames. Use James Brown instead of Jim Brown, Edward instead of Ed.
7. Give the time in an item. Mr. Brown was in Lansing, the house burned down, are incomplete. Tell when things happened.
8. Divide words correctly. Don't divide such words as enough, e-nough.
9. Don't send articles reflecting upon the character of individuals or firms. The newspaper is not looking for libel suits; neither does it care to right your personal wrongs.
10. Write your name and town at top of page. Last but most important rule of all. It is most essential that the newspaper know from whom the news is received and from what place.

Important suggestion, though not a rule: Carefully look over your news after it is published and note what changes had to be made.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Silver Cornet Band

Folks, in th' town where I live at, 'way out in Illinoy,
We got a fancy court-house an' a park we all injoy,
Th' best an' bravest fire department in the hull darn land,
But what we're mostly proud of is our Silver Cornet Band.

Ye talk about yer orchestrys an' operys an' sich,
Yer simfoneys an' concerts that air got up fer th' rich—
Not one kin hold a candle, folks, I'll hev ye onderstand,
To th' sweet, enchantin' music o' th' Silver Cornet Band.

On every Decoration Day they lead th' sad parade,
Th' comrads right behind 'em, follered by th' Ladies' Aid,
The Red Men an' the Woodmen an' the children, hand-in-hand
March solemn to th' music o' th' Silver Cornet Band.

An' then, on Independence Day, they turn out in their best,
Their unicorns of red an' gold outshinin' all th' rest,
Th' cannons roar, th' banners wave, th' marshal takes command,
But, gosh all hemlock! Listen t' that Silver Cornet Band!

On summer nights they give us all a concert in th' park [illegible]
The folks sit 'round an' listen till away long after dark,
An' many a lovin' couple hev promised heart an' hand
To th' soft, entrancin' music o' th' Silver Cornet Band.

I sometimes think that when it comes my time t' pass away
I'd like to hev the boys around and hear th' music play;
Seems kinda like th' passage t' th' fur off Happy Land
Would be easy, t' th' music o' th' Silver Cornet Band.

Man Takes His Own Medicine is an Optimist

He has absolute faith in his medicine—he knows when he takes it for certain ailments he gets relief. People who take Dr. King's New Discovery for an irritating Cold are optimists—they know this cough remedy will penetrate the linings of the throat, kill the germs, and open the way for Nature to act. You can't destroy a Cold by superficial treatment—you must go to the cause of the trouble. Be an optimist. Get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery today.

The Scarlet Plague

By JACK LONDON

Drawn from the Diary of Dr. Robert Hamilton.

CHAPTER I—Continued.

Other, with his Chinese servant, was fishing, also begged me to tell him. With tears in her eyes she begged me to kill him. But he was a man of iron and strong nerve, and I let him.

"THE SCARLET PLAGUE, HIS SON, HIS DAUGHTER, HIS WIFE, HIS SERVANT, HIS ALL! I pronounced it he would give Vonta to me, and he pointed to my fine cow and shook his head very emphatically. He told that in the old days, when he was married, he had had six wives, but the first of them was sad or sick, and he had killed her. Now he had the greatest lady in the land to be married to him and soon his head and mine his brain. I was half your day before the plague," he said, "and I tell you, I am a doomed man. I do not fear death. I have lived to the old time for anything I want to have. In spite, but they are not my words. He was a vulgar, low-minded man, and yet this phrase fell unconsciously from his lips.

"Let me tell you that I thought I had an iron grip of life women have to work! What can I do? I am a man of iron, and I am a man of brain. He was a brute. The first night, when I discovered the song, Vonta and I had great talk about the old days and the wonderful world. We talked of our friends, and poetry and the Chief Minister's wives, and we talked of the new herbal and we agreed by our way of speech which he did not comprehend, really had to cache up and sold." And this is Vonta, the Chief Minister's wife of Vonta! Wise, beautiful, mature, and exceedingly learned, she is the Chief Minister's wife. Problem, time is always changed, times is changed. Here, you women, and, all my movements are lively about it. I want Professor Jordan and I want to have been just married.

"I see her about her lands, and the scene of our talk is for her. He drove back his general for a strike and I was a real stick, and I tell you I could do nothing to prevent against the man. I tell you, and we are whites in each other's society. But the Chief's son laughed and said, "Dad, you are a fool." I tell you, I tell you, I tell you, Monument Was Erected Fifty Years Ago to a Brave Colonial Dame.

Admiring friends of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson are planning a memorial. Somebody suggests that this take the form of a statue—"the first statue of a woman to be reared in this country."

Only a few weeks after Nordica's death, it was said that a statue should be erected to the memory of that sweet singer. On that occasion it was also said that it would be the first statue to a woman in America.

But 217 years ago another American woman did something which not only deserved a statue, but got it. Haven't you ever heard of Hannah Dustin?

Captured by Indians at Haverhill, dragged from bed, where her one-week-old baby was promptly murdered, this hardy woman walked for days through snow and slush many miles and without shoes. She was destitute of everything except courage.

From a captive white boy she learned how to kill a human being with a single stroke of a tomahawk. So one night she and the lad slew ten sleeping Indians, scalped them, and fled back through the wilderness to their home.

Hannah Dustin carried the ten scalps to the governor of Massachusetts, and she received $250 for them. Just 50 years ago a statue was reared for her upon the island in the Merrimac river from which she had made her escape.—Philadelphia Ledger.

BATTLES SELDOM LAST LONG

Conflicts Usually Quickly Decided, Although There Are Some Exceptions to Be Noted.

The battle of the Aisne is almost sure to be the longest fight in the world's history.

In fact, most of the famous battles have lasted under a day, as the following list will show.

1813. Leipzig. Lasted three days. French beaten by Russian, Austrian and Prussian armies.

1815. Waterloo. Lasted eight hours. Napoleon finally beaten by British and Prussians.

1854. Alma. Lasted three and a half hours. British and French beat Russians.

1863. Gettysburg. Lasted three days. American Civil war. Indecisive battle.

1866. Sadowa. Lasted eight hours. Prussians beat Austrians.

1870. Sedan. Big fighting lasted 12½ hours. Prussians beat the French.

ASSESSORS ARE BUSY

Men With Sawed-off Suit Cases are Listing Personal Property

The tax assessor is abroad in the land and within the next few weeks will visit all parts of the county. Thirteen men are in charge of this work in Lake county and the law provides that the assessment must be made between April 4 and June 7.

George Murray, District Assessor, is one busy man these days, getting used to his new duties and keeping everything in running order. Reports for the first week's work are now coming in and show that the assessors have been "on the job."

There were only a few changes in the force this year. C. C. Markell was appointed assessor at Kirtland and J. G. Barton in Willoughby township. Sultan St. John takes Mr. Murray's place as assessor in wards 2 and 3, Painesville. C. A. Sohl resigned as assessor in Leroy and his place was filled by D. M. Davis.

One new assessor has been put on, E. M. Jones being given a place in Willoughby township.

No Court This Week

Common pleas is not in session this week, Judge Reynolds being busy over in Ashtabula county. A jury had been summoned and the prisoners indicted by the grand jury were to have been arranged, but it was necessary to make a change in plans.

Arrangements will occur next week and the petit jury will be summoned for the week of April 26.

There are eight inmates at the jail at present, one man being held as a witness.

Damage Suit Filed

Walter L. Lane has filed his petition for $10,000 damages against the Diamond Alkali company of Fairport Harbor. Lane met with an accident while working at the plant which he claims has left him powerless to earn his living. The petition states that while working on a conveyor a part of his clothing caught on a shaft resulting in his now being physically unable to earn a livlihood. Attorneys E. C. Huntington and H. S. Amidon are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

Park to be Improved

Charles F. Fisher, lessee of Willoughbeach park, has incorporated a $20,000 company for the exploitation of the concessions of the park, it was stated Tuesday. The building of a rolly-coaster which is expected to cost about $15,000 has been begun. A new carousal costing about $5,000 has also been started. The management announced its expectation of a big season. The grounds and park are said to be more attractive than ever.

Jess Calkins Marries

J. Trussell Calkins, known to many Willoughby people as "Jess" Calkins, and Mrs. Ezra Kendall, the "Rickety Anne" of "The Old Homestead" production, recently seen in Cleveland, are married, according to a letter to a friend in Willoughby. The announcement was quite a surprise. Mr. Calkins, who was for many years a leading tenor in a double male quartet, has since been with "The Old Homestead" company.

Paving Bonds Sold

At the meeting of the county commissioners Monday $17,000 worth of 4½% bonds were sold to Otis & Co., of Cleveland for par and accrued interest. The proceeds of this issue will be used to construct three-quarters of a mile of brick pavement in Willoughby, officially known as the Arnold-Ridge road.

No Change at Vulcan

There is no prospect of the Vulcan shop starting in the immediate future, according to a man who claims to know. This man states that Mr. Maxwell, well known auto manufacturer, after looking over the plant, made the company a proposition stating just what he would do, but so far the directors have failed to accept the offer.

RECENT DEATHS

MRS. J. C. FENTON

The last sad rites for Mrs. Justina C. Fenton were held from the residence on Mentor avenue, Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. The home was filled with friends and relatives who came to pay their last respects to one who had been dearly loved by them.

Rev. S. H. Bartlett of Hiram, a former pastor of the Church of Christ of this city, conducted the services.

MRS. FIDELIA DEWEY

Mrs. Fidelia Dewey, a highly respected lady, died at her home in Kirtland Saturday, April 10, aged 72 years, 6 months and 16 days.

She had been enjoying usual good health until about three weeks ago, when she was taken ill with the grip, complications following which resulted in her death. She was the widow of Ira E. Dewey, who passed away several years ago. One son, Chas Dewey, survives.

FLORENCE WARN

Florence Warn, the six-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warn of West Jackson street, died Tuesday morning after an illness of two days. Death was due to cerebro hemorrhage.

MRS. LUCY EMUS

Mrs. Lucy Emus, aged 37 years, passed away at her home on Mathews street, Thursday night after an illness of three weeks. Apoplexy was the cause of her death. She is survived by a husband, William Emus, and one child.

WILLIAM DELL

William Dell, aged 73 years, passed away at his home in Leroy early Saturday morning after a lingering illness. A wife survives to mourn his loss. The funeral was held from the residence at 2 o'clock, Monday afternoon. Burial was made in Leroy cemetery.

Revolvers

A revolver is a nickle-plated substitute for bravery, which has practically driven the original article out of the market.

The revolver gives a puny man with a 5-8-inch brain and the pluck of a grasshopper a 100-yard reach and makes him more deadly than a Sioux Indian. There was a time when this country had no dangerous animals, except bears and wolves, and life was safe, except on the frontiers, but now vast hordes of 16-year old boys who use their skulls for a dime novel bookcase, roam the streets with cigarettes in their face and portable cannon in their hip pockets, producing obituaries with the skill and enthusiasm of a cholera microbe; while it is at all times possible to meet a personal enemy who has been chasing you for a week, and who is reluctantly compelled to defend himself when he catches you by filling you so full of lead that your remains will require eight pall-bearers. Revolvers are now so generally used in debate, in domestic quarrels and repartee of all sorts that 8,000 Americans die of them each year, it is said.

Improve the Home Grounds

Now is the time to clean up about the yard and lawn. All the dead parts of vines and shrubbery should be removed, the fence straightened up if need be, flower beds laid out and made, and perhaps a few shade trees planted. Native trees especially those grown in the rather open places often thrive best and make the most desirable shade trees. In case a lawn is to be started this spring it should be done without further delay. A desirable lawn grass mixture for one acre can be made by mixing 42 pounds of pure Kentucky blue grass seed, 5 pounds of Red Top, and 3 pounds of White Clover. Rake the seed in well and roll lightly. Probably there are worn or bare spots on the lawn that need repairing. Cover such areas with an inch or two of well rotted manure, spade deeply, stamp lightly, and sow with lawn seed. Rake well and roll. If possible, these areas should be kept moist.

OFFICIAL CROP REPORT

Shows That Wheat Has Been Injured by Thawing and Freezing

The following report is compiled from returns received from official correspondents of the Department:

Wheat—Condition compared with average, 88 per cent; Crop of 1914 still in producers' hands, 12 per cent; Weeks of snow protection, 6.

Winter Barley—Condition compared with average, 93 per cent.

Rye—Condition compared with average, 91 per cent.

Corn—Condition in crib, compared with average, 96 per cent; Remaining unhusked in field, 8 per cent; Damage to unhusked in field, 12 per cent; Damage to fodder during winter, 21 per cent.

Fruit—Prospect compared with normal yield, 88 per cent; Buds winter killed, 7 per cent.

The opening of Spring shows Ohio wheat in a rather poor growing condition. The estimate is 88 per cent compared with an average. The amount of the crop of 1914 still in producers' hands is estimated at 12 per cent. On the corresponding date one year ago the condition of wheat was estimated at 95 per cent. 14 per cent of the crop of the preceding year was then in producers' hands.

The poor condition of wheat is generally attributed to damage by alternate thawing and freezing. Especially was the month of March severe on the plant. There is also some complaint of damage by Hessian fly. This, however, is not very general over the state. The present acreage seeded is estimated at 1,828,267 acres. The harvest should produce approximately the same number of bushels as in 1914. Under normal conditions of growth Ohio will show no material advance in wheat production until a largely increased area is sown. The present market value of wheat is reported at $1.42 per bushel.

The condition of winter barley is estimated at 93 per cent, while rye condition is reported at 91 per cent.

Corn in crib is in excellent condition. Little or no complaint of mould or rot. The damage to the unhusked crop is estimated at 12 per cent. Spring plowing is well advanced, and many correspondents note that an unusually large corn area will be prepared. The present market price of corn is reported at 76 cents per bu.

Compared with a normal yield, fruit prospect is estimated at 88 per cent. Fruit buds are backward owing to cool weather. The number reported winter killed is but 7 per cent, as against 26 per cent reported on the corresponding date in 1914. The general fruit outlook is most promising.

Base Ball Season Opens

The baseball season is now officially open and as soon as the weather warms up a bit tired Lake county business men can be found, most any afternoon, taking the limited car for the city on "important business."

Reports from the spring training camp indicate that the "Indians" are going to make the fans forget the disappointments of the disastrous season of 1914, and that they will put on a brand of baseball equal to any seen in the best days of the "Naps."

TOY GUN GETS THIEF

William Barton Captures Robber by Aid of Air Rifle.

About 10:30 Monday evening two men tried to force an entrance into a shed at the home of William Barton, South St. Clair street. One made his escape when pursued by the owner of the premises and the other was captured by the aid of a child's toy.

Barton heard the men about the premises and looked about for a weapon, an air rifle was the only thing at hand and with this he sallied forth and landed his man, turning him over to the police. The partner who escaped was captured later but released after a hearing.

Barton's victim, when searched at headquarters, proved to be well supplied with knives, carrying a large clasp knife in his pocket and a double edged knife a foot in length in his right trouser leg. A number of cartridges were also found in his pocket.

At the hearing before Mayor Malin Tuesday morning the man gave his name as Lasrendo Salinato and his home as Geneva. He claimed that he was not trying to steal but was looking for a place to spend the night. Appearances and the knife were against him and he was fined $50 and costs and committed to jail.

Mr. Barton certainly showed great courage in going after the man practically unarmed and escorting him unaided to the police station.

SKETCH OF MANAGER "WILD BILL" DONOVAN

Manager Donovan and Coach Duke Farrell examining Articles of Recruits at Training Quarters, Savannah, Ga.

When Bill Donovan (William E. to private life he was spoken of in respectable circles as a gentleman of means, and one of the New York Americans, he was one of 420 individuals upon whom the sporting writers were attempting to sketch the mere outline of the man. This being so, here's a little biographical sketch of Wild Bill.

Donovan is a Massachusetts man, having been born in Lawrence, noted for its production of baseball Donovans, the estimed Red Ace, once. Therefore, sharing the distinction of having helped to put the city on everything.

In the records of Wild Bill is allowed to have been born there in 1872, which makes it appropriate that he not be old for a manager, in early sixty, previous to becoming a major leaguer, was an amateur pitcher, playing with Lawrence, 18 ½ and Waterbury (Conn.) teams.

His acquaintance with big league baseball dates from 1894, when he made his debut with the Washington National league club, coming to that club from Waterbury, Conn., by purchase.

In 1899, when the Washington club disbanded, Donovan went to the Brooklyn club, with which he played four seasons. In 1903, just before the close of the war between the American and National leagues, he signed a Detroit contract, and up to the time of the signing of the peace pact, for the reason "there is no place where he was voted as the team's manager by the fans."

In 1904, when his pitching was a great big factor in the winning of the American league pennant by Detroit, his salary was $3,500 and he was voted a good guy, while in 1905 he was $3 and 25 Jeffries.

Bill's good stage manners had free play, a wonderful break on his salary and was amazingly manifest on one of the greatest fielding plays ever made in a world's series game, in 1905 and Waterbury (Conn.) issues.

Last year, as manager of the Detroit International team, he came to the fore as the manager of a pennant-winning team.

SOUND ESSENTIALS FOR A FRUIT GARDEN

Japanese "Butter" Plum.

Dr. L. M. HUNTSMAN, Michigan.

Don't expect good fruit and plenty of it unless you feed the trees and feather according.

Trees cooked organic should be discarded.

Aphis and borer are first rate fertilizers.

Keep all hatens about the roots of trees and shrubs.

Bicarbonate may be given the first two years after transplanting.

Make the soil rich before setting out the trees and vines.

If a large crop is wanted, give solid and liberal treatment, both in manure and hard cultivation.

Top-dress the orchard and fruit garden, but long water manure on the strawberry patch.

Do not let Bordeaux a curse of mold bud and antifoulent for two years.

Do not let the trees and vines be overcrowded, or they will be weak.

Trees in the fruit garden should be treated for the number of carcasses and for other reasons affecting the soil.

Do not be afraid to use fertilizer, it should be planted here.

Do not be afraid to use advice on it; it is as bad as not to cultivate it. It is the business of the tree to regulate itself, and to take what it needs and rejects the fruit.

Mistaking the idea that washes is better, in many instances, than plow and harrow, and that it is better to be throwing out pitfalls of cold air on the other. Mixing with litter, hassle, the hole trifle, and the hard ice of a spreading during the hot weather.

The farm tales may be mingled with trash from the Chicago Tribune, or the Wisconsin Farmer, or the Lakeside club from Waterbury, Conn., by purchase.

The reasons for Certain-teed Roofing

Every buyer needs the proper assurance that he is getting the right quality, that a second, or third quality, is not being delivered with your full value.

Rise also often meet competition by offering inferior goods, at wholesale prices, but any old quality, put their labels on it, and say it is the same. Our Certain-teed Roofing is sold with written guarantee of the world's largest manufacturers of asphalt roofing, which leaves the assurance of our unequalled facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell it at a very reasonable price.

These are the reasons for Certain-teed

Roofing

We invite every one interested to come to our office and see how we make the goods. We know that our Certain-teed Roofing is the best quality that we can make. It is the best quality that we intend to be and remain recognized as the best quality. It is made with the one purpose in view. We also make long grade, cheaper roofings to meet the demand for very temporary work, but the Certain-teed Roofing is the best quality we know how to make. Samples and Booklet free. Certain-teed Roofing is guaranteed for 5 years, 10 years, 15 years, 20 years, 25 years, 30 years, 35 years, 40 years, 45 years, 50 years, 55 years, 60 years, 65 years, 70 years, 75 years, 80 years, 85 years, 90 years, 95 years, 100 years.

DO YOUR SWATTING EARLY.

Are you swatting the fly? Have you seen any flies to swat? If not, be on guard and massacre the first one that shows himself.

Scientists tell us that every fly we kill now means that there will be millions less to kill later in the season. And others, who were paid by commissions to pay attention to the war waged upon this pest last year are firm in their belief that the nation is on the right track to exterminate the little nuisance. Last year was really the first when any determined effort was made, speaking broadly. Housewives all over the United States took arms against it as a common foe, and the result was that many communities reported even a distinctly visible decrease in the number of flies throughout the summer, and in some instances reports stated that the extermination was almost complete.

Think of thirty million women with perhaps as many children swatting a dozen flies a day! It is plainly seen that the war can be won. All that is needed is determined effort in every home. And the swatter need not be the only instrument used. Aided by the use of good fly paper or traps, the work will go forward much more rapidly. It's a cause worthy of your co-operation. At first, the idea of exterminating the fly by killing them individually was ridiculed, but a season's determined effort proved that it is not impossible, and the coming summer will give even more positive proof.

But all must help. Do your swatting early.

THE WHEAT PROSPECT

Calculations on the prospect of the wheat crop for this year are based on the presumption that we will have ordinarily favorable weather for the development of the crop between this time and harvest. That is a large "if" at present, but it has to be allowed to stand in any estimates made at this period.

Subject to that condition it is satisfactory to learn that the largest acreage of winter wheat ever sown is growing and in good condition. The condition is not quite equal to what it was a year ago, but it is a little better than the ten-year average, and it holds out the prospect of only 55,000,000 bushels less than last year. Except that, it holds also the prospect of being the largest winter wheat crop ever harvested. It shows the good sign of being one-half per cent in condition better than in December, though the average April condition is 2.7 per cent below that of December.

A crop of 619,000,000 bushels of winter wheat is a large crop if the spring wheat crop is an average yield. The prospects for the acreage of spring wheat are very favorable. With wheat at $1.50 in Chicago and with the large returns from last year's crop, the farmers will sow all they can, and trust to the weather to give them a good yield.

The actual condition of the wheat sown is 7 per cent below that of last year, but the acreage is 11 per cent greater. It is said that we are not likely to need another crop of nearly 900,000,000 bushels of wheat, because the Russian crop will be in the market by next fall. As there is an accumulation of the Russian crop of last year and a part of the crop of 1913, if the Dardanelles is opened by next fall wheat will be much cheaper. But that is subject to the fortunes of war, which do not at present look very favorable for the opening of the Dardanelles.

SAY BOYS!

Want to go to war? Of course you do if you are anything like the average healthy, enthusiastic young American lad. How many times have you day-dreamed, and night-dreamed, too, for that matter, about leading a gallant company on to victory? In your fancy you can hear the roar of [illegible]

and all that sort of thing, BUT—

If you want a real, true-to-life illustration of what modern warfare is just get up about 4 o'clock some cold, damp, foggy morning, walk ten or twelve miles to a bit of swampy land, dig a trench until your back aches like an ulcerated tooth; let the trench fill with water until it reaches your waist. Then stand in this cold, almost freezing water all day and all night and all day and all night with nothing to eat and nothing to drink but the murky water while the rest of the boys throw stones at you.

Doesn't sound so nice and glorious, does it?

But that's only about one-tenth as bad as REAL war would be.

Better stick to the farm, eh!

Are You Rheumatic?—Try Sloan's

If you want quick and real relief from Rheumatism, do what so many thousand other people are doing—whenever an attack comes on, bathe the sore muscle or joint with Sloan's Liniment. No need to rub it in—just apply the Liniment to the surface. It is wonderfully penetrating. It goes right to the seat of trouble and draws the pain almost immediately. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

Fair Warning.

A brazen-lunged newsboy in a western city has been having a good deal of fun at the expense of the wearers of freakish skirts. His method has the simplicity of genius. As his victim goes by she is startled to hear a loud cry: "Git out of town!" Her indignant look brings a repetition of the cry, with a slight addition which does not altogether propitiate her: "Git out of town—paipers!"

Should Not Feel Discouraged

So many people troubled with indigestion and constipation have been benefited by taking Chamberlain's Tablets that no one should feel discouraged who has not given them a trial. They contain no pepsin or other digestive ferments but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Obtainable everywhere.

CURE FOR NERVOUS PEOPLE

Physicians Have Found Work to Be as Effective as Rest, If Not More So.

Some physicians are finding that work is quite as effective a cure for nervous disorders as rest ever was—if not more so. How one doctor is proving this is told in the Survey. He is Dr. Herbert J. Hall of Marblehead, Mass.

Doctor Hall discovered that the patient must feel "the call of the job" if a cure is to be effected. So in 1895 he established a workshop in Marblehead wherein patients, supervised and taught by experts, are now making articles that are salable and are getting wages for their products. Weaving, cement work, dyeing and pottery have been the most successful trades. Jewelry and metal work have proved too trying for untrained and unhappy patients to carry through and sell profitably. But in the other occupations about seven thousand dollars' worth of merchandise has been made and sold each year, although the workshop has never contained more than thirty-eight workers at a time, many of whom worked only a few hours a day.

Commenting on this Dr. Richard C. Cabot says: "When Doctor Hall joined his squad of neurasthenics to the ranks of the industrial army he added his contribution not only to therapeutics, but to sociology. He attacked the problem of the sub-standard worker—handicapped in the race of industry, but not necessarily excluded from that inspiring company. He attacked a problem which faces all who deal with the consumptive, the alcoholic, the chronic losses and in fact all chronic invalids, no matter what their disease. Rich or poor, they all need work, for without it they degenerate mentally and morally."

DESERTS NO LONGER KNOWN

How Modern Man Has Successfully Removed Nature's Obstacles to Progress.

Nature has set up four kinds of barriers to man's conquest of the earth—mountains, forests, deserts, rivers, an exchange remarks. The first he cannot remove, so he bores holes through them for railways. The second he has, most unwisely, largely cleared away altogether. The third he is beginning to treat like the forests. The fourth he is shifting to suit his purposes and to regulate their flow at will.

Man flies now over all boundaries. He cuts through isthmuses to remove the barriers between the seas.

Into the deserts man sends railroads, telegraph lines, irrigation engineers. The "Great American Desert" marked upon the atlases of our fathers has ceased to exist. The vast "desert" of northwestern Canada has become a boundless prairie of waving wheat. The Landes of Gascony are now much more than half covered with pine trees. In 1902 22,000 square miles of the Algerian desert had been made fruitful by artesian wells. The "Australian desert" is rapidly being irrigated and turned into grazing land. Almost 70,000 square miles of "desert" in India has been reclaimed. Sir William Willcocks is now engaged in reclaiming 13,000 square miles of the delta of the Tigris and Euphrates and more than 4,000 square miles of the Gezireh plain between the Blue and White Nile are being transformed into cotton plantations.

Thus is man, by obliterating natural barriers, improving upon nature.

Wanted a Hook Cigar.

He was a seedy-looking fellow, although he looked as if he had the virtues of thrift and industry. He had just finished paying his tax bill and was standing in the corridor outside of the tax department. His curious manner in looking around induced a clerk to inquire whether he could be of service. The seedy-looking individual hesitated, but apparently getting up courage confided that he heard and read in the newspapers considerable concerning City Collector Hook and his distribution of cigars.

"I have been anxious to see one of those cigars for a long time," said the taxpayer confidingly. "I want one for a souvenir."

The clerk obligingly walked into the collector's office, but he was out.

"I'll come back in a day or two," said the seedy gentleman as he made for the door. "That cigar will be worth a whole lot to me."—Baltimore American.

Carbon From Gas.

Engineers have long been trying to discover an economical way of producing carbon from natural gas. Under the methods now in use there is such an enormous waste of gas that the process is too expensive. Harry Bearom of Wilsonburg, Harrison County, W. Va., has been studying this matter scientifically and experimentally for many years, and now he announces that he has found a method whereby he produces a black without any ash and far superior to that made under the older processes, and whereby the waste of gas is almost entirely eliminated.

Population of India.

The population of British India is given as 231,085,132. The figures are for some ten years ago, and it would not be far out of the way to put the present population at 235,000,000. One of the Indian princes recently declared that if called upon India could furnish an army of between seven and ten millions of men.

Eye of the Eagle.

That the eagle can look into the intense sunlight without blinking is explained by the fact that the bird has a thin transparent veil which it can draw over the eyeball when occasion requires and which tempers the light but does not obstruct the vision.

Naturally.

A woman is generally sufficiently conceited to think her husband must really be a superior sort of man [illegible]

SUPPLIES FOR THE SOLDIER

Line of Communication Must Remain Intact in Order to Provide Army With Supplies.

General Grant said that when he had re-established railroad communication at Chattanooga and so brought food to his starving army the soldiers called it the "cracker line." It is the most essential line in war, "Giard" writes in the Philadelphia Ledger.

The two armies facing each other in France and Belgium contain as many men as there are people in Philadelphia. At peace this city wears out 12,000 pairs of shoes every day. What must the soldiers wear out when constantly marching over rough country?

To feed Philadelphia requires daily many train-loads of provisions coming in all directions. A soldier, like a citizen, must be fed. He needs clothes, blankets, rifles, ammunition, and he requires them constantly.

The "cracker line" is the line that connects the army with its own stores to the rear. That's why we hear so much about cutting the enemy's line of communication. To cut such a line and keep it cut means starvation.

But we had two spectacular instances in the Civil war where such lines were cut without producing any particular results. Just prior to Gettysburg, General Stuart's Confederate cavalry rode entirely around the Union camp, crossing its "cracker line" on the way.

The following year Sheridan's troopers made a complete circuit of Lee's army in northern Virginia. Both these cavalry raids carried temporary terror to their foes, but neither was productive of any permanent good.

"GUARDED" BY A CRAZY MAN

Sane Prisoner Gets a Suit of Clothes and Doesn't Think He Has Much Kick Coming.

When Frank Begosek, a Ravensdale coal miner, was examined by a lunacy commission and found not insane, he was ordered sent to the county hospital to recuperate for a few days. At the same time another patient from the jail was found insane and ordered to Steilacoom.

The deputy sheriff in charge of the two prisoners misunderstood the orders and reported to the jail officials that both men were "crazy" and had been ordered to Steilacoom. So Begosek was packed off to the asylum without protest. Later Deputy Sheriff John Cudihee went after him and tucked him in the county hospital.

Begosek was perfectly good humored about it. They had burned his clothes at Steilacoom and allotted him a new suit and a pair of shoes, and he will go home fitted out for the winter.

"It is a very good place, and the meals are plenty," said Begosek laconically, referring to Steilacoom.

"Begosek is entitled to the prize as the best natured man in the world," said the guard. "When he went over, the real 'nut' with him imagined himself entirely sane and insisted on taking charge of Begosek and the deputy in charge humored him. So the sane man went to the asylum in charge of the crazy man, and there was never a hard word between them."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Moved Pole and Wires.

Moving an electric-light pole, with its burden of wires, was the feat accomplished recently by a Cleveland illuminating company, which is regarded as novel from several standpoints. In adding five feet to the width of St. Claire avenue it was decided to move the curb on each side of the street back two and one-half feet, but for part of the way the difficulty was increased by the presence of a pipe just inside of the curb. This was overcome by the use of an electric truck of three and one-half tons capacity supplied with a three-horsepower motor and winch, which is ordinarily used for drawing wires through the conduits. This outfit was backed up to a distance of two and one-half feet from the curb and the pole secured by a chain near the ground. The pole and its load of wires then was raised and the truck backed to the curb and the pole lowered into its new location. This was done in many instances without any mishap.

Worth, the Dressmaker.

The noted Parisian dressmaker, Worth, owed his early success to the patronage of that famous personage of the third empire, Princess Pauline de Metternich, the wife of the Austrian ambassador to France. By her wit and numerous vagaries of dress and manner she created a sensation at the court of Napoleon III and Eugenie. Therefore it was easy for Worth to become the most sought of the world's dressmakers when the princess approved his styles. Charles Worth, while so long the creator of French fashion, was an Englishman, born in Bourne, England, in 1825, and died in Paris in 1895.—Baltimore Star.

Caesar Met Check on Yser.

Official dispatches to the Belgian legation at Washington of the German failure to cross the Yser, caused legation officials to recall that Caesar suffered on the same ground.

"The meadows of the Yser," said a Belgian official recently, "constitute the ancient province of Menapia, where the legions of Caesar were checked. The story is so deep rooted among the people that a legend says a tree still stands there which is said to be the last one to which Caesar tied his horse, having been unable to travel farther."

SILOS
The Interlocking Cement Stave
is the greatest advancement that has been made in Silo construction.
A contractor in La Porte, Indiana, erected 24 of these Silos in 1913. In 1914 he erected 125 in the same locality. We will send the names and addresses of these users on request. It costs but a little more than a wood silo and requires no repairs or painting.
We specialize in farm concrete work such as dairy barn stables, milk houses, septic tanks and private water supply.

ANSWER TO THE AMERICAN NOTE

German Minister Says Owners of the Ship and Cargo Will Be Compensated

EVEN IF THE CARGO WAS CONTRABAND

Treaties of 1799 and 1828 Provide That the Contraband of Either Nation 'Cannot Be Confiscated, But Only Detained.'

Washington, D. C.—The German note, answer to the American note presenting a claim for the destruction of the William P. Frye, was made public Thursday evening by the state department. While the action of Capt. Thierichens in sinking the Frye is justified by the German government, Herr Von Jagow, the German minister for foreign affairs, tells the United States that the American owners of the ship and cargo will receive compensation, "even if the prize court should declare the cargo contraband," because the Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828 provide that contraband belonging to the citizens of either nation "cannot be confiscated by the other in any case, but only detained or used in consideration of payment of the full value of the same."

Reply to Claims.

The undersigned has the honor to make reply to the note of his excellency Mr. James W. Gerard, ambassador of the United States of America, dated the 3d instant, relative to claims for damages for the sinking of the American merchant vessel William P. Frye by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friederich.

DISTORT THE FACTS

Republicans Misrepresent Effect of Democratic Policies.

Actual Happenings That Account for the Country's Business Depression—Money Stringency in Europe the Great Factor.

It is interesting to observe, in view of the gloomy prophecies of "ruin" to the protected industries through Democratic "tinkering" with rate schedules which were not repealed, but only changed in amount, that the total importations of dutiable goods were actually $54,000,000 less in the January-August eight-months period of 1914, under the Underwood tariff, than in the like period of 1913, under the Payne-Aldrich tariff. The flooding of the market with foreign-manufactured goods on which the rates had been changed by "blundering Democratic hands" did not materialize; the stream actually lowered instead of rising.

Gentlemen of the Republican party, when you charge American business depression before the war to Democratic policies you dodge some facts and misrepresent others. What actually happened may be summarized thus:

The last half of 1913 saw a general drought in the United States and a severe money stringency in Europe. As a result, in the first eight months of 1914 foreign nations diminished their purchases from us by the enormous sum of $204,000,000, during a period in which, though we reduced our importations of manufactures by $4,000,000, we increased our purchases ...

Their experience knocked the buccaneering spirit out of them, and they submitted to capture by their pursuers, who arrived on the scene a quarter of an hour later.

WOULD NEVER LOCK THE SCHOOL DOORS

Bill Provides That Public Buildings Should Work All the Year Around.

PROPOSED STATUTE IS FAR REACHING

Leads Toward Goal Where Public Problems of All Manner Would Be Placed Before People in Institutions of Learning.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

Why confine the work of the public school to the education of children? Why not make the school buildings work all the year around, if necessary, and why not make them scatter their knowledge broadcast? These are among the questions asked and attempted to be answered in the Bohm bill, now pending in the committee on state and economic betterment of the house of representatives. Most people remember this measure as seeking to compel boards of education to grant the use of school buildings for social, civic and recreation purposes when demand for such use is made. But a study of the measure shows it to be far more sweeping. In fact, it is so sweeping that many educators regard it as vitally important to the future of the common schools. It permits school authorities to employ persons to take charge of general activities for which schools may be used after the regular school hours. It permits the schools to combine their effort with public rec...

Warm Debate on Text Book Bill.

Uniformity in the text books used by village, township and subdistrict schools is one of the features of prime interest in the general assembly this week. The Deaton uniformity measure, which the house of representatives considered and defeated Wednesday, caused as much excited debate and bitter controversy as any measure that has come to the attention of the assembly this year. The author of the bill charged that lobbyists, representing a certain large school book "trust," were crowding the galleries while the assemblymen discussed the provisions of the bill, and that they had been active for many weeks in an effort to defeat the entire measure. Sharp and acrimonious personal attacks were not lacking during the wordy battles. The author wanted to know of one member who was opposing his measure if that member's relatives were not employed by the so-called book trust. He wanted to know, also, if the members of the house were going to follow the suggestions of "selfish interests" that had been opposing the measure. "No bill that has come before this body has been as unmercifully assailed as this bill," said Mr. Deaton. "It has been attacked in the dark and in underhanded ways. I demand a fair and square fight, and I challenge those who have been attacking to come out in the open and show their colors." Practically all of the members of the house who have direct or indirect interest in school work insisted on having their say about the numerous questions that bobbed up momentarily for discussion. It became a free-for-all wordy war. The final vote stood 49 for the bill and 47 against it. It needed 62 votes to pass.

FEEBLE-MINDED UNCARED FOR OHIO HAS NEGLECTED THE PROBLEM OF ITS FEEBLE-MINDED, SAYS OFFICIAL.

JUST BEGINNING TO WAKE UP

State's Weak-Minded Population Is Estimated at From Ten to Fifteen Thousand.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cincinnati, O.—Ohio has so long neglected the problem of its feeble-minded that to-day there are more than 8,000 of them at large in the state. Dr. E. J. Emerick, superintendent of the State Institution for Feeble-Minded, at Columbus, estimates the state's total feeble-minded population at from 10,000 to 15,000. Only 2,058 are being cared for by the state. Hundreds of others, according to Dr. Emerick, are in infirmaries, the penitentiary and reformatory, the boys' and girls' industrial schools.

Of the 8,000 that are uncared for, Dr. Emerick says: "These feeble-minded individuals outside of institutions, incapable of getting on well without permanent care and guidance, yet left free to perpetuate defectives, present a problem the seriousness of which we are just beginning to appreciate." While the leading citizens all over Ohio are appealing to the legislature for liberal appropriations to relieve ...

INTEREST ON STATE FUNDS

Will Be Enough To Solve the Housing Problem, Shepherd Says.

Columbus, O.—"Give us the interest for one year on the state's funds and we will solve the problem of housing the state departments that can not be taken care of in the State House." This is the offer to the state made by President A. F. Shepherd, of the State Board of Administration and concurred in by his associates on the board, which has charge of 20 state institutions. There is more to the offer of the board. "A building will be erected that will be ready for occupancy before the next General Assembly comes into office and it will be built very largely by the prisoners in the Ohio penitentiary, just as the old Statehouse was built," continued Dr. Shepherd. "A proposition that sounds as good as the one we make ought to have a hearing."

Like every other body that has considered the matter the Kloue Building Committee has reached an agreement that the state must and should have an office building to accommodate the departments that are now scattered around through privately-owned office buildings. The annual rental paid by the state is in excess of $65,000 and, although the outside rents figured in the recent political canvass and the alleged extravagance of the preceding administration in renting the offices was condemned in the "little red book" and by the campaign orators, the state goes right on paying out money for rent just as it did before the election.

LOYALTY IS NEED

Now the Time for All True Followers of Christ to Stand by the Church.

These are solemn and testing hours. Who knows but that you may have come to the kingdom for such a day as this? Now are the times to make men see how glorious and transcendent a thing religion is. How infinitely greater it is than any of its social or personal manifestations! Never again confound religion with mere amiable living or mechanical believing. Never think of it as being concerned only, or chiefly, with the issues of this present life. Religion maintains itself in perennial power because men have never been willing to believe that they belonged only to this present life, and have never been able to satisfy themselves with anything or everything which this life has to give. For always, when men have looked abroad upon their world, they have seen the inextricable mingling of good and evil, the mystery of its strife and pain and injustice. And always when they have looked within, upon themselves, they have faced the inexpressible sorrow, shame and loneliness of human life. Thereby they have been forced to concern themselves with the solemn questions which have to do with the origin and the meaning and the destiny of the race. Where did we all come from? Where are we all going? Is there anything after this life which can possibly compensate for it? If a man die, shall he live again?

FRANK LOSES IN SUPREME COURT

His Conviction for Murdering Mary Phagan Is Upheld by High Tribunal.

APPLICATION FOR NEW TRIAL IS DENIED

Accused Man Now Faces Death on the Gallows Unless Georgia's Governor Grants Clemency—Will Appeal for His Life to the People.

Atlanta, Ga.—Leo M. Frank will appeal for his life to the people of Georgia. His case is out of the courts. No further move at law will be made to save him, according to Harry A. Alexander, his chief of counsel.

Washington, D. C.—The supreme court refused to set aside the conviction of Leo M. Frank for murdering Mary Phagan. Frank now faces death on the gallows unless Georgia's governor grants clemency. The court denied Frank's application for a habeas corpus writ upon which Frank sought a new trial.

"I am very much disappointed over the supreme court's decision, but I will keep up the fight," said Leo M. Frank when informed in Atlanta prison that his habeas corpus case had gone against him. The mandate of the supreme court is expected to be received by the federal district court in Atlanta in a few days. Upon its arrival Solicitor General Dorsey probably will request that Frank be arranged for re-sentence.

Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court. He concluded by saying: "In all the proceedings in the courts of Georgia the fullest right and opportunity to be heard according to the established modes of procedure have been accorded to him."

"In the opinion of this court," said Justice Pitney, "he is not shown to have been deprived of any right guaranteed to him by the 14th amendment, or any other provision of the constitution or laws of the United States; on the contrary, he has been convicted and is now held in custody under due process of law within the meaning of the constitution."

SAY SLAYING FOLLOWED FIERCE FIGHT

BRITISH, AFTER FIERCE BATTLE, HOLD HILL 60

Retain Vantage Point Following 36-Hour Fight, in Which Germans Made Repeated Desperate Charges.

London, England.—British troops, after a bitter 36-hour fight, hold the position east of Ypres they took from the Germans in a sudden dash Saturday night. According to the official war office statement Monday night the British are in complete possession of Hill 60, about two miles south of Zillebeke, a point which dominates the country to the north and northwest. This is the position which the Germans Sunday admitted having lost, but for which fighting was still going on.

Circumstances of the explosion of mines, which started the operation early Saturday evening, are recited by the official statement, which goes on to say that at daybreak Sunday the Germans delivered a heavy counter attack, but were repulsed with great loss.

But the German staff, apparently feeling that Hill 60 was worth fighting for, was not content to let the matter rest with one check. All day Sunday and far into the night charges were repeated, the Germans advancing always in close formation in face of the fire of machine guns that had been dragged to the hill when the attacking party got its first foothold. German dead, victims of the machine guns, are lying by hundreds in front of the British position.

The British have dug themselves in and attempts to drive them out apparently have been given up for the present.

LEADERS PLANNING FOR ADJOURNMENT

Tentatively Set Date for Cessation of Work in Assembly as April 28.

MANY ISSUES PENDING IN LEGISLATURE

Special Rules Already Being Drawn to Limit Speeches, Advance Special Bills and Hold Morning, Afternoon and Night Sessions.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

CAN the general assembly complete most of its work this week and be ready to recess from its labors before the last of April? The leaders in the house and senate are seriously propounding the question for they have tentatively set the date for cessation of work as April 28. Their plan would leave only this week and the first half of next week to dispose of an almost incredible mass of work. The sentiment of the observers is that the program simply cannot be carried out for there are numerous issues pending that will consume most of the present week without considering the more than 150 bills on the house and senate calendars. But the leaders say they are going to make the effort in order that final adjournment may come not later than May 7. From April 28 to May 7, therefore, would be given over to the clerks to catch up with the records. Special rules already are being drawn to save time. One would limit all speeches to 10 minutes. Another would provide for a steering committee to advance special bills. Still another would provide for morning, afternoon and night sessions. Meantime an adjournment resolution is being drawn setting the last week in April for recess and the first week in May for sine die quitting. Should it happen that the assembly be able to carry out its program, it would break all records of accomplishment, for never before has a legislature been able to finish such an amount of work as is facing this assembly in the short period which the present plans contemplate.

Plan State-Wide Prohibition.

An organization, which will reach into every township and every precinct of the state is being constructed by Ohio dry leaders under the direction of Supt. Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon League for the purpose of conducting a campaign for state-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic. That their state-wide amendment to the state constitution was defeated by 100,000 votes at last November's election, drys assert, was due to their unpreparedness. This year, they assert, their forces will not only have the advantage of being aggressively on the offensive, but having planned their new attack immediately after last year's defeat, they propose to be prepared for the campaign with a carefully organized and equipped army of workers. Beginning with a state central committee of dry federations, consisting of the chairman and one chosen representative of each county's dry federation, the state organization is placed under the control of a state executive or campaign committee of five members, which acts jointly with the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League.

Plan to Have Bill Changed.

Fearing that the Sprague bill to regulate nurses, as amended by the senate, will put their institutions out of business if passed in its present form, superintendents of small hospitals throughout the state met in Columbus recently to plan to have the measure changed. The senate radically amended the bill so as to lodge entire charge of the registration of nurses in Ohio with a committee of five, to be selected by the Ohio State Nurses' association, which does not recognize graduates of training schools connected with hospitals of less than 50 beds. In its original form the bill placed the registration in the state medical board. An effort will be made to restore this provision of the measure. Hospital experts make the statement that unless the bill is so changed that graduates from 90 per cent of the hospitals will be excluded, which would either seriously cripple or force the closing of many small hospitals.

"LIFE, LIBERTY AND PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS"

A Western Canada Farmer Writes as to Conditions.

A. G. Hansen is a farmer living near Clavet, Sask., and as an old resident of Minnesota, takes strong exception to some of the articles appearing in American papers disparaging the true conditions in Western Canada. The "Cottonwood Current" of Cottonwood, Minn., an important weekly paper in the southwestern part of the state, recently published a letter from Mr. Hansen, which is interesting reading. In his letter Mr. Hansen makes a splendid case for Western Canada against those who seek to deter farmers in the States from settling in Canada. He says:

"The district in which we live is a fair comparison to any other district in the country, made up mostly of settlers from the States. The majority here consists of Americans from Minnesota, Iowa and the Dakotas, with a few Canadians and an odd Englishman. We have been here eleven years, ever since this part of the country was settled, and the majority have done well. If they have not, it is certainly not the fault of the country.

"There has not been a crop failure in this district since settled. This year was the poorest, caused by lack of rain, although a fair estimate of wheat is about twelve bushels per acre, average, and oats about ten. Some farmers got as much as twenty-five bushels of wheat per acre, and we all got good prices.

"The laws of Canada are nearly the same as those of Minnesota, and we enjoy the same privileges.

"So far as the European war is concerned, we suffer to a certain extent as all the world does. Canada is giving a helping hand to her Mother Country, and we American-Canadians firmly believe it is Canada's duty to do so. I have not heard one American-Canadian who has expressed a different opinion. Canada is not compelled to send her soldiers. The service rendered is all voluntary service.

"The accusation that old settlers are considered undesirable citizens and are forced out of business, even the danger of being 'mobbed at their own ...

A BROKEN TRINITY

If your grandmother, God bless her was like the one we used to know, she was sure that there were three agencies that were putting the toboggan under the morals of the American youth. The three destroyers were pool tables, cigarettes and rum. And there was not much of a choice among the three, either. The theory was that some day the innocent boy looked a pool table in the face for the first time, looked, faltered and fell. Pool put the fallen angel in a state of iniquity that made him an easy victim for the cigarette that always was to be found hidden under the "devil's tables." The cigarette continued the moral disintegration started by pool, and rum put on the finishing touches.

There used to be a mournful poem that told the story. It was entitled "From the Pool Table to the Gutter." That poem would make a preacher of the old school advocate bonfires in which pool tables formed the piece de resistance.

But somehow or other the pool table has managed to escape from "the trinity of hell" in which it was once a constituent element. It is accounted respectable in many a circle now. Even preachers nowadays dally with the varicolored balls and the elusive pockets. The pool table is no longer allied to the gutter. But the reformers are still after the cigarette. Just a few weeks ago the legislature of Ohio gave the coffin nail a chase. Almost caught it, too. True, the question was considered from an academic point of view. Teachers were to be forbidden to smoke cigarettes. The proposed law made no provision for any places of sanctuary. Let a teacher smoke a cigarette and that was the end of him. Said instructor might chew like a grasshopper, but that was all right. He could smoke a pipe and nothing said, but if he coupled up a paper wrapper and tobaccy it was all day.

The Ohio bill just barely failed. Next year it may go through.

If such a law ever does pass you can be sure that the cigarette's old friend, the pool table, will be standing on the sidelines smiling derisively.

A BURDENED PEOPLE

According to a count made in the library of congress recently our federal and state legislatures passed 62,014 statutes during the five years from 1909 to 1913 inclusive. Even greater than this multiplicity of laws was the vast mass of decisions of court of last resort, federal and state, which during the same five years reached the enormous total of 65,379 and now fill 630 volumes.

And yet ignorance of the law—in a thousand volumes—does not excuse. In our day of statute making by the rapid-fire process, Thomas Jefferson would have found greater reason than ever for declaring that the country is governed best that is governed least, and for opposing a multiplicity of laws. Not the least discouraging feature of it all is that our statesmen of the "ultra-progressive" variety have countless new laws still up their sleeves, not a few of them revolutionary invasions of the citizens' rights.

If our laws are legion now, what is to be expected when, in times to come, women are sent to legislative bodies by their balloting sisters and enthusiastically apply themselves to the fascinating business of piling up the statutes. Their efforts to make man over and thrust into him a thousand virtues by means of the policeman's club, seem to be ominously foreshadowed by Mrs. Pankhurst's confession that women want the ballot in order to "make men chaste." It may be confidently expected that women, more than men, will become addicted to the habit of making new laws aimed at every evil or inconsistency in sight, thus adding enormously to the great mass of statutes which without previous discussion and criticism of the proper kind—have been enacted in haste, only to be repealed or forgotten as dead letters.

IN LINCOLN'S TIME AND NOW

During one of the darkest and most difficult periods of the civil war a volunteer committee called at the White House to express its dissatisfaction with various actions and various omissions of the administration.

To the complaints of this committee President Lincoln replied:

"Gentlemen, suppose all the property you were worth was in gold and you had put it in the hands of Blondin to carry across the Niagara river on a rope. Would you shake the cable or keep shouting to him, "Blondin, stand up a little straighter—Blondin, stoop a little more—go a little faster—lean a little more to the north—lean a little more to the south?" No; you would hold your breath as well as your tongue, and keep your hands off until he was safe over. The government is carrying an enormous weight. Untold treasures are in their hands; they are doing the best they can. Don't badger them. Keep silence, and we will get you safe across."

What Lincoln said then applies with equal force to the present situation. "The government is carrying an enormous weight"—the heaviest weight that any president or any administration has carried since the civil war.

The issue of peace or war, so far as the United States is concerned may depend upon the loyalty and patriotism with which the American people sustain their president and their government. "Don't badger them!"

It was 50 years ago that Abraham Lincoln died, but the lips that are now dust still carry a message of supreme wisdom to the American people. Let them heed it. Let them abide by his counsel.

PUT IT IN THE PAPER

An Indian man went into a newspaper office the other day and told of an escapade in which he had lately figured. It reflected no credit upon him; in fact, it was in the nature of a scandal, but he wanted it printed.

The fellow said that where reports were circulated, and he knew that the report would be circulated, they were not nearly as accurate as where they were printed in the paper. People who pass gossip from lip to lip are not nearly so accurate as the newspaper. So, to prevent great exaggeration of the affair, he desired the facts printed in the paper and given to the world, because the world would be sure to get hold of the matter anyway, and exaggerate it.

And the fellow was correct. Less harm is done parties through the publication of "reports" in newspapers than by having them peddled about the streets by irresponsible parties who do not know the facts. It would be less injurious to a business concern to have the full financial condition of its business printed at once, where there are "rumors" of insolvency, than to try to cover up the facts and thus give underground circulation to statements that are not true.

ORDINANCE NO. 1021

An ordinance determining to proceed with the improvement of Lusard Street from the westerly side of South St. Clair Street in a westerly direction to Liberty Street [illegible]

[illegible]

Attest: FRANK L. KELLY, Clerk.
Approved April 20, 1915.
F. D. MALIN, Mayor.

ORDINANCE NO. 1023

An ordinance to provide for the issuance of bonds in the sum of Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars ($35,000.00) for the purpose of remodeling, improving and making additions to the municipal electric light plant by making certain changes in equipment, including the purchase and installation of new boilers, engines, condensers and generators, the extension of over head lines, the laying of conduits, the purchase of transformers and meters, and of any and all other appliances and appurtenances thereof and thereto and the furnishing of labor therefor and for supplying light to the corporation and to the inhabitants thereof.

Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, two-thirds of the members elected thereto concurring.

Section 1. That it is deemed necessary to issue and to sell bonds of the City of Painesville in the sum of Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars ($35,000.00) for the purpose of remodeling, improving and making additions to the municipal electric light plant by making certain changes in equipment, including the purchase and installation of new boilers, engines, condensers and generators, the extension of over head lines, the laying of conduits, the purchase of transformers and meters, and of any and all other appliances and appurtenances thereof and thereto and the furnishing of labor therefor and for supplying light to the corporation and to the inhabitants thereof.

Section 2. That under the authority of Section 3939 of the General Code of the State of Ohio authorizing the issue of bonds by municipal corporations bonds of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio be issued in the sum of Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars ($35,000.00) for the purposes as aforesaid.

Section 3. That said bonds shall be designated Electric Light Bonds, shall be of the denomination of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) each, shall be numbered One Thousand Three Hundred Thirty (1330) to One Thousand Three Hundred Ninety-Nine (1399), both inclusive, shall be dated April 1st, 1915, and shall mature as follows:

Nos. 1330 to 1339, both inclusive on April 1st, 1928;
Nos. 1340 to 1349, both inclusive on April 1st, 1929;
Nos. 1350 to 1359, both inclusive on April 1st, 1930;
Nos. 1360 to 1369, both inclusive on April 1st, 1931;
Nos. 1370 to 1379, both inclusive on April 1st, 1932;
Nos. 1380 to 1389, both inclusive on April 1st, 1933;
Nos. 1390 to 1399, both inclusive on April 1st, 1934.

Said bonds shall be payable at the office of the City Treasurer in the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, and shall bear interest at the rate of Five per cent (5) per annum payable semi annually at the same place evidenced by coupons attached thereto.

Section 4. That said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they were issued and a citation of the law and the ordinance by which they were authorized. They shall be prepared, issued and delivered under the direction of the Finance Committee of the Council and the City Auditor. They shall be signed by the Mayor of said City and by the City Auditor and shall be sealed with the corporate seal of said City. The interest coupons attached to said bonds shall be executed by the City Auditor with his signature thereto or he shall have his signature printed or lithographed thereon. Said bonds shall be recorded in the office of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund in the name of the purchaser and shall bear interest as aforesaid.

Section 5. That the proceeds from the sale of said bonds, except the premiums and the accrued interest thereon shall be placed in the city treasury to the credit of Electric Light Plant and Service Fund Extraordinary, 7 g to 7 1 and shall be disbursed upon proper vouchers to pay for improvements heretofore named and for no other purpose and the premiums and accrued interest received from such sale shall be transferred to the Trustees of the Sinking Fund to be applied by them in the manner provided by law.

Section 6. That the faith and the credit of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, are hereby pledged for the payment of both the principal and the interest thereof at maturity and for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to pay the interest on the foregoing issue of bonds in the sum of Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars ($35,000.00) promptly when and as the same falls due and also to create and maintain a sinking fund sufficient to discharge the said bonds at maturity, there shall be and there hereby is appropriated and set aside annually from the income of the Electric Light Plant of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, after deducting the costs of all operating expenses, a sufficient sum to-wit: the sum of Eight Hundred Seventy-Five Dollars ($875.00) for the year 1915, Seventeen Hundred Fifty Dollars ($1750) for each of the years 1916 to 1928, both inclusive, Fifteen Hundred Dollars ($1500.00) for the year 1929, Twelve Hundred Fifty Dollars ($1250.00) for the year 1930, One Thousand Dollars ($1000.00) for the year 1931, Seven Hundred Fifty Dollars ($750.00) for the year 1932, Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) for the year 1933, and Two Hundred Fifty Dollars ($250.00) for the year 1934 for interest, and a sufficient sum annually, to-wit: the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty Dollars ($1,750.00) for each of the years 1916 to 1934, both inclusive, for principal, to be used to retire said bonds at maturity, that all funds so set aside for the payment of the interest and the principal on said bonds shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund, which together with all the interest collected on the same shall be irrevocably pledged to the payment of interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due.

Section 7. That if during any year before the maturity of said bonds the income of the Electric Light Plant of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, after deducting the cost of all operating expenses, is not sufficient to set aside the sum specified in section six of this ordinance, then there shall be levied on all of the taxable property of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, in addition to all other taxes, a tax sufficient to produce an amount equal to the difference between the income of the Electric Light Plant of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, after deducting the cost of all operating expenses, and the amount specified in section six of this ordinance to be set aside for that year.

The said taxes shall be ordered certified, levied and extended upon the tax duplicate, and collected by the same officers, in the same manner and at the same time, that the taxes for general purposes in said year are certified, extended and collected; that all funds derived from said tax levies hereby required shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund, which together with all interest collected on the same, shall be irrevocably pledged to the payment of interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due in accordance with the terms of Section 11 of Article 12 of the Constitution of Ohio.

Section 8. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and legal publication. Passed April 19, 1915.

E. D. MAYHEW, President of the Council.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson at once began housekeeping in their prettily furnished home on Mentor Ave.

The body of Mr. Will Traver, who died suddenly last week while about his usual business affairs, was brought back to Kirtland Saturday for burial. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Eldridge of Willoughby, were held at the Traver homestead Sunday at one o'clock and the Willoughby lodge of Masons took charge of the burial which was made in the cemetery at Pecks Corners. A profusion of flowers testified to the love and esteem of relatives, brother masons and a host of friends. Mr. Traver's home was in Chicago where he leaves a wife and children, his aged father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. David Traver, four sisters and one brother to mourn the loss of a dear companion.

Told That There Was No Cure For Him

"After suffering for over twenty years with indigestion and having some of the best doctors here tell me there was no cure for me, I think it only right to tell you for the sake of other sufferers as well as your own satisfaction that a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Tablets not only relieved me but cured me within two months although I am a man of 65 years," writes Jul. Grobien, Houston, Texas. Obtainable everywhere.

CHAPTER I.

The Message From the Deep.

The two old men sat in the library under the stereopticon blue envelope of the electric lamp, with their backs towards the fireplace. Either is another had let a single controlled breath by which the dark December wind blew whistled about the corners of the house.

There was something unbelievable in the fact that the evening would have been exactly the same if the Great Spirit with a Brazilian name had the chill. They found themselves wondering if by one chance he would fall in usage in at all. They hear for retiring was two o'clock but he, dry eye

Up to half-past nine they discussed the Great Spirit, the Great Spirit, the Great Spirit, the Great Spirit, the house, the housekeeper, down to the rotten-egg but eloquent decapitor of pert that stood between them, first on the arm of the chair, then the other. They were very old men; they could satisfy each other in the most comfortable way, with the most comfortable. During these periods of obstruction, that they remarks were addressed to the decanter and that the once decanter had answered to an in return But, for all that, their eyes seldom left the Great Spirit, who sometimes had two three times full pint.

Ten o'clock, the hour when they usually retired, found them in the same attitude and the same quantities of consumption and vitalization; from the man where Mr. Dee had moved more than twice in those old, old days when comfortable chairs had been unknown luxuries, remarkable in the comfortable events. From unknown James Dee was speaking his art.

Twenty years ago these two old men had been Mr. James Dee and Mr. Dee the Greatest Index of Calcutta, a derelict of the Indian Civil Service, and a sufferer and a sufferer of a title that knows no name. They found Mr. Dee when he drops was in the gutter and the stipper of defeat in his hands. Without memory, he had transformed themselves, and so had, they thought, the Great Spirit, who had brought them had retired to Cross and the Dark when James Brooks Dee would landing in his days when he was treated by the thought that it would be a lie to have to Mr. Dee, set his was out to kind to encourage a man in the fall.

Weeks after the course in Calcutta, Dee was admitted and of the only, John Desmond, learned from the Sun of the Dee himself that he was not such as this; but rich in the Dee's mind was the Great Spirit, was one of deep mystery because

What Dee told then of his life thought of the Great Spirit of opposition to the Dee of such. He had married a beautiful foreigner—an actress, he gathered—of excellent family, and had left her in Paris, where he had left her, to the house in lower Fifth was one where his father and grandfather had lived before him. Some time which two of the employees after treaty years, he had set to could not remember of a free envelope.

Dee had left his home in Brooks to Calcutta, and had settled in Paris, but, however, that there had come a time when the master, Desmond, was "hardness; Latin; a man, who played upon the lyre to suit the singer, who play in his dulcinea revings lived in the Dee's mind, and he, the Great Spirit, was a man who, he recalled the baby Dee, even dangling his, he together with blood-curdling glee over the manner in which he had cost and the wonder of his had broken his heart and crushed the pride; he, recling in the Dee's mind, was a man who was in charge of the way to live that the spirit glad and cause to triumph. This week the three men who lifted him from hell were able to glean from Dee the story of the Great Spirit, that they were filled with joy. Dee was in a cultured weakness, he told them more, and without cause, a dear silent, steadfast bitterness succeeded the violent raving. He became a very lamer with them quiet, dagged, failed, and, they thought, a little mad. Dee they did, also, let he. Face to face, and they followed, into the dark places of the world they plunged, for gold meant little to him, death even more. They no longer knew days of grime time—he charged he would with them; he was a man, he was a man, he was a man. Life was a whirlwind in the life that Middle and they knew that was a harmless afternoon.

Twice John Desmond, younger than Desmond, of Joseph Biggs, Esquire, of Brooks Street, Dee's agent, or regardless, he was, was a South African jungle when a lion got fought for her young, and again by upper Nile, when single-handed he held off a horde of Mahdis for two days, and, he was, was a man, he was, Dee, there and there, was in the Himalayas, came down the mountain and found Dee, and Dee and Dee between them and the Indian of the jungle, to that Dee from

PARCEL POST BUSINESS SHOWS BIG INCREASE OVER THAT OF LAST APRIL

One of the best ways of judging the prosperity of a city is by the income of the postoffice. People may cry "hard times" and "dead town" but if the postal business continues to increase from year to year it is a good safe bet that the city or town is far from being in the obituary column.

Painesville has made some remarkable gains in postal receipts during the past year but about the most surprising increase has been in the parcel post department. The government requires all postmasters to keep an accurate record of all parcels received and sent out from April 1 to 15 of each year. Here are some interesting figures from Postmaster S. D. Carrol's report:

Total number of packages received from other offices for delivery at Painesville, April 1 to 15, 2,790, during same period last year, 2,480.

Parcels mailed at Painesville for local delivery, 58; last year 34.

Parcels mailed at the Painesville office, April 1 to 15, 9,767; for the same dates in 1914, 9,282.

Total postage on packages mailed, $829.83. Postage same days last year, $738.95.

Weight of parcels mailed, 15,112 pounds, weight last year, 11,128 pounds.

To this year's report should be added 2,648 doz. catalogues, mailed under permit, with postage of $105.92

Painesville's record is peculiar in another way, as it is the only city in the country where the number of outgoing packages exceeds the incoming by such a large propotrion.

The Storrs & Harrison Co. are the largest patrons of the parcel post at this office. The Educational Supply Company is a close second. Other big patrons are Kallay Brothers, nurserymen, The Ohio Textile Co., and the Painesville Metallic Binding Co.

Real Chautauquas

There is a movement on foot to bring the Chautauquas up to a point where they will more completely embrace the great idea conceived by the late Rev. Dr. Vincent, the founder of the plan. Dr. Vincent's idea was educational. The modern Chautauques are descending toward the level of mere vaudeville shows. The educational feature is neglected and the entertainment or "show" feature magnified. If this statement is doubted or challenged its truth can be proven by reference to the advertisement or announcements of almost any of the Chautauques held in this state in the past five or ten years. The fault lies, not with the local managements, but wholly with the lyceum and lecture bureaus which furnish the programs. The patrons of the Chautauques would welcome a return to the original idea. The Chautauques should be the peoples' universities. The patrons should be given the opportunity of hearing what the great thinkers and leaders have to say upon the live subjects under discussion by the American people. The forum should be thrown open to debate, for one thing. By discussion we arrive at the truth. There is plenty of "talent" to be had to present both sides of any question. And there surely is interest enough in the many problems of the day to insure even greater crowds at the gate. Imagine the drawing power of joint debates upon such subjects as "Unionism vs the Open Shop," "Should Women Vote?" "Socialism vs Democracy," "Prohibition vs Regulation," "Armament or Peace Treaties", "High Tariff vs Low Tariff," and so on down the great list, with real, recognized national or state or even local authorities to present each side fairly. A men or woman who attended a Chautauqua where such subjects were discussed would go home at the end of the week with the feeling that the time had been well spent. Of course there would have to be entertainment features and plenty of good music but the educational aspect of the program should not be made secondary to mere entertainment.

Reformers and Skates

The roller skate is "coming back." It never really went out, as far as the children are concerned. Now however young ladies have taken it up—not in skating rinks, by the way, but in the open air,—for exercise and fun on the sidewalks and smooth pavements of the city streets. On any fine evening on the best and most exclusive streets in the residence districts of Chicago, groups and couples of girls from 18 to 22 may be seen gliding along over the smooth surface of the walks. The fad has struck many of the smaller places in different parts of the country and already the village kill-joys are protesting and calling for laws to prohibit skating on the sidewalks. It was ever thus. No sooner does youth find a new way of amusing itself—no matter how innocent—than some long-faced, vinegar-blooded reformer is out with a protest and a demand that the young people be presented with the alternative of abandoning their fun or becoming criminals by the in-

When to Begin

At every season of the year we see articles in the poultry journals stating that that is the particular season that is best to start raising poultry. It does not seem possible that all these seasons can be the best season, but in one way it is true. The best season to start it is just as soon as possible after one makes up his mind to start. In the spring, if one decides to embark in the poultry business, that is the best time for him to start. He can buy eggs, and it would be foolish for him to wait until fall or the following winter to start. If he decides to start in the summer time that is the best time, as he can buy baby chicks or breeding stock at a considerable less price than if he waits until fall or winter. And so on through the seasons, the best time to start is when you are ready to start. Each season has its advantages. Start as soon as possible

Famous Showman Dies

Joseph Berris, famous show man and animal trainer, passed away at his home in Geneva Friday night. Death was caused from complications resulting from an injury which he received when a horse bit him and threw him heavily to the ground last summer.

Berris was born and raised in Spain and in the palmy days of the Walter L. Main circus was known from one end of this country to the other as the man who drove twenty horses.

Sure It's So. Editors Don't Lie

Down at Newark, where Mrs. Harrison Rundal lives, a man has a rooster, that lays eggs, and he seems to think that is so wonderful that he writes about it to a newspaper. But the fact is, it is not so wonderful at all, and not deserving of such wide publicity. Frank Roberts, a prominent farmer living near this place has a gander that gives milk and a tom cat that gave birth to a litter of pigs.—Liberty Center Press.

Shot in Thigh

Alexander Beaton of Perry was shot in the right thigh Saturday evening and so badly injured that he was removed to the hospital. It is alleged that the bullet was fired by his wife who took this means to protect herself from Beaton's assaults.

The couple have had trouble in the past and Mrs. Beaton started divorce action some time ago but later withdrew the papers.

Peaches Not Killed

The Home Garden

"The value of the home garden is not as fully appreciated or as highly developed as it might easily be," says Prof L. M. Montgomery of the College of Agriculture at Columbus. He says further that "the real worth of the garden depends upon the variety and constancy of its products. The average farm garden produces a great quantity of certain vegetables for short periods, but does not produce a succession of crops thoughout the season.

"We should plan our garden so that the family may be supplied with peas over a period of 2 months instead of the 2 weeks or less which is the more common period. Lettuce, beets, carrots and many other crops should be obtainable in the most tender and edible form throughout the season instead of for short periods in early spring.

"There are two methods of securing the desired succession of crops, first by selecting varieties, which planted at the same time, will mature their products at different dates. Second, by making successive plantings of one or two varieties of the same kind of crop throughout the early spring and summer or in some cases until early fall.

"Many vegetable crops mature very quickly and in order that the ground may be occupied and the weeds more easily controlled the space should again be planted to some other short season crop. For example, early lettuce and radishes may be followed by beets, carrots, beans, late cabbage, or celery; and early beets or carrots may be followed by lettuce, beans, winter radish or spinach.

"By consistent planning the garden may be made the most productive and valuable half acre on any farm."

Will Meet at Coast

Alumni, ex-students and undergraduates of the Ohio State University, who attend the Panama-Pacific Exposition need not feel homesick if they visit the coast during the Ohio State reunion which is now being planned. An invitation to attend this gathering has just been received at the offices of the Ohio State University Association from William E. Whitacre, '01, president of the Central and Northern California Association. Rooms have been secured in the Ohio building for the convention.

Correct Diagnosis

A certain man was heard to remark that he takes the HUB just to help the editor out. We certainly appreciate his philanthropy. We suppose this same benefactor buys meat to help the butchers out, postage stamps to help the government out, painkillers to help the druggists out, etc., etc., and that some day he'll die just to help the undertaker out. Then we'll print a lengthy obituary just to keep him out of where they don't shovel snow.—Attica Hub.

Have You Any?

If you have any articles about your premises you want to dispose of put a want ad in The Herald. Good second-hand furniture, farming tools, and other equipment are always salable and it costs but a cent a word to let 2000 people know what you have to offer. Every week someone reports a ready sale of some article advertised in our Classified department, the use of which is becoming more and more general.

Bad Freight Wreck Near Willoughby

A west bound fast freight train and an east bound way freight on the New York Central lines struck head-on at Willoughby at 7:40 Monday morning. None was injured. Both engines were damaged and six cars on the fast freight were derailed. None of the cars in the eastbound train left the rails.

According to a report received here the wreck was caused by failure to flag the westbound train. The way freight had stopped and a flagman was sent ahead on an engine to flag the oncoming fast freight, in order that the way freight might cross to a siding to unload. The switches were thrown but the westbound train was not stopped, it is claimed.

SYNOPSIS.

—2—

In the New York home of James Brood Dawes and Riggs, his two old pensioners and comrades, await the coming of Brood's son Frederic to learn the contents of a wireless from Brood. But Frederic, after reading, throws it into the fire and leaves the room without a word. Frederic tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancee, that the message announces his father's marriage and orders the house prepared for an immediate homecoming.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

"It proves that your father has made no mistake in selecting his friends, my dear. My dear husband used to say that he would cheerfully die for James Brood and he knew that James Brood would have died for him just as readily. There is something in friendships of that sort that we can't understand. We have never been able to test our friends, much less ourselves. We—"

"I would die for you, Mrs. Desmond," cried Frederic, a deep flush overspreading his face. "For you and Lydia."

"You come by that naturally," she said, laying her hand upon his arm. "Blood will tell. Thank you, Frederic." She smiled. "I am sure it will not be necessary for you to die for me, however. As for Lydia, you must live, not die for her."

"I'll do both," he cried, impulsively. "Forgive me."

"There is nothing to forgive," she said simply. "And now, one word more, Frederic. You must accept this new condition of affairs in the right spirit. Your father has married again after all these years. It is not likely that he has done so without deliberation. Therefore, it is reasonable to assume that he is bringing home with him a wife of whom he at least is proud, and that should weigh considerably in your summing up of the situation. She will be beautiful, accomplished, refined—and good, Frederic. Of that you may be sure. Let me implore you to withhold judgment until another and later day."

"I do not object to the situation, Mrs. Desmond," said he, the angry light returning to his eyes, "so much as I resent the wording of that telegram. It is always just that way. He loses no chance to humiliate me. He—"

"Hush! You are losing your temper again."

"Well, who wouldn't? And here's another thing—the very worst of all ..."

"I wouldn't try to set at it, my dear," she said. "Wait and see. Come, you must have your coffee. I am glad you came down early. The old gentlemen are at breakfast now. Come in."

He followed her dejectedly, a perceptible droop to his shoulders.

Mr. Dawes and Mr. Riggs were seated at the table. Lydia, a trifle pale and distrait, was pouring out their third cup of coffee. The old men showed no sign of their midnight experience. They were very wide-awake, clear-eyed and alert, as old men will be who do not count the years of life left in the span appointed for them.

"Good morning, Freddy," said they, almost in one voice. As he passed behind their chairs on his way to Lydia's side, he slapped each of them cordially on the back. They seemed to swell with relief and gratitude. He was not in the habit of slapping them on the back.

"Good morning, gentlemen," said he. Then he lifted Lydia's slim fingers to his lips. "Good morning, dear." She squeezed his fingers tightly and smiled. A look of relief leaped into her eyes; she drew a long breath.

She poured his coffee for him every morning. Her hand shook a little as she lifted the tiny cream pitcher. "I didn't sleep very well," she explained in a low voice. His hand rested on her shoulder for a moment in a gentle caress.

"Poor old Jim!" sighed Mr. Dawes. "He'll probably have to ask us to vamose, too. I imagine she'll insist on making a spare bedroom out of our room, so's she can entertain all of her infernal relations. Jones, will you give me some more bacon and another egg?"

"And I thought it was nothing but a shipwreck," murmured Mr. Riggs plaintively.

Frederic hurried through breakfast. Lydia followed him into the library.

"Are you going out, dear?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes. I've got to do something. I can't sit still and think of what's going to happen. I'll be back for luncheon."

Half an hour later he was in the small bachelor apartment of two college friends a few blocks farther up town and he was doing the thing he did nearly every day of his life ...

... present them to the new Mrs. Brood as "the best old boys in all the world," and they were both saying, with spasmodic cackles of pleasure, that she "mustn't believe a word the young rascal said."

He was struck by the calm, serene manner in which she accepted their jocular contributions to the occasion. Her smile was friendly, her handclasp cordial, and yet there was an unmistakable air of tolerance, as of one who is accustomed to tribute. She merely smiled and thanked them in commonplace phrases. Her voice was low-pitched and marked by a huskiness that was peculiar in that it was musical, not throaty. Frederic, on first seeing her, had leaped to the conclusion that her English would be perfect. He was somewhat surprised to discover that she had but the faintest trace of an accent. He awoke suddenly, however, to the realization that he had been looking into his new stepmother's eyes for a long time and that she was returning his gaze with some intensity.

"And this?" she said, abruptly breaking in upon one of Danbury's reminiscences, effectually ending it, "this is Frederic?"

She came directly toward the young man, her small, gloved hand extended. Her eyes were looking into his with an intentness that disconcerted him. There was no smile on her lips. It was as if she regarded this meeting as a pronounced crisis.

Frederic mumbled something ... about being glad to see her, and felt his face burn under her steady gaze. His father came forward.

"Yes, this is Frederic, my dear," he said, without a trace of warmth in his voice. As she withdrew her hand from Frederic's clasp, James Brood extended his. "How are you, Frederic?"

"Quite well, sir."

They shook hands in the most perfunctory manner.

"I need not ask how you are, father," said the son, after an instant's hesitation. "You never looked better, sir."

"Thank you. I am well. Ah, Mrs. Desmond! It is good to be home again with you all. My dear, permit me to introduce Mrs. John Desmond. You have heard me speak of my old comrade and—"

"I have heard you speak of Mrs. Desmond a thousand times," said his wife. There may have been a shade of emphasis on the prefix, but it was so slight that no one remarked it save the widow of John Desmond, who had joined the group.

"Will you go to your room at once, Mrs. Brood?" asked Mrs. Desmond. The new mistress of the house had not offered to shake hands with her, as James Brood had done. She had moved closer to Frederic and was smiling in a rather shy, pleading way, in direct contrast to her manner of the moment before. The smile was for her stepson. She barely glanced at Mrs. Desmond.

"Thank you, no. I see a nice, big fire—and oh, I have been so cold!" She shivered very prettily.

NOT A PARTY GAIN

Republican Victory in Chicago Explained.

City Never Has Been Democratic, as the Term Is Understood—Figures of Other Elections Make This Fact Plain.

We must advise Republicans not to be misled by the false political pretenses in respect to the Chicago election. If it were true that Chicago is a Democratic city, the fact that it has elected a Republican mayor by a big plurality might be significant, but Chicago is not, and, since the organization of the Republican party, never has been, strictly speaking, a Democratic city.

Three times during the last fifty years Chicago has given pluralities to Democratic presidential candidates. Tilden carried it in 1876 by a narrow margin, as did Cleveland in 1888. The only time Chicago ever gave a Democratic presidential candidate an emphatic majority was in 1892, when Cleveland had a lead of 38,000 and carried the state. At the election of 1912 Roosevelt and Taft combined had 212,000, against Wilson's 120,600. In 1896 the Republican plurality was 56,000, in 1900, 7,000, in 1904, 110,000; in 1908, 82,000.

Error as to Chicago's political status arises from the fact that locally it has been governed most of the time for 36 years by a Harrison party operating under the Democratic name but having no other connection with the national organization. This party has been made up of Democrats, Republicans and Socialists, who have cooperated in favor of a loosely administered city government. Nobody but a Harrison has been able to make such a combination under so-called Democratic auspices. When, as was the case this year, Harrison lost the Democratic nomination, his personal party had no further interest in Democracy, and most of its members evidently voted the Republican ticket.

Comparing the straight Democratic vote, 162,155 (not counting women), with Wilson's vote of 120,000 in 1912 and Bryan's vote of 143,000 in 1908, it will be seen that nothing has collapsed in Chicago except Harrisonism.

FELT UNCLE WAS HORRID

Only Her Third Engagement in a Few Months and His Congratulations Hint at Fickleness.

A certain charming young thing of this town has an uncle of whom she has always been, and still is, very fond; but just at present she is convinced that he is as catty as any woman she's ever known.

She tells the story herself:

"Listen. You know I have always had an excessive affection for Uncle Dick, and have without exception told him everything—absolutely everything.

"Now, the fact that I have had so much trouble with—well, you know with whom—has never been a joke to me. Last year, when that affair with Tom was on, I wrote, of course, to Uncle Dick about it—Uncle was then in the West. Now, since he always liked Tom, he wrote me a beautiful letter, offering me all manner of felicitations and wishes for a bright and prosperous future. I treasured that letter from Uncle Dick.

"Now, it isn't necessary for me to refer to my disappointment in Tom—his behavior justified any action on my part. I know that people say I threw him over and all that sort of thing, but, honestly, there was only one thing to do, and of course I did it.

"Well, I suppose it did seem a little startling to Uncle Dick, when a little over two months after the writing of his first letter he received another from me telling him of my engagement to Henry. But uncle was terribly nice about it. He approved of my course in the matter, even though he did prefer Tom to anybody else. And I couldn't complain of the letter uncle sent me in reply to the second. It was just as nice as his first, although he did give a hint of surprise.

"It was afterward that Uncle Dick showed himself most objectionable. Two weeks ago, when I found that, after all was said and done, it was really Clarence that I loved, I got a third letter from Uncle Dick—the brute! After acknowledging the receipt of my announcement he went on to say:

"'Permit me, my dear, to congratulate you on your approaching marriage to——'

"Then he inserted one of those star signs (what do you call 'em—asterisks?) and added in a footnote: 'Here insert the name of the happy man!'"—New York Times.

Afternoon Toilette in "Midnight" Blue

Here is an afternoon ... which the graceful gown is made of "midnight" blue taffeta and is worn with a neckpiece of ostrich feathers and crepe. The hat of blue straw is trimmed with velvet ribbon and big, full-bloom garden roses and their deep green foliage. Every detail of this costume is up to date and tasteful—therefore, worth consideration.

The gown shows a skirt having single box plaits joined to a yoke, of easy adjustment to the figure. It is not as short as skirts for tailored gowns, but reaches to the instep. The plaited portion of the skirt is set on to the yoke with a piping of the silk, and the bottom of the skirt is finished with a ...

The bodice is draped, giving the effect of a sleeveless coatee. All edges and seams are finished with pipings, and there is a widely flaring collar with wings wired to hold its curving outlines. This, and the remarkably attractive sleeves, bestow much of its distinction upon this refined and beautiful design. In truth collars and cuffs ... this season.

The sleeves are long, with flaring cuffs extending over the hand. Their decoration with small buttons and embroidered arrowpoints (somewhat elaborated) could not be improved upon.

A separate collar and guimpe of fine batiste with narrow silk binding is in line with the season's vogue, but designed especially for the chic gown with which it appears.

The laced boots, with light cloth tops, and the smart millinery, proclaim a costume selected by an expert whose taste was reliable. All are ... in matters of fashion, but the finished toilette is, nevertheless, quiet and refined.

Varied Waist Lines.

There is a waist line to suit every type—the empire for the slight youthful figure, the natural waist line for the conservatives and straight ones for the stout figure.

ATE ONLY RAW EGGS; NOW FEELING FINE

S. D. Martin of Elkton, O., suffered with stomach troubles and difficulties in his digestive tract. He lost weight and his appetite was bad.

He took one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and was swiftly restored—with one dose. Seven months later he sent an order for more, saying:

"Since taking you remedy I have not been bothered any to speak of with my stomach. Before I had bad headaches and dizzy, weak spells, of which I am almost free. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking the one dose. It is not that I need the medicine now that I am sending. I am simply going to take it as a preventive. My wife induced a lady friend to try it. She had been eating only a raw egg or cracker or two, and often could not keep them down. This lady used your remedy and it has almost cured her."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.—Adv.

Forty Minutes Out.

"How far out do you live, old man?"

"Well, it's twenty minutes from my station to the city if the train is on time, and twenty minutes from my house to the station if I'm on time."

What Kind of Limb?

Uncle Sol threw aside the letter he was reading and uttered an exclamation of impatience.

"Doggone!" he cried. "Why can't people be more explicit?"

"What's the matter, pa?" asked Aunt Sue.

"... answered, "says father fell out of the old apple tree and broke a limb."

The Old Excuse.

"You ought to know better, my child, than to pitch into a tipsy man. Now you've fixed your husband and he's gone off."

"But I didn't know he was loaded."

OWNING A HOME

The popular interest in this country in owning a home is one of the characteristics of our national life. The idea has taken root as an essential feature of the spirit of enterprise and personal responsibility fostered by this country. In England this building of homes for the people is referred to as the American experiment. But it has gone beyond the experimental stage and has become a national impulse that must result in better conditions for the working men and a higher standard of citizenship. When a man is the owner of his own property anything going contrary to the laws of man—anything that makes disaster, touches him, and touches those who are dependent on him. The man who becomes a property owner through the accumulation of his earnings is more than likely to manifest a live concern for the administration of public affairs.

Naturally then, home owners become the best citizens because they have, in effect, a stockholding interest in what pertains to the general good. Furthermore we can agree with the writer who said: "A home of one's own is essential to complete development of the whole nature. It is the chief source of sound and abiding happiness. It is the surest defense against evil fortune, the goal of labors, the sanctuary of the affections, the gateway into and out of the world." There may be conditions affecting individual cases that are not favorable to owning a home, but as a general rule the proposition has all the advantage of economic wisdom. There is no better investment for the welfare of a family because it answers the inherent need for a permanent abiding place that shall enshrine the memory of all that pertains to the domestic affections. Whatever encourages owning a home encourages a better citizenship and all efforts to this end are worthy of every encouragement.

BUY A HOME

"The man who buys his goods of a mail order house and expects his neighbors at home to buy goods of him, or to buy labor of him, or to buy professional service of him is economically a leach. He is sucking industrial blood out of the town and giving none back. He sends his profits out of town, like a Chinaman, and has no more right to a standing in the community than a foreigner. We are all neighbors industriously in our home town, and the man who sends away for his goods is not one of us. He is another industrial system, and deserves no local man's support. The fact that this is economically wrong is recognized by the mail order houses themselves. They protect their customers as thieves by offering to keep people from knowing where the mail order goods come from. The mail order houses have no 'tags' on their goods. They say in their catalogues that none of their goods are marked and that no one knows where they were bought. If it is proper to hide the place of purchase of an article, it is wrong to buy the article at that place. Only the man who steals is ashamed to say where he got anything he has. There is such a thing as 'tainted' dry goods, 'tainted' groceries and 'tainted' furniture. All of such that are not bought at home, of men who befriended you, of men to whom you owe a living, are 'tainted,' because they come unfairly."—Atchison Globe

IS THIS PROSPERITY?

Cleveland is leading the world in building operations this spring. Permits for the first quarter of the year have been given out for the erection of nearly 700 homes, costing over $2,100,000. Permits for the erection of 102 apartment houses, costing over $1,200,000, were also given out.

Builders expect that close to $20,000,000 will be spent in 1915 for new buildings. As an illustration of how Cleveland money is pouring into its own internal development, one local brick firm had a maximum daily capacity a year ago of 190,000 brick. At the end of the year it had increased this to 230,000 daily. It is now producing 290,000 brick, and by June 1 this firm expects to increase its output to 400,000 daily.

Records kept on file at the building department, city hall, show that there is a gain of over $500,000 in permits issued over the first quarter of 1914.—Cleveland Leader.

MOST DIFFICULT HINDU FEAT

Dancing Girl Balances Eggs on Threads That Are Stretched From Rim of Wheel.

Of the many wonderful feats performed by Hindu jugglers, one of the most remarkable is the egg dance. Usually it is executed by a girl, fantastically dressed. She makes use of a willow wheel around which at equal distances are threads, and at the end of each thread there is a noose, held open by a bead.

This wheel the girl places on her head, while she carries a basket of eggs on her arm. When the music strikes up she begins to dance, and the wheel begins to spin around. She then takes an egg from the basket, places it in one of the thread nooses, and throws it from her with sufficient force to draw the knot tight. The spinning of the wheel keeps the thread stretched, with the egg at the end of it.

She then takes another egg from the basket, places it in another noose, and repeats this until there is an egg in every noose. Her fantastic costume, her perfect motion and all the eggs swinging on stretched threads at once present a curious sight.

It requires much art to execute the dance for one false step would cause the eggs to be dashed together and the dancer to be disgraced.

After dancing for some time with all the eggs swinging around her head she takes them out of the noose one by one, all the time keeping the wheel balanced and in motion, and again places them in the basket on her arm.

After the performance the spectators are allowed to examine the eggs to see that they are real.—Ideas.

NOT A MATTER OF INTELLECT

Though Not Generally Understood, "Culture" Really Appertains to the Spirit.

We talk much of culture and get it mixed up with learning and scholarship. It may be these things, but never unless it has another quality, and that is gentility. Culture is a matter of the spirit, rather than the intellect. It is not as John Galsworthy says, scientific learning, social method, and iron discipline, nor the power of appreciating and producing works of art. Culture belongs to the soul; it feels more than it thinks. Think of a mean, crabbed, short-spoken man being cultured! He is the very opposite of it. We have seen tall scholars who could read Greek, solve the calculus and discuss Spinoza, who were not as much cultured as a rabbit.

It is the bad idea of what culture is that has done lots of harm to the world. Boys are taught that if they are shrewd and know a lot, they are cultured. Parents are apt to be proud of their smart boys, while the gentle and kindly boys are passed by. There is more hope for the latter in a life of strife than for the former, and the world is better off for their having lived.—Ohio State Journal.

The Arms of Glasgow.

The explanation of the coat of arms of Glasgow is curious. On it an oak tree with a bell hanging on one of its branches, a bird at the top of the tree, and a salmon, with a ring in its mouth, at the base. St. Kentigern, in the seventh century, took up his abode on the site of the present city of Glasgow. Upon an oak in the clearing he hung a bell to summon the savages to worship, hence the oak and bell. A queen, having formed an attachment to a soldier, gave him a precious ring, which the king had given her. The king, aware of the fact, stole upon the soldier in sleep, abstracted the ring, threw it into the Clyde, and then asked the queen for it. The queen, in alarm, applied to St. Kentigern, who went to the Clyde, caught a salmon with the ring in its mouth, handed it to the queen, and was thus the means of restoring peace to the royal couple.

Splendid for Rheumatism

"I think Chamberlain's Liniment is just splendid for rheumatism," writes Mrs. Dunburgh, Eldridge, N. Y. "It has been used by myself and other members of my family time and time again during the past six years and has always given the best of satisfaction." The quick relief from pain which Chamberlain's Liniment affords is alone worth many times the cost. Obtainable everywhere.

Tree Yields a Fortune.

Brazil boasts of a giant tree that produces a revenue of over two thousand dollars a year. It is a rubber tree—probably the largest in the world. For one hundred and twenty days every year it produces 12 pounds of rubber daily. The trunk of the tree is over 27 feet in circumference.—The American Boy.

ORDINANCE NO. 1022

An ordinance to issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments levied for street improvement to be known as Lusard Street Paving Bonds in the sum of Eight Thousand Dollars ($8,000.00) for the purpose of improving Lusard Street from the westerly side of South St. Clair Street in a westerly direction to Liberty Street by grading, draining, setting curbs, constructing all necessary sewer and water house-service pipes to the curb line, and paving with brick on concrete foundation, with asphalt or any other material not specified, to levy special assessments to pay such assessment portion of each cost of improving Lusard Street and to provide for any deficiency in such assessments by general tax levy.

Whereas, the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, heretofore by proper legislation has declared the necessity of improving Lusard Street from the westerly side of South St. Clair Street in a westerly direction to Liberty Street by grading, draining, setting curbs, constructing all necessary sewer and water house-service pipes to the curb line, and paving with brick on concrete foundation, with asphalt or any other material not specified, and has determined that portion of the expense to be borne by special assessments levied upon the property bounding and abutting on said proposed improvement.

Now, therefore, be it ordained by the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, three-fourths of the whole number elected thereto being present and concurring.

Section 1. That it is deemed necessary to issue and to sell bonds of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio in the sum of Eight Thousand Dollars ($8,000.00) as hereinafter set forth for the purpose of paying that portion of the cost and expense of the aforesaid improvement in anticipation of the collection of special assessments levied upon the property bounding and abutting on said improvement.

Section 2. That under authority of law bonds of the City of Painesville be issued in the sum of Eight Thousand Dollars ($8,000.00) to pay that portion of the cost and expense of the aforesaid improvement in anticipation of the collection of special assessments therefor.

Section 3. That said bonds shall be designated "Lusard Street Improvement Bonds," shall be of the denomination of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) each, shall be dated April 1st, 1915, shall be numbered consecutively from Fourteen Hundred (1400) to Fourteen Hundred Fifteen (1415), both inclusive, and shall mature as follows:

Nos. 1400 and 1401 on April 1st, 1918.
Nos. 1402 and 1403 on April 1st, 1919.
Nos. 1404 and 1405 on April 1st, 1920.
Nos. 1406 and 1407 on April 1st, 1921.
Nos. 1408 and 1409 on April 1st, 1922.
Nos. 1410 and 1411 on April 1st, 1923.
Nos. 1412 and 1413 on April 1st, 1924.
Nos. 1414 and 1415 on April 1st, 1925.

Said bonds shall be payable at the office of the City Treasurer in the City of Painesville, State of Ohio and shall bear interest at the rate of Five per cent (5) per annum payable semi-annually evidenced by coupons attached thereto at the same place.

Section 4. That said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they were issued and the citation of the law and the ordinance by which they were authorized. They shall be prepared, issued and delivered under the direction of the Finance Committee of the Council and the City Auditor. They shall be signed by the Mayor of said City and by the Auditor and shall be sealed by the corporate seal of said City. The interest coupons attached to said bonds shall be executed by the City Auditor with his signature thereto, or shall have his signature printed or lithographed thereon. Said bonds shall be recorded in the office of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund in the name of the purchaser and shall bear interest as aforesaid.

Section 5. That said bonds shall first be offered at par and accrued interest to the Trustees of the Sinking Fund [illegible]

SAYS TEUTONS HAVE BEEN PUSHED BACK

Paris Makes Claim, but Berlin Also Reports Success for German Army.

ALLIES ATTACK TURK FORTS BY LAND

Cut Their Way Through Barbed Wire Entanglements, Then Charge and Drive Enemy Out of First Line Entrenchments.

London, England.—The Germans have been pushed back at the northern end of the battle front north of Ypres after suffering heavy losses, says the official communique received from Paris. The temporary advantage gained by the Germans in their use of asphyxiating gases has been met and overcome by what Paris describes as a means of protection which gave the best of results. Counter balance claims from Berlin are the recapture of Hartmannsweiler Kopf in the Vosges with 11 French officers and 749 soldiers and progress by storming columns along the mountain crests west of Les Eparges in an effort to recapture this stronghold.

Admit German Claim.

Admission of the German claim as to Hartmannsweiler Kopf is made by Paris, the communique adding that the French still retain the positions they originally occupied about 100 yards from the summit.

Interest still centers about the great battle north of Ypres where the engagement has continued for six days with fighting of unprecedented fury and carnage unequalled since the beginning of the year. Reports of an official nature are confusing. Claims are met with denials and denials discounted by counter claims. A disputed point is the possession of Lizerne. Berlin denied the allied assertion that it had been recaptured, adding that the Germans also hold considerable ground west of the canal. Unofficial reports state that the Germans have been forced to recross the stream, but these are unconfirmed.

Allies Attack Turk Forts.

Tenedos, Turkey.—Attacks by land against the Turk forts of the Dardanelles, begun Sunday night by armies of the allies continued all Monday in full force. After five weeks of intermittent firing on the forts by one or another of the allied warships that in the middle of March were checked in their attempt to force passage of the straits, the new plan of attack was suddenly exposed.

Under cover of steady fire from the fleet great numbers of troops were landed on the Gallipoli peninsula, the long strip of land between the Dardanelles and the Gulf of Saros.

Perhaps 200,000 of Lord Kitchener's army is engaged. British troops from Egypt and French troops from France's African possessions have been gathered in this vicinity for a month. Transports have slipped quietly into the Aegean sea every day for the past six weeks, making ready for the attack.

First of the troops to land were British, who passed the winter in training on Salisbury plain. They formed under fire, cut their way through barbed wire entanglements, then charged and drove the defending Turks out of the first line of entrenchments.

German Sea Raider Interns.

Newport News, Va.—Commander Thierfelder of the German auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm informed Collector of Customs Hamilton that he wished to intern his vessel. Continued serious illness of more than 60 members of the crew was given as the reason for interment. The men are suffering from beri-beri.

The vessel within a few days will join her sister raider, the Prinz Eitel Friederich, at the Norfolk navy yard, there to remain until the cessation of hostilities in Europe.

Wife Misses Husband's Kisses.

Detroit, Mich.—Love without kisses did not satisfy Mrs. Mabel Seltzer, who wants to divorce her husband, Leonard Seltzer, member of the state board of pharmacy. One of her allegations is that her husband, while professing to love her, never kissed her when he came home. 15 HURT WHEN CAR HITS WORK TRAIN

Men and Women Are Hurled Into Aisle and Against Backs of Seats in Passenger Coach When Crash Comes.

East Liverpool, O.—Fifteen persons were injured in a head-on collision between a Youngstown & Ohio River railroad interurban car and a work train of three cars on a curve one mile south of Lisbon, north of here. Six of the injured were taken to a hospital here while others only slightly hurt returned to Lisbon.

The injured in the hospital here are Doris White, 48, East Liverpool, face severely cut; Robert Lowther, 30, East Liverpool, body bruises and face lacerated; H. G. Kountz, 40, Wellsville, head and face cut; Philip Antone, 32, Wellsville, scalp wound and face cut; Marshall B. Huey, 33, Trenton, N. J., right leg twisted and face bruised; W. E. Rosenberry, 50, near Lisbon, left side and face cut.

Among others injured are Mrs. R. P. Griger, Cleveland, ankle sprained and body bruised, taken to home of friends here; Express Messenger W. M. Payne, Youngstown, body bruised, taken to his home; Thomas Deven, 30, Leetonia, conductor of passenger car of work train, bruised, taken home; Motorman William Finch, Lisbon, on front end of work train, jumped when he saw collision was inevitable, and Herman Goodstein, Sharon, Pa.

Traveling on a single track the work train appeared ahead of the passenger car, which was loaded. The passenger is said to have been going 25 miles an hour. The motormen worked frantically to stop their cars, but were powerless.

Marshall B. Huey, one of the victims, said the passenger car stopped at Lisbon where the conductor seemed to get orders. Sitting three seats from the rear of the car he saw the approaching work train and realized that the collision was inevitable.

When the crash came men and women were hurled into the aisle and against the backs of seats in the passenger car. It was stated none of the injured would die.

The passenger car, traveling faster than the work train and being of steel construction, plowed into the train, practically demolishing it.

Responsibility for the accident has not been placed, but the opinion is it was due to a misunderstanding of orders. Officials of the company have not given out a statement.

LOSES HEART BALM SUIT

MAX KLEIST'S ACTION AGAINST WIFE'S PARENTS IS DISMISSED BY JUDGE.

New York City.—The $250,000 damage suit brought against Edward N. Breitung, capitalist of Marquette, Mich., and his wife, by Max Frederick Kleist, their son-in-law, was dismissed Monday by Federal Judge Hough. Kleist charged his parents-in-law with alienating his wife's affections.

In dismissing the suit after the evidence was all in, Judge Hough read a lengthy opinion in which he said the parents were in no way obliged to accept the conduct of a son-in-law.

The court ruled that Kleist had failed to prove any improper act on the part of the defendants in their treatment of their child.

John Bunny, 'Silent' Actor, Dies.

New York City.—John Bunny, 52, whose antics on the screen have made millions laugh, died at his Brooklyn home. He had been ill for three weeks. Overwork is said to have brought on the nervous breakdown which caused his death.

Bunny suffered a collapse less than a month ago. Complications of heart and kidney set in, but he rallied strongly and his friends were in hopes that he soon would be back before the camera. He suffered a relapse, however.

Ends Life Strange Way.

Stratford, Conn.—Arthur Hearn Cowl, the grandson of James A. Hearn, committed suicide in a most unusual manner. He had just given his sweetheart, Emily de Forest Wheeler, an engagement ring when he asked her to pull a string secretly attached to the trigger of a 38 caliber revolver hidden in his clothing. The bullet pierced his right temple and he died on the way to the hospital. The suicide took place in a most dramatic manner, while the couple were taking a walk about 11 p.m.

MISS CAROLIN BAILEY

Miss Carolin Bailey, an English actress who has been very successful in New York, is going to follow the example of many other stage women and abandon the footlights for the hospital. As soon as her present engagement is completed she will return to England and devote herself to Red Cross work.

FRANK MAKES ANOTHER MOVE TO SAVE HIS LIFE

His Attorneys File Petition With Governor and Prison Commission Asking That Death Sentence Be Commuted.

Atlanta, Ga.—Attorneys for Leo M. Frank have just filed a petition with Gov. Slaton and the Georgia prison commission asking that the sentence of death imposed upon Frank for murder of Mary Phagan be commuted to life imprisonment.

The petition, which was signed by Frank, was in the form of an affidavit sworn to by him before John B. Sutties, a notary public.

Frank sets out that he is absolutely innocent of the crime for which he was convicted, declares the evidence upon which he was convicted was of a questionable and unreliable character, asserts that his guilt has not been established beyond a reasonable doubt and announces that at the time of the hearing before the prison commission he will submit other evidence and facts to support his petition.

The attorney presented copies of the evidence at Frank's trial and requested the prison commission to make a personal inspection of the pencil factory where the Phagan girl was murdered before beginning an examination of the record.

Members of the commission stated that a hearing would not be given before May 3, and that it was not unlikely that the hearing might be deferred until the meeting beginning the first Monday in June.

According to the procedure in such cases the prison commission first acts upon applications for executive clemency and transmits its recommendations to the governor for final action.

ROYAL ARCANUM ELECTS

GRAND LODGE PICKS TOLEDO FOR THE 1916 MEETING AND THEN ADJOURNS.

Akron, O.—The Ohio grand council of the Royal Arcanum closed its annual meeting here with the election of officers as follows:

Supreme representative, W. H. Mills, Norwalk; alternate supreme representative, W. A. Strong, Cleveland; grand regent, C. M. Dillworth, Cleveland; grand vice regent, Nat Hyams, Cincinnati; grand orator, Judge E. J. West, Wilmington; grand secretary, Lucien Seymour, Cleveland; grand treasurer, J. E. Heisar, Hamilton; grand chaplain, M. D. Moccabee, Columbus; grand guide, C. L. Long, Wollston; grand warden, J. A. Kidwell, Newark; grand sentry, J. F. Clayton, Cincinnati; grand trustee, Thomas B. Atkinson, Toledo; grand committee on laws, N. A. Daily, Akron; A. H. Wicks, Clyde, and S. J. Hoerner, Dayton. The 1916 meeting will be held in Toledo.

Work of Art is Stolen.

Oberlin, O.—While Oberlin college coeds boarding at Baldwin cottage were at dinner art thieves gained access to the upper story of the dormitory and stole a valuable painting from the room of Miss Eleanor Patrick, senior in the arts and science department of the college. The painting, known as "Priscilla," was the property of the Baldwin cottage household. As Miss Patrick was a great admirer of the painting she was allowed to keep it in her room. The thieves climbed a water spout and entered through a window.

Shoots at Wife, Ends Life.

Kenton, O.—"I'm going to kill my wife and then myself. If you try to stop me, I'll kill you, too," said Alfred Oglesbee, 45, to his brother-in-law, James Turner.

Oglesbee turned and fired twice at his wife, who stood in the front door of their home. Both bullets went wild.

The man then rushed into his home, grabbed a shotgun, pulled the trigger and killed himself.

Despondency over ill health was the cause. Oglesbee leaves a widow and two children.

Salesman Is a Hero.

Toledo, O.—A. F. Carter, a salesman, was a hero Thursday when he saved three little children from a mad dog in front of the Warren-st school. Curtis suffered lacerations of the hands and right leg.

The dog had rushed into the midst of a crowd of children at the close of school. Curtis was on the opposite side of the street.

The children's screams attracted him. With a suitcase he held Curtis battled with the animal. The dog was killed by policeman later.

HARRY THAW WINS LONG LEGAL FIGHT

Famous Prisoner Is Granted Trial by Jury to Pass On Question of His Sanity.

SLAYER RADIANT AS HE HEARS VERDICT

Justice Hendrick's Opinion, Accompanying Decision, Is Lengthy One and Shows That He Made Careful Study of Case.

New York City.—Harry K. Thaw, after many attempts, has finally succeeded in bringing the question of his sanity before a jury. The application for a jury trial, made by his attorneys in a writ of habeas corpus, was granted Friday by Supreme Court Justice Hendrick, who set the trial for May 17.

In announcing his decision Justice Hendrick made it clear that the finding of the jury would not be binding if the court was satisfied that it was not in accord with the evidence and with justice. The court, he said, could disregard the jury's verdict and render his own decision.

Thaw Is Radiant.

Thaw was radiant when he heard the verdict. Many of his friends were in the crowded courtroom and they and his counsel were quick to congratulate him. His mother, Mary Copley Thaw, who has been by his side in all of his years of fighting for freedom, was not present, but Thaw's first thought in speaking to his friends and newspaper men was of her.

"This will be very good news for my mother," he said. "My only regret is that the hearing will not take place earlier than May 17."

Studies Case Deeply.

Justice Hendrick's opinion accompanying the decision was a lengthy one and showed he had made a careful study of Thaw's case and of authorities on which to base his decision. The moot question he had to decide was whether the court had power to grant a jury trial.

IMPLICATES JOHN D. JR.

HEAD OF FEDERAL COMMISSION SAYS SON OF THE OIL KING DIRECTED COLORADO FIGHT.

Kansas City, Mo.—That John D. Rockefeller, Jr., personally directed the conduct of the Colorado war against the strikers in the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.'s coal fields was the statement here of Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the federal industrial relations committee. With the statement was made an announcement that the hearing in the case of the strike would be reopened and Mr. Rockefeller would be recalled in the witness stand.

Based on information in copies of correspondence which recently has been turned over to the committee, the statement says Mr. Rockefeller not only was cognizant of all conditions in the coal mines, but that he telegraphically directed the conduct of the company's manager in relation to the strike, even in directing the calling out of troops to quell riots.

Fifteen Die in Texas Flood.

Austin, Tex.—Fifteen known to be dead and property damage of at least $1,000,000 were the results of rain and electrical storms. In addition to the known dead at least five persons were missing and believed to be drowned. Austin was the heaviest sufferer, with 12 known dead, 5 missing and a half million dollars' property damage. Heroic work was done by citizen rescue parties and by the fire and police departments. Of eight persons in one house all but one are believed to have perished.

Banks Test War Tax Act.

Chicago, Ill.—Three test suits attacking the constitutionality of the war revenue act passed by congress, as it affects the tax on the capital stock of banks, were filed in United States district court here. The result of the suits will affect 25,000 banks in the United States, according to Levy Mayer of counsel for the three banks concerned in the suits. The banks are the Continental & Commercial National, the Continental & Commercial Trust & Savings and the Hibernian Banking association.

KILLS WIFE AND TWO TOTS, SHOOTS SELF

Man, Seized by Attack of Religious Mania, Uses Gun With Deadly Effect.

BODIES FOUND IN HOME BY NEIGHBORS

Police and Friends Unite in Statement That Young Husband, Considered as Model, Was Suffering From Religious Hallucination.

Springfield, O.—Seized by an attack of religious mania, Clarence Walters, 24, shot and killed his wife Jessie, his daughters Ruby, two years old, and Virginia, two months, in their home Saturday night. Walters then fired a bullet into his head and is dying at the City hospital.

The finding of the bodies and the unconscious Walters Sunday morning capped the climax to a night of murder in Springfield. In a jealous rage Mrs. Edith Johnson, negro, shot and killed her husband Henry at their home shortly after midnight. Mrs. James Hackett was shot and perhaps fatally wounded by her husband at their home, 1737 Clay av. Hackett is held on suspicion and the police are looking for another man in connection with the affair. Jealousy is also blamed for this shooting.

The Walters home at 437 W. Euclid-av was a shambles when neighbors forced their way into it Sunday morning. At the foot of their bed the body of Mrs. Walters was found, her head hanging close to the floor, a wound in the back of her head and a pool of blood on the floor. The body of Ruby was found in a cradle. She had been shot through the back of the head, while the baby Virginia was found in a large crib basket, a bullet having been fired into her head through her left nostril.

As the neighbors entered Walters arose from where he was lying at the head of the bed and moved toward them as in a stupor. He started to mumble, but fell and rolled under the bed. The neighbors rushed for the police, and when they returned Walters was unconscious.

Walters had shot himself in the right temple. He was hurried to a hospital.

Police and friends of the Walters unite in the statement that Walters was suffering from religious hallucination. Walters was a model young husband, they say, kind and considerate for his wife, but irrational on religion. He was a member of a small congregation calling themselves the Saints and having a small meeting place northwest of the city. His wife is said to have been a member of the sect and to have been deeply religious.

Walters, who was a fruit dealer, remained at home with his children Saturday night while his wife went shopping. Mrs. Walters returned about 9:30. Neighbors say they heard Walters singing a hymn to his children. A half hour later, a neighbor says, she heard four shots, but did not investigate.

With the Walters roomed George Mason, 23. At the time of the shooting Mason was at a roller rink. He came home about 11 o'clock. The downstairs of the house was in darkness and Mason thought the Walters had gone to bed.

The crime was disclosed when a neighbor, awaking, saw through the window in the Walters home the peculiar posture of Mrs. Walters' body. Then she recalled the shots she had heard the night before and told her husband. A few minutes later Fred Kelly and William F. Edwards forced a door of the Walters house.

New York Solons Adjourn.

Albany, N. Y.—A determined but futile fight in the assembly on the bill designed to raise the cost of liquor licenses one-fourth throughout the state delayed adjournment of the legislature until almost daylight Sunday. The senate quit finally about 3:40 and the assembly at 4:06. The license measure passed, 82 to 48 and goes to Gov. Whitman. He is expected to sign it. Appropriation measures which brought the state budget up to about $64,000,000, also were passed in the closing hours of the session.

Quake Terrifies People.

Avezzano, Italy.—A strong earthquake shock occurred here at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon and lasted several seconds. It was preceded and accompanied by deep rumblings. Terror was caused among the people, who have not recovered from the recent disastrous earthquake in this section. It seems the center of disturbance was at Tagliacozzo, where several houses and a historic castle already damaged by the last earthquake, were shaken. [illegible]

MAKING BRICK FOR STATE BUILDINGS

More Than Seventy Men, Mostly Pen Prisoners, Laboring at Junction City.

LARGER FORCE TO BE EMPLOYED SOON

Material Will Be Used, if Assembly Provides Cash, for More Structures to House Growing Army of Ohio's Wards.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

In the belief that the general assembly is going to be liberal in the matter of providing money for more buildings to house the growing army of the state's wards, administration board members are working the state brick yard at Junction City to its fullest capacity. More than 70 men, mostly Ohio penitentiary prisoners, are now working in the brick yard, and plans are being made to employ an even larger force during the next few days. Before another week shall be over it is the intention of the board members to be able to turn out of the plant every day at least 25,000 finished building bricks. The administration board has its heart set upon being able to supply practically all of the building material that will be used in the numerous additions and extensions planned for the state institutions, and particularly the state hospitals. Work on these improvements will be begun just as soon as the money is available. It is expected that at least $1,000,000 will be given for new buildings and additions, and since the prison-made bricks will be used and prison labor employed, it is held by the state officials that the appropriation will be made to go "twice as far" as it could have been made to go a few years ago. Under the old plan the state not only failed to have its own bricks, but always let its work out by contract so that little saving was made at any point. This year it is likely that the state will eliminate contractors and do most of the work on the improvements under its own management.

More Employes Protected.

The state industrial commission is now handling more business in all of its departments devoted to industrial insurance under the workmen's compensation act than it has done any time since its establishment, according to a statement the commission has just issued. More concerns are now taking out the insurance, more employes are protected and receiving the benefits of the insurance, more accidents are being reported to the claims department and a greater number of claims are being disposed of than ever before, the statement says. All of which the members of the commission take to show that business for the industries of Ohio is undergoing a great revival and certain now to go forward and upward. There are now 16,478 concerns in Ohio that are carrying the state insurance for the protection of their employes.

Farming at Camp Perry.

Farming will take the place of mimic warfare this year at Camp Perry, where the state rifle range is located and where encampments of the Ohio National Guard are held. This will be beating the sword into the plowshare. Instead of using the grounds for military maneuvers this year, it will be utilized for the more peaceful and profitable purpose of raising corn. Adjutant General B. W. Hough will go to Camp Perry next week to arrange for the corn planting. The corn will be used as subsistence for the horses and mules which the state keeps at the camp grounds for the use of the National Guard. The maneuvers will be held elsewhere.

Smith-Mallow Bill Law.

Ninety days hence the state agricultural commission will pass out of existence unless there is a referendum on the Smith-Mallow ripper bill, which abolishes the commission, which was signed and made a law by Gov. Willis Thursday. It will go into effect at the end of that period unless subjected to a referendum test, which is not expected. The new law creates a board of 10 non-salaried members to take the place of the commission, which has four members, each getting a salary of $3,000. It also puts the Wooster experiment station under a separate board of its own and turns over the farmers' institute work to the Ohio State university.

Bill Hits Alien Divorces.

A bill which is expected to reduce the total number of divorces granted aliens in Ohio and which is supported by Austrian Consul Ernest Ludwig of Cleveland and other representatives of foreign countries in the state, was passed by the senate. It was the bill of Senator Fellinger of Cleveland, which orders the judge receiving the divorce petition of an alien to require a bond and also orders the clerk of courts to notify the nearest consul of the action.

Willis Signs Whittemore Bill.

Many dangerous grade crossings will no doubt be eliminated throughout the state as the result of the passage by the senate Thursday of the Whittemore house bill, authorizing county commissioners to assist the councils of villages in co-operating with railroad companies in the expense of eliminating such grade crossings. At the present time the village must bear 35 per cent of the expense and the railroad 65 per cent, and because of the comparatively high cost to them villages are unable in many instances to do away with dangerous crossings.

Will Cut Down Expenses.

The house finance committee was surprised when State Bank Superintendent Harry T. Hall declared that he could run his department on $20,000 less during the coming year than it cost to operate it last year. Last year the cost of operation was $80,000, and Supt. Hall says he can get along on a little more than $60,000 next year. The state budget commission recommended that he be given an appropriation of $87,000. He will [illegible]

Against Admission Fee Reduction.

A 25-cent state fair? Never! If the house agricultural committee can prevent it. So this committee has turned down the proposal to reduce the admission fee to the state fair from 50 cents to 25 cents, although the senate unanimously approved the idea. In rejecting the cheaper fee notion the committee held that it would cheapen the fair; would make it an unfair competitor of the county fairs, which as a rule charge 25 cents, and would amount to too much dictation on the part of the assembly to the state agricultural commission, which now has the right to fix the admission charge. The arguments in favor of the reduced charges were that it would treble the attendance, make the fair a popular instead of an exclusive educational agency, and encourage exhibitors to take space. The agitation in favor of the reduction has been so keen, however, that threats are being made that the decision of the committee may be attacked on the floor of the house and an effort made to reverse its action.

Holds Many Not Delinquent.

Fully one-half of the so-called delinquent boys and girls who are daily sent to correctional institutions are not delinquent at all and ought never to be sent to such places. This is the opinion of child experts expressed recently before the finance committee of the house of representatives in support of the proposal of the state administration board and the state budget commissioner that a quarter of a million dollars be given for the establishment of a juvenile research institution. Such an institution is urged as a place where so-called delinquent boys and girls could be carefully examined and their heredity, environment, habits and physical and mental health inquired into before they should be committed to places of punishment. One of the experts on child culture told the finance committee that if the laws against juveniles were as strictly enforced 20 years ago as they are today most of "our best citizens" might have juvenile prison records.

Ohioan Made Prisoner of War.

Maj. H. H. Snively of Columbus, one of the best known officers of the Ohio National Guard, selected by the American Red Cross to take charge of a hospital at Kiev, Russia, together with a party of nurses, was made a prisoner of war by the British on the high seas while enroute to his destination. Word of this has just been received in Columbus. The entire party was taken to an English port, detained a short time and then was allowed to resume the journey. Maj. Snively is now in charge of a hospital of 800 beds. His appointment is for a period of six months. Maj. Snively is an officer of the medical department of the Ohio Guard.

Again Loses Fight in Court.

Having lost in his efforts to oust the Standard Oil Co. from the state, the supreme court having decided against him, there is more or less general curiosity as what tactics George H. Phelps, the Findlay lawyer who has been fighting this corporation for years, will next use. He has brought a large variety of suits against the Standard, and his latest which the court has just knocked out, was one in which he sought to have the secretary of state compelled to revoke the right of constituent companies of the Standard to do business in Ohio. He contended these companies should be ousted on the ground that they are violating the anti-trust laws of the state.

Enlistment Day for Drys.

More than 150,000 cards have already been sent out for enlistment day, which will mark the firing of the first gun in the camp of the Anti-Saloon League to make Ohio dry next fall. The date set for the observance of the day is May 16. Between the present and that date the number will have increased to 500,000. State headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League says it has been advised that the circulation of petitions for names to submit the proposal to the electorate are being signed rapidly and that it will be possible to file with the secretary of state any time after the 1st of June. It is probable, however, that the actual fighting will not take place until considerably later.

New Hospital for Insane.

The new hospital for the criminal insane at Lima will be opened before long, and it is expected that the occasion will be made a gala event. Gov. Willis, members of the legislature, members of the state board of administration and others are expected to attend. Just as soon after the formal opening as possible the hospital will be turned over to the state board of administration, who will thereafter have charge of it.

Big Demand for Auto Tags.

One day recently Ohio smashed all its previous records in the number of automobile licenses issued. The day closed with a total of 123,000 licenses issued since the first of the year. This surpasses the record for the entire year of 1914, when 122,504 licenses were issued. Registrar W. H. Walker of the bureau expects an increase of 50,000 for the year.

Woman Lobbyist Quits Columbus.

Mrs. Mary E. Lee, the only woman lobbyist at the state capital, has resigned her job and returned home. She has been representing the grange, which took exception to her work on the pending school legislation. She has been working for the repeal of school code legislation, while the position of the grange has been that there should be no change—at least not until the new system had been given a fair tryout and it had been found that it should be revamped. Mrs. Lee has been a familiar figure in the legislative halls at each session for many years.

Wage War Against Discriminators.

The state public utilities commission is still waging war against the railroads that discriminate against the small shipper. The commission has just ordered the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to refund to William H. Hopple of Fredericktown $73.79 as overcharges on six cars of logs to Tiffin. These shipments were made on a charge of 7 cents per 100 pounds, while the company at the same time was carrying logs from St. Louisville, a point 15 miles south of Fredericktown, to Fostoria, 13 miles beyond Tiffin, for [illegible] cents.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN IN A CAR WRECK

THREE FATALLY INJURED WHEN THEIR 'BUS IS STRUCK WHILE GOING TO SCHOOL.

VEHICLE THROWN THIRTY FEET

Attendant to Driver So Badly Hurt He May Die—Child Said to Have Had Foot on Brake.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cleveland, O.—Eleven deformed children, on their way to a school for cripples, were injured, three of them fatally, when the 'bus in which they were riding was struck by a street car here. The fatally hurt are: Philip Capell, 8; Theresa Berislavich, 13; Frances Quinlivan, 10. The attendant to the driver of the rig, Hezekiah Fino, 72, was also badly hurt and may die. The wagon was thrown 30 feet by the car. A. Sutton, the driver, said he saw the car coming, but was unable to stop his wagon because a crippled child had his foot on the brake, and it was impossible to reach the brake without pushing the child off the wagon.

ANNUAL STATE CONVENTION

Of Maccabees Was Held in Dayton This Week.

Dayton, O.—The state convention of the Maccabees was held in Dayton Tuesday and Wednesday of this week and more than 200 delegates representing all the lodges of the state were present. The Springfield lodges were represented by Perry Thatcher. There was a big street parade and about 100 members from the order here attended. The convention was largely attended, and many important questions were discussed, such as the starting of a boys' branch to be known as "The Maccabee Scouts," the adoption of a new official emblem and button badge to meet the requirements resulting from the recent merger of all Maccabees orders for men. Some important changes to better promote the sick and accident benefit and relief work in Ohio was made.

There are 325,000 members of the order in the United States and Canada and 42,000 members in Ohio alone. The ladies' auxiliary has 175,000 members, with 28,000 in Ohio. The convention held in Dayton was for the Knights' branch only. It was composed of 150 officers and representatives, 40 field men and deputies and other special committeemen. A full quota of state officers were chosen and ten delegates elected to represent Ohio in the world's convention of the order to be held in San Francisco in May, 1915.

OSBORN BANK OFFICIALS

Are Freed When Prosecutor Says Case Has Collapsed.

Xenia, O.—John H. Barkman and C. C. Jackson, former president and cashier of the Osborn State bank, were freed of the charge of embezzlement of $505 of the bank's funds. On application of Prosecutor Johnson, Judge H. C. Middleton instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

The prosecutor's grounds for his action were that his leading witness did not testify the same at the trial as he did before the grand jury, causing the state's case to collapse. It is probable that this will be the end of prosecutions in the cases growing out of the failure of the Osborn bank. Officials of the bank are under indictment on 176 counts for alleged misappropriation of funds of the bank to the J. G. Russell Company, but the death a few months ago of George N. Osgoodby, head of the Russell Company, also indicted in the bank case, removes the principal witness for the state.

PLAN A BOYS' ORGANIZATION.

Dayton, O.—Looking to the conservation of the boys in Maccabees' homes and others, the Great camp for Ohio, in convention here, had presented to them plans for the establishment of "The Maccabee Scouts." The idea originated with Ed. L. Young, great commander, of Norwalk. The plan contemplates the establishment of a regular lodge for the boys, between 14 and 18 years, with ritual and benefits, and the graduation of the youngsters into the parent body after they have reached 18 years. Plans for the adoption of an official emblem, badge and flag were also discussed.

POKER USED TO ESCAPE JAIL.

Carrollton, O.—James Ross, 22 years old, member of an alleged Blackhand band, escaped from the county jail here and two of his associates were caught in a similar attempt. Using a red-hot poker, Ross and his companions, Nicholas Picelli, 23 years old, and William Ballerni, 33, burned a hole through the ceiling of the jail corridor. Ross climbed through it and escaped, but his companions were caught.

CAR FALLS INTO THE CREEK.

Conductor Louis Paulson and Flagman John Johnson, both of Cincinnati, part of the crew of a D., L. & C. freight train, suffered severe injuries when the caboose in which they were riding into Dayton climbed the ties of the trestle over Tucker creek, one mile south of Centerville, and plunged twenty feet into the stream. A coal car also went over the trestle. Paulson suffered several broken ribs, bad scalp wound and other hurts.

CLEAN-UP PROCLAMATION.

Governor Willis Designates Week of April 26.

Columbus, O.—Gov. Willis has issued a proclamation designating the week of April 26 as "clean-up week" for the whole state. The governor urges every one to cooperate with their various public, commercial and civic bodies to beautify every community in the state.

"Cleanliness in body, surroundings, in thought and in speech is not only associated with righteousness, but tends to promote it," said the proclamation. "Flowers in their modest beauty beckon to higher thoughts and action. Pansies and peonies in abundance may make less necessary the work of the policeman. Accumulated rubbish in attics, under stairways and in dark closets is a frequent cause of fire."

GOVERNOR TAKES ACTION

Will Make Effort to End Long Coal Strike in Eastern Ohio Coal Field.

Canton, O.—Following in the footsteps of his predecessors, Governor Frank B. Willis called for a meeting of coal miners and operators, to be held here. He personally will open the conference. Recently the Governor has been in conference with both factions to the quarrel which has kept Eastern Ohio mines closed for a year and has rendered 15,000 miners idle. While he was in office former Governor James M. Cox was so instrumental factor in concluding negotiations between miners and operators of all but the Eastern Ohio district. His efforts to end the differences between the Miners' Union and the operators failed entirely. Nor did President Woodrow Wilson have better success when he sent federal arbitrators into the district.

The miners refused to arbitrate, insisting upon 47 cents a ton for machine-mined run-of-mine coal. The Governor has been following the situation and believes that he may render effective aid. Expanding business needs and the general supposition that the Green screen act will be in effect for many months are believed to prepare a way for a possible settlement.

100 YEARS OLD; NEVER DRINKS WATER.

Martins Ferry, O.—Miss Anna M. Gassmyer, one of the oldest and most remarkable women in Ohio, celebrated her 100th anniversary at her home here. She never drinks water unless feverish from a slight illness, having the same aversion for it that most people have for medicine. Almost as long as she can remember she has drank three or four cups of coffee at each meal and several between each meal. Miss Gassmyer has never taken any medicine and never been seriously ill to call for a drug. She has never worn glasses and can read the print of ordinary newspapers with ease. She was born in Germany and although she has been in this country since 1879, she can not speak or understand English.

NEXT CONVENTION IN HAMILTON

Hamilton, O.—Charles A. Brennan of the manual training department of the local high school, was elected president of the Miami Valley Industrial Arts association. The convention of the association was held in Dayton and was one of great help and benefit to all those engaged in manual training work in this valley. Mr. Brennan succeeds Elmer W. Christie, of Cincinnati. It was determined to hold the next convention in October in this city and it is believed that the auditorium of the new high school will be ready for use by that time. If this is true the meeting will undoubtedly be held there. Oxford will get the meeting following the one here. Prof. Elden Uary of the manual training department of Ohio State university was elected secretary, and John Schock, of Cincinnati, corresponding secretary.

FIVE SKELETONS ARE FOUND.

Hamilton, O.—The skeletons of five flood victims, with the skeleton of a dog in the center of the group, were dug up upon the Bonninghofen farm near Fairplay. Eleven bodies so far have been unearthed on this farm this spring. It was flooded by the high water two years ago, but was not ploughed up until this spring. Nothing was found near the skeletons to lead to their identity.

RECEIVED BIG PIPE LINE ORDER.

Lorain, O.—The National Tube Company received an order for 125 miles of twelve-inch line pipe from an oil company. The order will require the company to work its plant to the fullest capacity on double turn for four months.

TRAINMEN HOLD CONVENTION.

Lima, O.—More than 1,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Order of Railroad Conductors, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and Enginemen, and their auxiliaries from all over Ohio and the central states, met here in their annual convention. Grand officers of all the orders were guests of honor. 250 automobiles conveyed the visitors about the city on a sightseeing tour. At the close the visitors were banqueted.

INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Coshocton, O.—Five members of one family were injured in an automobile accident near here. John W. Goodin, aged 45, a railroad clerk, who suffered a fractured skull, and his son, Fremont, aged 10, whose right eye was cut, are not expected to recover. Mrs. John W. Goodin and two daughters, Zipha and Gayle, aged 22 and 18 respectively, were severely hurt. The automobile, driven by Henry Klinger, skidded from the road into a 12-foot ditch and overturned.

Puzzled Uncle Pash.

From the time the coal and iron territory round about Jenkins was opened up and the town began to form itself out of the construction and prospecting camps, P. C. Dix, secretary of the state executive committee of the Young Men's Christian association, took a deep interest in its development and spent much time there assisting in the formation of a strong and active branch of the association. One story he tells is of an aged mountaineer, who, after the railroad trains had begun running regularly, ventured down to see for himself some of the wonders of which he had vaguely heard. He stood on the rude platform and watched the train pull in. After a few minutes it backed up a little way. "What d'ye think uv her, Uncle Pash?" asked one of the loungers. "Wal, I kin see how th' ingyne mout pull them thar kyars," said the old man, thoughtfully, "but what gits me is how them kyars pulls th' ingyne."—Louisville Times.

MUST HAVE SHOCKED JUDGE

What He Regarded as "Dribblings" of Hay Was All He Was Going to Get.

A distinguished member of the United States judiciary has discovered that he still has something to learn in the direction of agriculture.

He bought a farm as a summer home for his family and finds especial delight in walking about the place, commenting on the condition of the crops, and in many ways showing his interest in his new possessions.

One evening during the summer he was strolling over the farm. The hired man had cut the grass during the day—a very thin crop—and left it on the ground to dry. The judge saw it, and calling his man, he said:

"It seems to me you are very careless. Why haven't you been more particular in raking up this hay? Don't you see that you have left little dribblings all around?"

For a minute the hired man stared, wondering if the judge was quizzing him. Then he replied:

"Little dribblings? Why, man, that's the crop!"

WAS WILLING TO COMPROMISE

Ernest Wanted Increase of Wages, Though He Stood Ready to Make a Concession.

Ernest was very big and very black, and when it came to sleeping and eating fully justified his name. Ernest did not fancy steady work, but he was apt to be available when spring came for odd jobs at a dollar a day and his dinner.

One spring he came in with a sheepish grin.

"Miss Sally, I been hearin' in de lodge meetin' 'bout dese hard times, and I 'low I better raise my sal'ry to a dollar an' a quarter a day."

"You're not worth that, Ernest, and you know it. Besides, I can't afford to pay more."

Ernest scratched his head, this was matter for more thought than he had anticipated.

"I figgered out when dey wuz talkin' 'bout dem hard times dat I couldn't 'ford to work for no less. But"—his black face gleamed with a sudden thought—"I won' eat so much."

Jolt to Car Owner's Pride.

A citizen on the South side recently bought a moderate priced motor car, and a few mornings ago he called to his next door neighbor and offered to take him downtown to the office. That night the neighbor's little girl said to the proud car owner: "I know what kind of an auto you've got." "Is that so?" the man asked. "Yes, I heard papa say at dinner what it is. It's a Tin Lizzie!"—Kansas City Star.

Book Pretenses.

"The kind of books people read now-a-days is rather startling."

"Yes," replied Mrs. McGudley, "but I have my doubts whether folks stop dancin' long enough to read 'em. When I was young we used to read books and pretend we didn't. Now people pretend they read 'em and don't."

"Not guilty" isn't always an innocent remark.

Children who say smart things soon grow up and are lost in the shuffle.

WOMAN COULD NOT SIT UP
Now Does Her Own Work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.
Ironton, Ohio.—"I am enjoying better health now than I have for twelve years. When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could not sit up. I had female troubles and was very nervous. I used the remedies a year and I can do my work and for the last eight months I have worked for other women, too. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for I know I never would have been as well if I had not taken it and I recommend it to suffering women."

Daughter Helped Also.
"I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen years old. She was in school and was a nervous wreck, and could not sleep nights. Now she looks so healthy that even the doctor speaks of it. You can publish this letter if you like."—Mrs. RENA BOWMAN, 161 S. 10th Street, Ironton, Ohio.
Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out and drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?
If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Made It Unanimous.

"Have you any militant suffragists in Crimson Gulch?" "Nary," replied Bronco Bob. "When the school teacher dropped a hint as to how she'd like to vote we'd have been glad of a chance to shoot up anybody that 'ud interfere with her. But by common consent we turned the polls over to her an' all stayed away so's there wouldn't be any chance of her bein' embarrassed."—Washington Star.

Vague Assertions.

"When will the war be over?" inquired the impatient citizen.

"I don't suppose there's any way of telling," replied the querulous quibbler. "When the fiercest kind of fighting was going on they said the war had not really started. Maybe the war is over now, only they don't know it."

His Natural Bent.

"It takes Jenks to get around a thing!"

"I know it from the way he hugs his miseries!"—Judge.

Good Reason.

"What makes you think we'll have better times when the war is over?"

"Well, for one thing, all these men who do nothing but stand around discussing the war news will have time to go back to work."

About the time we imagine that our cup of happiness is going to run over it springs a leak.

Some Forms of Rheumatism Curable

Rheumatism is a disease characterized by pains in the joints and in the muscles. The most common forms are: Acute and Chronic Rheumatism, Rheumatic Headaches, Sciatic Rheumatism and Lumbago. All of these types can be helped absolutely by applying some good liniment that penetrates. An application of Sloan's Liniment two or three times a day to the affected part will give instant relief. Sloan's Liniment is good for pain, and especially Rheumatic Pain, because it penetrates to the seat of the trouble, soothes the afflicted part and draws the pain. "Sloan's Liniment is all medicine." Mrs. Jennie Hanson and daughter, Elizabeth of Canada, are spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Munson and sister, Miss Nettie Munson.

Mrs. Thomas Code has been on the sick list recently.

Mr. William Chew has been carrying the Plains mail for Wm. Hart, who has just had his vacation.

Maurice Markell and family, R. R. No. 3's new carrier from Kirtland, are to move into part of her mother's Mrs. McCray's house.

Gordon Hanks is home from O. S. U.

Mrs. Kittie Corothers condition does not change very fast. If they attempt to put her in a chair she faints, but can be proped up in bed a little.

Lloyd Corlton has a new Maxwell car.

Mr. and Mrs. William Pollent, former residents of Mentor, have a fine baby boy.

Mrs. John O'Brien died Thursday at her home near the Lake Shore depot, after a two week's illness with pneumonia, leaving a husband and seven children, all of whom are married.

Mr. and Mrs. Colonel Parker returned from California last Saturday. While there they attended the Exposition at San Francisco and another in southern California, also went into Mexico. They had a fine trip.

Summer weather in April with the thermometer at 90 degrees and over is somewhat unusual weather and not at all appreciated.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Waite Hill

The Otis family were down to their summer home Sunday viewing that new fountain that has been put in on the front lawn, which adds greatly to the attractiveness of the already beautiful lawn.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Arleigh Grace has been given the name of Francis Eugene.

Mr. and Mrs. Gurdin Thayer had for Sunday guests Mrs. Thayer's two sisters and gentlemen friends from Cleveland.

George Hoose and family of Mentor and Harry Grover and family of Cleveland motored over to Waite Hill Sunday and called on friends, the families of W. Hoose and W. Grover.

We are sorry to learn of the serious illness of our old time friend Stephen Storm of Willoughby. Mr. Storm was a Kirtland resident for many years and in company with R. Y. Carrel owned and operated the Kirtland Mills at the Flats, and when he sold out and moved to Willoughby we all felt as though half of the town had "slumped out."

Mr. and Mrs. Ourdin Thayer motored to Novelty Sunday and called on his father.

Little Lillian Welle is staying with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Wells for a week or two.

Mrs. F. E. Presley has been quite ill for the past week and under the doctor's care, but is now some better.

Cyrus Smith and daughters with their families motored to Fairport and Madison Sunday.

There's not much news to write these days as everybody is housecleaning or gardening, or "motoring to some unheard of land."

Melvin Yaxley and family attended the funeral of Mr. Henry Randall, Mrs. Yaxley's uncle on Sunday at 2 P. M. at the Christian Church, Willoughby. The burial was in the Willoughby cemetery beside loved ones gone before. Mr. Randall was the eldest and only remaining member of his father's family of six children, five daughters and one son. Mr. Randall was 89 years of age. He passed away on Friday at his daughter's in Ada, Ohio, where he had lived for the past few years. Mr. Randall spent most of his life in Kirtland on what is now the H. A. Sherwin place. Out of a family of five children only two are left, the daughter and youngest son Leon, to mourn his loss. We always considered him a model man. He has now gone to his reward.

A number of the Waite Hill autoists motored to Fairport Sunday and on Monday evening a number of them drove to Chardon. You see we've got to "do" all the cities and towns in this part of the state "to sample the ice cream."

This week will be the last week of Mr. A. P. Hart's service as mail carrier on Route No. 3. We shall miss him.

Mr. and Mrs. Thayer and others motored to Chagrin Falls Saturday evening.

It is reported that Guy Fletcher and family are moving to Willoughby.

The Hobart family and Donald Presley on Sunday took a little trip out into Ashtabula county. Rock Creek was the objective point, going by the way of Stucky Hill (where several years ago an auto climb was had), through Chardon, Hambden, Trumbull, Thompson, and on to Rock Creek, where rocks we found in abundance, narrow serpentine roads full of holes which would make one bound to the top of the auto oftener than we cared to. "We just imagined we were on the rocky road to Dublin." We passed through several covered bridges, which made us think of "ye olden time." Returning home by the way of Geneva, Madison, Painesville, etc. That new Madison pavement is just grand. If a storm hadn't threatened us we would have extended our trip. Our speedometer registered 84 miles. Nothing but a "Ford" would have taken that trip without a mishap.

South Madison

Frank Osgood was in Ashtabula Wednesday.

W. B. Pease, insurance agent of Painesville, was in this vicinity Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dell Scott visited at Roger Craley's in LeRoy Sunday.

Fred and Frank Sparks of Madison were looking at timber in this neighborhood Wednesday.

Anna Grabski of Geneva was a Sunday guest of her brother, Ben Grabski.

Mrs. Charles McIntyre visited relatives in Cleveland recently.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Kissick entertained last week a cousin, Eugene Turner from the West.

John Newman and family of Thompson spent Sunday at E. C. Boyd's.

Miss Silvia Batiska returned to Cleveland Saturday, after several weeks with her parents here.

The little daughter of Mr and Mrs Numbers is sick with acute indigestion.

Mrs. Lawrence Ott has returned from Cleveland, where she has been caring for her mother, who is recovering from an operation.

C. R. Ford and family motored to Geneva Saturday.

The barn of Lawrence Ott was struck by lightning Tuesday morning.

Miss Cora Osgood has returned home from Fort Wayne, Ind., where she has been visiting the past two months. Her sister, Mrs Leah Long accompanied her home.

HARM DONE BY IMPURE AIR

Frequenters of Public Places Most Injured by Disregard of Adequate Ventilation.

A health bulletin published in Chicago has the following to say regarding imperfect ventilation in public places:

"Deaths from the impure air diseases—tuberculosis, pneumonia, bronchitis and la grippe—constitute one-third of the total deaths of the last five months, exceeding by 4,309 deaths the record of the next most important cause of death—diarrheal diseases, 872.

"These deaths are the dire results chiefly of dirty breathing habits; they are results which stamp our present day sanitary intelligence as little short of barbaric.

"Probably our closed vehicles of transportation are the one thing most in need of attention; especially is this true in large cities where people are crowded into street cars to the point of suffocation during 'rush hours,' all breathing and rebreathing air exhaled by others, some coughing and sneezing in their neighbors' faces.

"Our places of public assemblage, especially the small theaters, are also urgently in need of ventilation correction.

"Ventilation laws must be enacted and rigidly enforced if tuberculosis, pneumonia and other impure air diseases are to be reduced to the minimum."

DISGUISE WAS NOT NEEDED

Paul Deroulede's Escape From Prison Bordered Somewhat on the Ludicrous.

The late Paul Deroulede was not the sort of man about whom one told funny stories; one ran too much risk of being "called out!" But the story of his escape from Breslau, where the Germans had imprisoned him, is decidedly amusing.

A friend of his, Lieutenant Jaunaux, came to visit him in the prison disguised as a countryman. He wore a long coat and a shaggy fur cap, and made himself sufficiently conspicuous to be noticed by the sentries, and he went on paying visits every now and then, until everybody became quite familiar with him.

One day, after a visit, Deroulede strolled with him to the gateway of the fortress. They waited chatting, till the sentry's back was turned, then, quick as thought, Deroulede slipped on his friend's long coat, his fur cap and his spectacles and, with a stick in his hand, limped slowly out through the gate and off to the railway station. He got a train at once and safely crossed the frontier.

The really comic part of the story relates to the lieutenant, who walked calmly out of the fortress in his shirt sleeves and nobody took any notice of him at all.

BANQUETS THAT ARE FAMOUS

Old Romans Would Send to the Ends of the Earth for Delicacies That Appealed to Them.

At the famous banquet of Trimalchio which, it should be remembered, was not merely a banquet, but a burlesque, and was given by a multi-millionaire, as we should call him today, the gustus would have served the most of men for a dinner. A donkey of Corinthian bronze held two baskets of olives, white on one side, black on the other. Then there were dormice covered with honey and poppy seed, hot sausage on a silver grill and beneath them damsons and pomegranate seeds. But a Roman dined with Trimalchio as rarely as with Lucullus, and the freedman's fancy was separate and his own.

After the gustus came the regular courses (fercula they are called), which might be three, or even seven, in the houses of epicures. The satirists and historians, as we know, condemn the extravagance, which vastly increased under the empire, and which bade the wealthy Romans send for their priceless delicacies to the ends of the earth. Satire had no more effect than sumptuary laws, and the banquets of the rich patricians and wealthy freedmen are legendary. First came the fish, for poor as for rich a necessity of the dinner. Sea barbel and the turbot of Ravenna were the favorites, and the haddock was not disdained.

FROM THE GATES OF DEATH

Aged Collector Threw Off Infirmities at Sight of Object He Desired to Possess.

What the passion for collecting is no one except perhaps the born collector can really know. Sir Martin Conway, in "The Sport of Collecting," writes:

"I once knew an aged collector who was suffering all the ills that nature accumulates on the last years of some nonagenarians.

"His sight was feeble, he was deaf; he was often racked with pain. It seemed evident that his end was at hand. His days and nights had to be spent in an armchair, and each gasping breath seemed likely to be his last.

"To him entered a dealer of his acquaintance with a splendid K'ang Hsi Famille verte vase, which the old man had long wished to possess. The sight of it revived his forces, his breathing cleared, he sat erect in his chair, and presently, in the excitement of the bargaining, was upon his feet striding about the room.

"The struggle and the victory revived him, and he lived on for several years before death finally won him and the British museum entered upon its inheritance."

Why Are Fruits Colored?

The attractive and appetizing outward appearance of most fruits is generally explained by supposing that its function is to attract animals, which eat the fleshy portion and carry the seed away from the parent plant, thus aiding the distribution of the species. The red cheeks of a peach are so enticing that this explanation probably finds acceptance. But why that brilliant red color where the flesh meets the kernel? The bird that pecks at the flesh of the fruit does not strike this colored layer until the work is practically accomplished.

Certain trees that furnish the so-called dye woods deposit pigment by the hundredweight within their stems. The woad or indigo plant and several others contain a substance known as "indican," which is normally colorless, but is transformed by a fermentation and oxidation process into deep blue indigo. This case is particularly puzzling, since the color of the dye stuff is not even developed in the living plant.

Leopard Traps.

The following is the usual method of making an Indian leopard trap: A live goat or kid is confined in the back of the trap, but protected on the inside by strong bars. The heavy trapdoor is kept raised a couple of feet off the ground by a lever resting on a crossbar above, while the lower end of the lever is attached by a rope to a rod or stick stuck into a log or plank raised off the ground inside the trap, just in front of the grating protecting the decoy, the bleating of which attracts the leopard. The latter in attempting to get at its prey treads on the log or plank before mentioned, which in its fall releases the lever and lets the heavy door fall into position. The captured leopard is then caged, shot or speared.—Wide World Magazine.

Parson Holler Discourses on Faith.

"Have faith, bruddren and sistahs!" sonorously said good old Parson Holler, during a recent sermon. "Have faith, but don' be foolish about it! De Lawd will back yo' up plumb to de limit if yo' uses judgment; but he ain't mixin' up in no pordnership wid fools. Be honest and decent and 'dustrious, and have faith, an yo' will win out, some fawty, some sixty and some an hund'ed folds. But if yo' jump out'n a fo'th story winder wid one o' dem new thought books open in yo' hand and 'spect to float straight up like a hot-air balloon, all de faith in goddlemighty's world won't save yo' fum bumpin' de life out'n yo' pussonality on de ground. Have faith, mah friends, but don' act de fool!"—Kansas City Star.

THE NATCO SILO

The silo is a receptacle for preserving food in a succulent condition. In order to do this there is one positive requirement.

The contents must be kept away from air.

The Natco Everlasting Silo keeps its contents in a superior condition. The glazed walls are impervious to air and moisture, and there is less freezing of silage than in any other silo.

THE NATCO SILO never needs painting, never needs re-erecting, never needs to have hoops tightened. Costs a little more to erect than a stave silo but cost less in the end.

LITTLE CHANCE FOR GOVERNMENT BUILDING AT THE PRESENT TIME

Secretary of the treasury McAdoo has sent a letter to Acting Secretary of the Treasury Bryon Newton, which temporarily terminates arrangements to purchase sites for postoffice buildings in small towns and cities in Ohio and other states. The memorandum is as follows:

"You will please strictly observe my instructions of some months since not to accept until further directed any postoffice sites, except in cases which legitimately may be considered as emergencies or where the government would suffer a distinct loss by delay.

"In going over the list of authorizations in the public buildings act of March 4, 1913, I observe that sites have been authorized in many towns of less than 3,000 inhabitants where postal receipts are not sufficient to pay the actual maintenance charges of public buildings when erected.

"There are hundreds of places where a real emergency exists and where there is a pressing need for increased postal facilities, and every legitimate effort should be made to give relief to these localities before consideration is given to localities where public buildings are not needed.

When the last omnibus building bill was framed "pork" was dispensed with such a generous hand that congress provided sites for postoffices for seventeen towns in one state, and not in one instance out of the seventeen did the postal receipts of the town reach $10,000 a year. The department is now five years behind in the construction of public buildings.

CIRCUS IS COMING

Big Event in Amusement Line Will Occur Thursday, May 27.

Circus day comes but once a year. The small boy often wonders why the mammoth tented institutions don't stay a week or more, like the smaller tent shows, or why in the world the circus doesn't stay all summer, like the picture shows. This would be nice, the small boy thinks, but the circus would fare badly.

A big tented city must keep on moving or fail to exist, for, although a great many can not be made to see or acknowledge it, the fact remains that the big circuses leave behind about as much as they take away, combining what they spend directly and what the hundreds of attaches drop with the local merchants. The big show has to stop here today and there tomorrow, and so on, continuously hunting new pastures, and never stops to rest.

The Robinson Famous Shows will visit this city, and two performances are to be given, the afternoon show beginning at 2 o'clock and the night performance commencing promptly at 8 o'clock; doors open exactly an hour before each exhibition to allow visitors to inspect the menagerie.

The street parade will leave the show grounds at 10 a. m. traversing the principal streets, and returning to the show grounds, where in the open air, and absolutely free to all who care to see it, will be given a startling and sensational free exhibition.

The program this year will be a marvel in itself, a revelation to the business and circus goers the country over. People know the Robinson Show, know its qualities and its cleanliness, and the organization has enlarged and perfected, for the season of 1915 will be an even greater credit to that famous of all show names, "Robinson."

Will exhibit at Painesville, Thursday, May 27th.

New Store Opens

The East Side Grocery, which has been vacant for a year or more, was opened to the public Monday, under the management of H. H. Richardson. A full line of staple and fancy groceries will be carried in stock and a specialty will be made of teas and coffees.

Mr. Richardson has had several years experience in the grocery business, coming here from Kirtland, where he has many friends. The new store will be conducted strictly on the cash basis and the proprietor feels sure that the people will appreciate the saving made by cutting off all poor accounts.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will occupy appartments in the store building.

Thirty Days in the Works.

Robert Duker, who was indicted on a burglary and larceny charge for breaking into the Nickel Plate freight house in Wickliffe on the night of February 12, was allowed to plead to a petit larceny charge in common pleas court, Monday forenoon. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the Cleveland workhouse for thirty days and fined the costs of the case.

Killed by Fast Train

John Heerlein, a section foreman on the N. Y. C. was struck by an east bound passenger train early Wednesday morning near the Fobes street crossing and instantly killed, his head and body being badly mutilated.

Three trains were going over the crossing at the time the accident occurred and it is supposed that Heerlein became confused. He had been in the employ of the company for the past twenty years.

Heerlein leaves a wife and four children, two sons, George and Fred [illegible] daughters [illegible]

The Loafer

They say that I am worthless and I guess, at least, I be, 'cause kids and other people's dogs they all shine up to me. While decent men is scramblin' to nail a dollar down I spend the best part of my time in aimless ramblin' roun'. I pity lots of well-dressed folks that cooly pass me by, the weariness that's on their lips, the pain that's in their eye. In winter, just a corner near to some one else's fire; in summer-time a patch of shade's the top of my desire. A gun when fall winds whistle, a pole when fishes bite, three meals, or less if need be, and a place to sleep at night. To turn a little favor for a stranger or a pal, to get a tender smile from a youngster or a gal, to grin with them that's grinning, and weep with them that weep, to never mind my enemies and like my friends a heap, to never hurt a woman's heart, nor do a man a wrong—I ask for nothing else except—to drift and loaf along.

ALLEGED THIEF CAUGHT

Mute in Jail for Taking Watch and Chain from Madison Home

A tramp, claiming to be deaf and dumb, was arrested in Geneva on a charge of annoying women and in his possession was found a gold watch and chain also a letter bearing the name of Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, Madison.

Mrs. Vanderlip was notified and identified the watch, which she had not missed. She had given the tramp a meal a few days ago and it is supposed that the fellow took the jewelry while she was absent from the room.

The fellow was brought to Painesville and given a hearing in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court. He gave several different names and claimed to hail from Johnstown, Pa. Officers think that the man is perfectly normal and that he will soon "recover" his speech and hearing.

Chardon Robin Suicides

Mrs. Lillian Cook, wife of E. A. Cook, Chardon druggist, declares birds suffer from melancholia and sometimes kill themselves. She declares that a robin whose mate had been killed by a cat, sought the companionship of another pair of robins near her home, but was repulsed.

Five days later Mrs. Cook saw the bird standing in a cement fountain in the rear of the house. For an hour and a half it stood in the shallow water. At the end of that time the bird flapped its wings, laid its head deliberately under the water and drowned itself.

Mentor Boy Bound Over

Aubrey Craig, 19, of Mentor, was bound over to await the action of the grand jury by Justice C. D. Adams of Geneva, after Craig had entered a plea of guilty in answer to the charge of burglarizing Spring's Novelty store on the night of November 23, 1914. He was taken to the county jail by Officer Noyes.

About People and Places

E. Helie, the florist, has moved to the St. Clair building.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bates, Marion Ave., a 9-lb. boy, Wednesday May 5.

Citizens band went to Willoughby Wednesday evening where they repeated the concert given in this city recently.

Economy is a good trait. But no married man should pick up the hairpins he finds on the street and put them in his pocket.

Mrs. Harriet Blakeslee of Ashtabula, a member of Connecticut Chapter D. A. R., passed away at her home, Saturday morning.

Morris Hainich, the man arrested for stealing a watch at Madison, has been bound over to common pleas court, bail being fixed at $300.

Leonard Laroe of Jefferson street, employed as an oiler by the Diamond Alkali company, sustained a fall, Friday forenoon, which resulted in a badly cut scalp.

Captain N. M. Rasmussen of the Fairport life saving station, is to be retired on a pension within the next two months. This is under a new law recently passed.

The city council held a short meeting Monday evening and after passing the dog ordinance several of the members celebrated by attending the dog show at the Utopia.

Middlefield council has instructed the marshal to demand from wanderers who seek lodging in the village lockup three hours work with shovel and broom on the streets.

Potatoes are very plentiful in this part of the county. One farmer near Chardon has 1,000 bushels for sale, and between 300 and 400 bushels of seed potatoes in his cellar.

There are 101,179 Catholics in the diocese of Cleveland, in which Lake County and all northeastern Ohio is included, according to the Official Catholic Directory just issued.

John Sickers and Charles Finkus, sentenced to the workhouse in Cleveland for ninety days, were taken to Cleveland, Friday, by Sheriff O. M. Spink and Deputy E. E. Graves.

Tests made by Prof. E. M. Otts of Willoughby's water supply, which showed that the water of the town is exceptionally good, were corroborated by tests of the state board of health.

The Ohio rural carriers' association will have its state convention July 20 to 22 at Massillon. An interesting program is being prepared and one of the speakers will be U. S. Senator Atlee Pomerene.

A count made by N. Y. C. railroad employes shows that 1,019 people and 403 rigs, crossed the Main street crossing in Perry on April 30. The total is nearly one a minute for the time from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

John Chapman, Fairport, received a severe shock while working with a line gang removing wires for the moving of a building. Prompt action by a fellow workman prevented Chapman's falling to the ground.

Judge A. G. Reynolds of Painesville has accepted the invitation of the local committee to deliver the dedicatory address at the laying of the corner stone of the new high school in Willoughby, about the middle of May.

Justice Lloyd Wyman performed two wedding ceremonies during the past week, the parties being William H. Weinreich of Cleveland and Eva M. Cobb, of Mentor; Richard C. Clark of Cleveland, and Margaret Baker of Willoughby.

Persons who suggest things for the beautifying of a town or improving its sanitary condition should certainly do some WORK to accomplish such a purpose. Mere suggestions are but an effusion of wind and accomplish but little in results. Work and less sentiment is required to accomplish real good results.

Painesville will soon have a motor fire truck, despite the adverse action of the people on that proposition some time ago. A Ford car is being fitted up to carry chemicals, hose, a short ladder and other necessary supplies and will be able to make a quick run to any blaze. The entire cost of machine and equipment will be about $600.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. James Vernon wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ella, to Worthington [illegible] Bromley of Cleveland.

COUNTY Y. M. C. A.

Kirtland Banquet

On Tuesday evening, April 27th, the Y. W. C. A. of Kirtland entertained the Y. M. C. A. About one hundred boys and girls were present. The early part of the evening was given over to a program prepared by the girls. Rev. Hughes of Perry gave a very inspiring address to the young people on the demands that are made of the boys and girls of today. He said that if we were to succeed we must be prepared, know and seize the opportunity and keep our minds and hearts pure. After his address the girls served a splendid luncheon.

Athletic Work

Last week County Secretary Donnan and Mr. J. R. Williams conducted an athletic test among all the boys in Leroy township, who weigh over sixty pounds. These tests are to be made in every township in the County and the winners in each township will compete at the County Fair next fall. The boys who had the highest scores in Leroy are:

Class A, Anthony Franko, 244 points, Breakmon school.

Class B, Herbert Martin, 222 points, Center Leroy School.

Class D, Allen Bartlett, 148 points, Miss Sidley's school.

Class E, Leo Seleznick, 42 points, Center Leroy school.

Forty-two boys took part in the work and all expect to make better records next year.

Madison Meeting

Last Sunday afternoon about fifty men and boys of Madison township met in the Congregational Church in the interest of the Lake County Y. M. C. A. work. After several stirring songs led by Mr. Carl Kimball, Mr. T. B. West of Perry, Chairman of the meeting, presented Mr. C. W. Searls, Chairman of the County Committee. Mr. T. B. Lanham, State County Work Secretary of Ohio, was then introduced and gave an inspiring address. He closed his remarks by urging the men to give a little time to this work as well as money.

County Secretary Donnan then made a few remarks in regard to the work, after which the meeting was then opened to the men and boys present. Several spoke of the great value of the County work, particularly in Madison. All expressed a desire to see the work advance and grow in the entire county. Several members of the County Committee from different parts of the county were present. Next Sunday afternoon a similar meeting will be held in the Baptist Church at Perry. All men of that township are urged to be present. Meeting will commence promptly at 2 o'clock.

HELD COUNTY CONVENTION

Sunday Schools Have Helpful Sessions Here Saturday.

Annual convention of the Lake County Sunday School Association was held in the Baptist church last Saturday. The attendance was small but the addresses and talks were helpful.

Among the best things on the program was the address by Mrs. Carl Yoder of Cleveland on "The Critical Teen Age." About 75 per cent of the church membership is lost between the ages of 15 and 18 and the boys and girls in their teens must be looked after if the church is to do its full duty.

Rev. J. D. Darling of the state association spoke both afternoon and evening and there were other interesting features, including the music.

Big Dance Hall for Resort

Two Clevelanders, George W. Glick and M. B. H. Johnson, dancing masters, have under construction at Geneva-on-the-Lake a new dance pavilion which they will open on completion about June 10. Geneva contractors are in charge of the work.

The pavilion is 115 feet long and eighty feet wide. The plans provide for a capacity of 150 couples on the floor, with balcony and concession space in addition. Three bowling alleys are also to be included in the structure.

RECENT DEATHS

MRS JAY MALIN BARBER

Mrs. Jay Malin Barber, aged 58 years, died suddenly of heart failure, Saturday evening, while sitting in her chair in her home on Parmly Row. A husband and two daughters, Luella Yansen Barber and Ima Belle Barber, and three sons, Hugh, Wayles and Jay Barber, are left to mourn her loss.

MRS LAVINA BARBER

Mrs. Lavina Grace Barber passed away Sunday evening at the home of her sister, Mrs. Verlie Myers, Lattimore street, after an illness of four years. Mrs. Barber was thirty years old and besides her sister leaves several other relatives.

E. S. MASTICK

E. S. Mastick, known all over Northern Ohio, as "Nick" Mastick, died Thursday noon at Grace hospital, Detroit, after an illness of three weeks. Mr. Mastick had been employed in the Studebaker automobile branch in Detroit for some time. The remains passed through Painesville Monday on the way to his former home at East Claridon where burial was made. They were accompanied by Allen Mastick, a nephew. Mr. Mastick was 67 years of age.

MRS. A. T. COLE

Mrs. Marion Antoinette Cole, widow of the late A. T. Cole of Mentor Plains, passed away at an early hour at her home, Tuesday morning. Mrs. Cole, who was sixty-five years of age, had been ill for some time. She is survived by two sons, Frank and Bert Cole, and one daughter Caroline Cole. The funeral was held from the North Mentor church at 2 o'clock, Thursday afternoon. Burial in Mentor cemetery.

Odd Bits of News

Lancaster, Mo.—J. Kelly Wright, lecturer for the state board of agriculture was here last week inspecting the elephant farm of William P. Hall, (Diamond Bill). Although not generally known, Hall has the only elephant market on this continent, and since the war, the largest in either Europe or America. He controls the elephant trade of this hemisphere.

Des Moines, Ia.—In bankruptcy proceedings here it came out that a Miss Dottie Morgan, a former resident, had for a loan of $10, pawned her body to Moses Levich, to be delivered to him after death. The woman moved to Denver and Levich has asked the court if the pledge can be counted as an asset.

Oakland, Calif.—Alex. Jacobi and his daughter Grace were motoring on a boulevard last week when a bee stung Jacobi on the face. The surprise and pain caused Jacobi to lose control of the car, which overturned and fatally injured his daughter.

Columbia, S. C.—Miss Clyde Yarborough has been awarded $3,000 damages for the loss of three inches of skin from her rosy cheek. She was thrown from a street car and sued for $10,000 damages.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Caroline Klink, only 17, of a respectable family, collected $2,375 in 30 days from friends for whom she promised to get jobs in the customs service. Her own father paid $50. She had no means of making good and she is now doing 30 days at Blackwell's Island.

Yonkers, N. Y.—Peto, a monkey, owned by Mrs. Libbie Dixon, saved her and her guests from death by fire when he dragged her down from her room on the top floor to the basement where a brisk blaze was burning.

Ford Car is Wrecked

Nine passengers proved too big a load for a Ford car driven by F. Stampfel of Cleveland and the machine turned turtle at the intersection of the Lane road with the North Ridge Sunday morning. Eight of the occupants escaped uninjured and one man named Moran was taken to the hospital suffering with a badly wrenched back.

The top of the machine and windshield were ruined, the rear wheel was crushed and the fenders and radiator badly jammed.

Entertain the School

The pupils of South Ridge school, No. 5, Perry, with their parents were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Markell at their home in Leroy last Saturday evening. About fifty were present and the evening pleasantly spent in games and music. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Death of Mrs. Seed

Mrs. Ida May Seed passed away at the residence at 323 Bank street, Tuesday night at 11:45 o'clock. A husband and three children survive. The funeral will be held from the residence at 12 o'clock Eastern time, Friday. Burial will be made in Brooklyn Heights cemetery in Cleveland, O.

MEINTANENCE OF UNIMPROVED ROADS IS PROVIDED FOR BY NEW ROAD LAW

There are approximately 60,000 miles of unimproved roads in the state. These are other than inter-county and main market roads. They mark the township lines or traverse the counties here and there but finally lead to the direct roads in the inter-county system. The state has wisely exercised its authority in the betterment of roads by providing that the inter-county highway system enacted include the main traveled routes that lead to the populous centers, cities, villages and the like. To the counties and separate townships the state has left the improvement of the greater portion of road mileage in the commonwealth. This is wise, for the state, improving the main highways which carry approximately twenty-five percent of our commerce and travel, is affording an outlet for the remaining net-work of lesser roads.

But to insure this system of roads proper treatment, and put it in a condition to be traveled nine to twelve months of the year, and at a small expense, the state has enacted what is called the "Act to Provide for the Dragging of the Public Roads of the state." This Bill drafted and urged by the Ohio Good Roads Federation was passed on April 17, 1913 and went into effect January 1, 1914.

The salient features of this law are: At the first meeting in January of the township trustees in any county, one of their number shall be designated as dragging superintendent, he shall be paid compensation not to exceed fifty dollars a year, he shall divide the graveled and earth roads of the township into dragging districts; these must be designated by separate numbers and not more than six miles of roads shall be put in any one district. The same must be recorded with the township clerk, the superintendent shall from time to time designate what districts shall be dragged, suitable road drags shall be furnished by the trustees, which shall be paid for out of township funds, the superintendent shall adopt a suitable form of notice to be given each person contracted with to drag roads, with return cards.

All claims for dragging shall be reported to the township trustees, who shall, at their meetings in June and December, pay all claims for dragging that have been approved by the superintendent; the sum shall not exceed fifty cents per mile for each mile traveled while dragging, the price for dragging shall be fixed for the year each January; a record shall be kept by the superintendent of all roads dragged; work for the year must be contracted for on or before the 15th day of February each year.

It might be stated that the law is made imperative. The language in Section 4 of the Dragging Law is as follows:

> "Any violation of any of the provisions of this act by the Dragging Superintendent, or any person or persons, who may be required under contract to drag township roads, or neglect on the part of any township trustees to set aside the funds required by this act, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not less than ten dollars for the first offense, and, for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars."

The 60,000 miles of unimproved roads in Ohio can be put in proper condition by following the law and the instructions given. If the township trustees will be as diligent in their efforts to see that the road dragging law is followed and enforced to the letter as the state is in furthering the improvement of the inter-county system, all of the unimproved roads will have been put in proper condition by the time the commonwealth has completed the improvement of the 9,300 miles in the inter-county chain.

The building of the inter-county system of highways with a hard smooth surface, and the dragging of earth roads, will place Ohio to the front in the good roads movement.

SYNOPSIS.

—3—

In the New York home of James Brood Dawes and Riggs, his two old pensioners and comrades, await the coming of Brood's son Frederic to learn the contents of a wireless from Brood, but Frederic after reading throws it into the fire and leaves the room without a word. Frederic tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancee, that the message announces his father's marriage and orders the house prepared for an immediate homecoming. Mrs. Desmond, the housekeeper and Lydia's mother, tries to cool Frederic's temper at the impending changes. Brood and his bride arrive. She wins Frederic's liking at first meeting. Brood shows dislike and veiled hostility to his son. Lydia and Mrs. Brood meet in the jade room, where Lydia works as Brood's secretary.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

Lydia flushed, she knew not why. There was a sting to the words, despite the languidness with which they were uttered.

Risking more than she suspected, she said: "He never considers the cost of a thing, Mrs. Brood, if its beauty appeals to him." Mrs. Brood gave her a quizzical, half-puzzled look. "You have only to look about you for the proof. This one room represents a fortune." The last was spoken hastily.

"How old are you, Miss Desmond?" The question came abruptly.

"I am nineteen."

"You were surprised to find me so young. Will it add to your surprise if I tell you that I am ten years older than you?"

"It doesn't seem credible."

"Are you wondering why I tell you my age?"

"Yes," said Lydia, blankly.

"In order that you may realize that I am ten years wiser than you, and that you may not again make the mistake of underestimating my intelligence."

The color faded from Lydia's face. She grew cold from head to foot. Involuntarily she moved back a pace.

...came to marry him, but—the other way 'round. It's the way with men past middle age."

Lydia hesitated before speaking. "Mr. Brood does not confide in Frederic. I am afraid they have but little in common. Oh, I shouldn't have said that!"

Mrs. Brood regarded her with narrowing eyes. "He doesn't confide in Frederic?" she repeated, in the form of a question. Her voice seemed lower than before.

"I'm sorry I spoke as I did, Mrs. Brood," said the girl, annoyed at herself.

"Is there a reason why he should dislike his son?" asked the other, regarding her fixedly.

"Of course not," cried poor Lydia.

There was a moment of silence. "Some day, Lydia, you will tell me about Mr. Brood's other wife."

"She died many years ago," said the girl, evasively.

"I know," said Mrs. Brood. "Still I should like to hear more of the woman he could not forget in all those years—until he met me."

She grew silent and preoccupied, a slight frown marking her forehead as she resumed her examination of the room and its contents.

Great lanterns hung suspended beside the shrine, but were now unlighted. On the table at which Brood professed to work stood a huge lamp with a lacelike screen of gold. When lighted a soft, mellow glow oozed through the shade to create a circle of golden brilliance over a radius that extended but little beyond the edge of the table, yet reached to the benign countenance of Buddha close by.

Over all this fairylike splendor reigned the serene, melting influence of the god to whom James Brood was wont to confess himself! The spell of the golden image dominated every thing...

"I Must See These Wonderful Things."

"You Will Not Miss Her, I am Sure."

He Was Silent for a Moment.

FARMER'S WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kasota, Minn. — "I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do." — Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplecrest Farm, Kasota, Minn.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

SOME FREAK HURLERS

Few Players Who Can Use Either Hand in Pitching.

Keenan of Youngstown Could Work Equally Well With Either Arm—Corcoran Tried to "Come Back" With Left Hand.

Followers of baseball have often heard of the fellow who could pitch a fast ball with either hand and make it curve also, but few have seen one of these pitching freaks.

Baseball history tells of a chap named Owen Keenan, who pitched for Youngstown, O., in 1885. Keenan could pitch equally well with either arm. On the Fourth of July of that season this wonder pitched two games of ball against New Castle and beat that team in both contests. He worked his left arm in the first game and used his right wing in the second contest, with the odds in favor of the right whip.

The famous Larry Corcoran of the Chicago team, in the early 80's was one of the great hurlers of the period. Larry lost the use of his wonderful right arm during the season of 1885. This almost broke his heart, for Larry was not old in years. It dawned upon him that he might make a left-handed pitcher, for he was always clever at throwing with his left, and used to practice frequently. In the season of 1886 Corcoran signed with a Southern league team as a left handed pitcher and reported for practice as such. He worked hard to gain control, for he developed rare speed. Larry pitched a few exhibition games and in one of them he kinked his remaining wing so badly that he was released, so he had to quit the game, for he had run out of pitching arms.

So the ambidextrous hurler is more or less of a myth. The pitching game is too strenuous for any kind of an arm but the good natural wing.

BIG ED WANTED MORE TIME

Pitcher Reulbach Asked Manager Chance to Call Game While He Warmed Up Behind Stand.

The famous old Cub machine had a comedian in the person of Ed Reulbach, the lanky pitcher now with the Newark Federals. One of his favorite expressions when in a facetious mood was, "I have a scheme."

Johnny Evers writes that he will never forget one of Ed's schemes. "The Cubs were in Pittsburgh one day, and it was Reulbach's turn to work," says Johnny. "He warmed up for the customary ten minutes before the game and seemed to have a lot...

INCOME TAX HITS MANY BASEBALL STARS

Eddie Collins of Chicago White Sox.

Though the government is having a tough time getting at the facts, professional ball players will pay into the internal revenue department something like $5,000 in income tax.

But for the fact that 50 per cent of the players in the American, National and Federal leagues are married and are thereby permitted to claim an exemption of $4,000 in salary, the sum exacted by the government would be considerably greater.

From the best information the experts have been able to obtain there are in the three leagues mentioned about 300 players who receive more than $3,000 a year. This really means six months, as that is the length of the contracts. What they earn during the other six months also has to be accounted for, but in most cases it is nothing.

Of these 300 there are about 200 who earn more than $4,000. There are close to 100 who draw more than $5,000 and 50 whose contracts call for amounts ranging between $6,000 and $10,000. There are less than a dozen who make more than that. The notable ones are Eddie Collins, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Walter Johnson and a few managers. McGraw is reputed to make $25,000 in salary.

The players who take part in a world's series are required to put that amount in with their salaries, which makes it certain that every man on a championship club has to pay income tax.

In making out their statements, the ball players, or the club secretaries who do the work for them, have raised an interesting question that may require a decision by the government before it can be settled with definite precision.

Instead of a reserve clause, the contracts now have one which declares that one-fourth of the salary stipulated shall be considered payment for an option on their services for the following year. For instance, a player whose contract calls for $4,000 does not get that much in actual salary. One thousand dollars of it is an option on his future services. The player, therefore, wants to know whether he shall turn in a statement saying that his salary is $4,000 or $3,000. If he puts in the latter figure is he to include the option price as a part of his income?

The married players are congratulating themselves in that they have $4,000 exempt, while the single men have to pay a tax on all they make over $3,000. Of these bachelors Tris Speaker is the hardest hit. He earns a salary of $15,000 and must pay a tax on $12,000, which amounts to $120.

"Still," says Frank Baker, "if they raise mine up to that of Eddie Collins I'll be perfectly willing to split with Uncle Sam."

GRAY MARE CAUSED TROUBLE

Umpire at Ball Game Tells Fans Cause of Commotion and the Game Is Proceeded With.

Jack Holland of the St. Joseph Western league club tells this story:

One afternoon last summer when the Omaha and Sioux City teams of the Western league were indulging in a hot battle a commotion occurred at one end of the grand stand in the first named city. The several hundred fans rushed through the aisles of the stands, every one craning his neck over another's shoulder in an attempt to discern the cause of the trouble.

Finally the umpire held up his hands as a signal for the contest to halt; then, removing his mask and donning his hat he approached the stands. In a loud voice he cried:

"Ladies and men." A hush fell.

The umpire cleared his throat, then proceeded with the announcement:

"I want to say to the owner of that gray mare that she's down and can't get up. Thank you. Play ball."

And the game was continued.

HONEY ON THE FARM

Honey is looked upon too often as a luxury. It is true that honey, in possible cases money is a luxury in that it takes the place of jam and jelly. In Europe, however, honey is a household article and is used to considerable extent to replace sugar. The claim is made that it is a comparatively simple matter to substitute honey for sugar in instances in many recipes and that the resulting flavor is often novel and pleasing. Long made with honey instead of sugar will keep soft and fresh for months, and cakes, especially those in which butter is not used, have been kept fresh for several months.

The United States Department of Agriculture has made a rather extensive investigation concerning the uses of honey and have published Farmers' Bulletin 251, "Honey and Its Uses in the Home," which may be secured for the asking. This bulletin not only contains much general information concerning honey in its forms, method of making, and keeping, but has many recipes in which it constitutes an important ingredient.

Comb honey is gramically certain to be pure because the processes by which it is substituted cost more than they will save. Formerly there was a very prevalent idea that adulterated honey, that is, honey removed from the comb was often adulterated, however, recent legislation regarding adulterating food materials has been such that very little, if any, adulterated honey finds its way to market.

It is not necessary, however, for farmers to depend on keeping honey because every farm should have the complement of from one to a half dozen hives of bees.

THE BARREL

Beginning next year the standard barrel will contain 7056 cubic inches, and this will apply to all commodities except cranberries.

Heretofore, the man who bought a barrel of anything could have no accurate conception of the size or the amount the barrel would hold, except as he might guess from having seen it at the time of purchase. He had to come to expect that his barrel of apples, if bought, would not be of the sugar-barrel size; and if he sold, he knew. Beyond that, it was a guess. And it has been about the same with producers, retailers and consumers the country over. There has been no standardization that was followed, though the act of congress said what was the contents of a standard barrel in cubic inches. As a matter of fact, the size of the barrel has varied about as much as the contents, and to the consequent misunderstandings and misinnery there has been no limit.

"Time was (says, quoted by President Wilson just at the close of the last session of Congress, attracted little attention at the time, but its importance promises to be far-reaching, contributing to conspiracy beauty perhaps quite as much as to standardization, and perhaps helping to simplify the practice of buying by the barrel.

Warnings to Movies, if they do not make any impression the first time, can be easily repeated. The supply of warnings is inexhaustible and can be drawn on by Democrats and Republican administrations without fear of exhaustion.

If the Smithsonian Institute ever intends to make a collection of American Bluff Show, it had better get busy and before none of the State Legislatures adopts the idea of compelling members to chip, under oath, how large a bunch of bluff they carry.

The new Mayor of Chicago, who takes office following a big prosperity parade, can do his part toward giving that city real prosperity by furnishing it with a decent and effective administration. That is something Chicago rarely gets from its municipal politicians.

Kansas is modest about her claims for this year's wheat crop. Having harvested 100,000,000 bushels last year, she does not claim 100,000,000 this year, which is the biggest crop harvested with the exception of that last year. This agrees with the estimate of the Department of Agriculture, which puts the crop for the whole country at 800,000,000 bushels, or 100,000,000 less than last year. The wheat crop has some historic to its before it is harvested.

POSSESSED SENSE OF HUMOR

Proof That the Fairest Dame of Wellington Could Relate at Occasions.

Wellington is usually credited with possessing a sense of humor, but it is being answered a fact according to an English paper, as follows:

Lady Wellington, who died, is said to play about under the north neck of the chandelier, and Wellington's wife, and before it was purchased for the church had been the property of Lord Mornington, the professor of music in Dublin University, and of the Reverend Maurice Arthur Wellesley, afterwards Dean of Ardfert, who, when a little boy, used to stand on a chair and throw the organ to the east end, one of the church sextons, by name Stephen Reed, an excellent man, gifted with a wonderful (unfortunately) strain of epistolary unemployment. Accordingly, he used to write to the Duke of Wellington, in the hope of getting a substantial consideration, and, knowing that the church had once belonged to his immortal brother, he added that "Lady Wellington's favorite flowers were left-handed roses." Wellington, who was a Tory, replied that "Lady Wellington's favorite flowers were left-handed roses." Reed, who was not to be baffled, wrote back

Federal Board of Arbitration Has Been Considering Demands of Engineers, Firemen and Hostlers for Many Months.

Chicago, Ill.—The federal board of arbitration which for many months has been considering the demands of 64,000 engineers, firemen and hostlers on 98 railroads in the west, Friday made public an award which includes an advance in wages of approximately 25 per cent of the raise asked.

Two members of the arbitration board dissented from the opinion.

Although the men see partial victory in the award, it was said here the decision is far from satisfactory. Railroads are said to be pleased by the arbitrators' award.

The award includes several reforms affecting hours and working conditions.

The controversy concerning wages and overtime allowances originally began in October, 1913. After federal arbitration had been decided upon more than three months were consumed in taking testimony. The arbitrators have been considering the evidence since April 3.

Railroads affected by the decision include virtually every line in the United States west of Chicago, also the Illinois Central road. In Canada ...

The Domestic Diplomat.

"So you have given your wife your word that you will favor votes for women?"

"Yes," replied the man who dislikes argument.

"What are your reasons for doing so?"

"It's cheaper. If I say I'm not in favor of votes for women it's liable to hurt my wife's feelings so that it will take as much as a diamond necklace to enable me to square myself."

WOULD SAVE OHIO BORROWERS CASH

New Lloyd Bill Regulates the General Business of Loaning in Ohio.

ESTIMATES ARE MADE BY EXPERTS

Savants Say Poorer Classes Who Have No Credit at Bank and Have Been Victims of Sharks Will Be Benefited.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

EXPERTS who have studied the question of salary and chattel loans are estimating that the new Lloyd bill regulating the business of loaning will save to Ohio borrowers the sum of $2,000,000 annually. The saving say the savants, will result from the strict nature of the regulation which is imposed on all persons who make it a business to charge interest for money given on salary and chattel security. Up to this time there has been no restriction upon interest charges against the poorer class of the people who had no credit in bank, and statistics show that this class of persons comprise 85 per cent of all the people in the state. They became thus an easy prey for the unscrupulous type of loan shark, who often assessed them the principal of their loan many times over in the form of usurious interest. There are figures showing that at least $12,000,000 are borrowed in Ohio every year by wage earners and others who cannot procure loans in bank and there are figures also showing that the loan agents have been in the habit every year of extorting from this class of ...

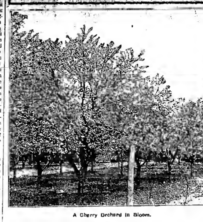
Tax Commission Starts Probe.

The state tax commission has started an investigation to determine the cause of alarming decreases in personal property returns in various counties of the state. These decreases range from 3 to 33⅓ per cent in different townships of groups of counties. An examination of tax returns and inquiries made of the local and district assessors indicate that there has been very complete appraisals made, and that a vast number are ludicrously below what they should be. There are whole counties in which hardly a dollar has been returned on household effects. Building and loan association stock is subject to taxation, but little of it is being returned. It is in the most prosperous communities that the tax evasion is most prevalent. The tax commission will instruct the district assessors to "jack up" the local assessors where the returns are showing heavy shrinkages. Unless this is done the grand duplicate for the state will show a big decrease from that of last year and the effect of this will be to increase taxes.

Oppose Legislative Lobbyists.

The county school superintendents of the state intend to try to break up the practice of professional legislative lobbyists from "holding up" teachers at county institutes for money for the maintenance of lobbyists at Columbus during each legislative session. These superintendents have decided to oppose with vigor efforts to extort money in this way from teachers at these institute gatherings. In the past interested persons have been able, by bringing to bear proper pressure to separate the teachers from enough money to maintain a nice berth at good pay at Columbus for at least one person all the time, and to pay for the expenses of several others to Columbus at different periods under the guise of getting laws passed for the benefit of the teachers. Keen observers thus far have been unable to de...

USUAL METHOD OF PROPAGATING CHERRY



A Cherry Orchard in Bloom.

The common method of propagating the cherry is by budding one-year-old seedlings. The two commercial stocks most commonly used are the Mahaleb and Mazzard. The first is a native of southern Europe and the latter a strong variety of the sweet cherry of eastern Europe and western Asia. It is not sufficiently hardy for severely cold sections.

... sun scald and the fruit can be gathered by standing on the ground.

Cherry trees are quite free from insects, the most serious being the plum curculio, which is the cause of the so-called wormy fruit, but this seldom becomes so troublesome on the sour cherries that it requires treatment.

Spraying with lead arsenate or paris green just after the blossoms fall will ...
